With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;—

[Breaking in.

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;

And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say.

Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;

Cassar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:

Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him;

Say, I fear'd Caesar, honour'd him, and lov'd him.

If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony

May safely come to him, and be resolv'd

How Caesar hath deserv'd to lie in death,

Mark Antony shall not love Caesar dead

So well as Brutus living; but will follow

The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus,

Thorough the hazards of this unbrid state,

With all true faith. So says my master Antony. [Rising.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman:

I never thought him worse.

Tell him, so please him come unto this place,

He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,

Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit Servant.

Bru. I know, that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish, we may; but yet have I a mind,

That fears him much, and my misgiving still

Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Enter ANTONY.

Ant. O mighty Caesar! dost thou lie so low?

[Kneeling over the Body.

Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,

Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.—

I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, —[Rising.

Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:

If I myself, there is no hour so fit

As Caesar's death hour; nor no instrument

Of half that worth, as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world.

I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,

Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,

I shall not find myself so apt to die;

No place will please me so, no mean of death,

As here by Caesar, and by you cut off,

The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.

Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,

As, by our hands, and this our present act,

You see we do, yet see you but our hands,

And this the bleeding business they have done.

Our hearts you see not: they are pitiful;

And pity to the general wrong of Rome

(As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity)

Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part,

To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony:

Our arms, in strength of welcome, and our hearts,

Of brothers' temper, do receive you in

With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's,

In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient, till we have appeas'd

The multitude, beside themselves with fear,

And then we will deliver you the cause,

Why I, that did love Caesar when I struck him,

Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.

Let each man render me his bloody hand:

[One after the other.

First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;—

Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand:—

Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—now yours, Metellus;—

Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Cassar, yours:—

Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.

Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say? —

Not in f. e.
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward, or a flatterer.—
That I did love thee, Caesar! O, 'tis true:
[Turning to the Body, and bending over it.]
If, then, thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy core? —
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart;
Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy death.
O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world! the heart of thee—
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie?
Cas. Mark Antony!
Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Caesar shall say this;
Then, in a friend it is cold modesty.
Cas. I blame you not for praising Caesar so,
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?
Ant. Therefore I took your hands: but was, indeed,
Sway'd from the point by looking down on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons,
Why, and wherein, Caesar was dangerous.
Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard,
That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.
Ant. That's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor, that I may
Produce his body to the market-place;
And that in public, becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.
Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.
Cas. Brutus, a word with you.
You know not what you do: do not consent.
Antony speak in his funeral.
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter?
Bru. My pardon;
I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Caesar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission;
And that we are unseem'd, Caesar shall
Have all due rites, and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more, than do us wrong.
Cas. I know not what may fall: I like it not.
Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Caesar's body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Caesar;
And say, you don't by our permission,
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: and you shall speak
In the same pulpit where I am going,
After my speech is ended.
Ant. I desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body, then, and follow us.

ACT III.

Ant. O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers.
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man,
That ever liv'd in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy.
(Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue)
A curse shall light upon the loins of men;
Domestic fury, and fierce civil strife,
Shall compass all the parts of Italy:
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war,
All pity check'd with custom of fell deeds;
And Caesar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Até by his side, come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice,
Cry "Havock!" and let slip the dogs of war,
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.
You serve Octavius, Caesar, do you not?
Serv. I do, Mark Antony.
Ant. Caesar did write for him to come to Rome.
Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming,
And bid me say to you by word of mouth,
O Caesar! [Seeing the Body.] Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.
Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?
Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.
Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd.
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet:
He hence, and tell him so. Yet, stay a while;
Thou shall not back, till I have borne this corpse
Into the market-place; and having tried
In my oration, how the people take
The crenel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand. — [Exit, with Caesar's Body.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a throng of Citizens.
Cit. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.
Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.—
Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.
This word must first be heard, which I am to speak,
Let them stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Caesar's death.
1 Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.
2 Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.
Bru. Exit Cassius, with some of the Citizens.
Brutus goes into the Rostrum.
3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended. Silence! Brutus, be patient till the last.
Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent that you may hear: believe me to mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that
The good is oft interred with their bones:
So let it be with Caesar. The noble Brutus
Hath told you, Caesar was ambitious:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault;
And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it,
Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,
(For Brutus is an honourable man,
So are they all, all honourable men)
Come I to speak in Caesar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
But Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:
Did this in Caesar seem ambitious?
When that the poor have cried, Caesar hath wept;
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
You all did see, that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown,
Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?
Yet Brutus says he was ambitious;
And, sure, he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once, not without cause:
What cause withholds you, then, to mourn for him?
O judgment! thou art bred to thistle beasts,
And men have lost their reason.—Bear with me;
My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar;
And I must pause till it come back to me.

1. Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.
2. Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Caesar has had great wrong.
3. Cit. Has he, masters?
I fear, there will a worse come in his place.
4. Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown:
Therefore, 't is certain, he was not ambitious.
1. Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.
2. Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.
3. Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.
4. Cit. Now mark him; he begins again to speak.
Ant. But yesterday the word of Caesar might
Have stood against the world: now, lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
Who, you all know, are honourable men.
I will not do them wrong: I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men.
But here's a parchment with the seal of Caesar;
I found it in his closet, 't is his will:
Let but the commons hear this testament,
(Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read)
And they would go and kiss dead Caesar's wounds,
And dip their napkins in his sacred blood;
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it, as a rich legacy,
Unto their issue.

4. Cit. We'll hear the will. Read it, Mark Antony.
All. The will, the will! we will hear Caesar's will.
Ant. Have patience, gentle friends; I must not read it:
JULIUS CAESAR.

ACT III.

It is not meet you know how Caesar lov’d you.
You are not wood, you are not stones, but men,
And, being men, hearing the will of Caesar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad.
’T is good you know not that you are his heirs;
For if you should, O! what would come of it?
4 Cit. Read the will! we’ll hear it, Antony.
You shall read us the will: Caesar’s will.
Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay a while?
I have o’er-shot myself to tell you of it.
I fear, I wrong the honest men,
Whose daggers have stabb’d Caesar: I do fear it.
4 Cit. They were traitors: honourable men.
All. The will! the testament!
2 Cit. They were villains, murderers. The will!
read the will.
Ant. You will compell me, then, to read the will?
Then, make a ring about the corpse of Caesar,
And let me show you him that made the will.
Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?
All. Come down.
2 Cit. Descend.
3 Cit. You shall have leave.
4 Cit. Antony! stand round.
1 Cit. Stand from the hearse; stand from the body.
2 Cit. Room for Antony;—most noble Antony!
Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.
All. Stand back! room! bear back!
Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this mantle: I remember
The first time ever Caesar put it on;
’T was on a summer’s evening, in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii.
Look! in this place, ran Cassius’ dagger through:
See, what a rent the envious Cassius made:
Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb’d;
And as he pluck’d his cursed steel away,
Mark how the blood of Caesar follow’d it,
As rushing out of doors, to be resolved.
If Brutus so unkindly knock’d, or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Caesar’s angel:
Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar lov’d him!
This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Caesar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors’ arms,
Quite vanquish’d him: then burst his mighty heart;
And in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey’s statue,
Which all the while ran blood, great Caesar fell.
O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourisht’d over us.
O! now you weep: and, I perceive, you feel
The dint of pity: these are gracious drops.
Kind souls! what! weep you, when you but behold
Our Caesar’s vesture wounded? Look you here,
Here is himself, marr’d, as you see, with traitors.
1 Cit. O pitieous spectacle!
2 Cit. O noble Caesar!
3 Cit. O woful day!
4 Cit. O traitors! villains!
1 Cit. O most bloody sight!
All. We will be revenged. Revenge! about—seek;
and when you find him,—let not a traitor live.
Ant. Stay, countrymen. [They are rushing out.
1 Cit. Peace there! hear the noble Antony.
2 Cit. We’ll hear him, we’ll follow him, we’ll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up.
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They that have done this deed are honourable:
What private griefs they have, alas! I know not,
That made them do it; they are wise and honourable,
And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:
I am no orator, as Brutus is,
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That has no notes, and that they know full well
That gave me public leave to speak of him.
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech.
To stir men’s blood: I only speak right on;
I tell you that, which you yourselves do know,
Show you sweet Caesar’s wounds, poor, poor dumb mouths,
And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Caesar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.
All. We’ll mutiny.
1 Cit. We’ll burn the house of Brutus.
3 Cit. Away then! come, seek the conspirators.
Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.
All. Peace, ho! Hear Antony; most noble Antony.
Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what.
Wherein hath Caesar thus deserv’d your loves?
Alas! you know not—I must tell you, then.
You have forgot the will I told you of.
All. Most true;—the will:—let’s stay, and hear the will.
Ant. Here is the will, and under Caesar’s seal.
To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.
2 Cit. Most noble Caesar—we’ll revenge his death.
3 Cit. O royal Caesar!
Ant. Hear me with patience.
All. Peace, ho!
Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
His private arbours, and new-planted orchards,
On this side Tyber: he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,
To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Caesar: when comes such another?
1 Cit. Never, never!—Come, away, away!
We’ll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors’ houses.
Take up the body.
1 Cit. Go, fetch fire.
3 Cit. Pluck down boughs.
4 Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.
[Exeunt Citizens, with the Body.
Ant. Now let it work. Mischief thou art afoot,
Take thou what course thou wilt.—How now, fellow?
Enter a Servant.
Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.
Ant. Where is he?
Serv. He and Lepidus are at Caesar’s house.
Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him.
He comes upon a wish: Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give us any thing.
Serv. What will they say, Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.
Ant. Belike, they had some notice of the people,
How I had mov’d them. Bring me to Octavius. [Exeunt.
JULIUS CAESAR.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Cinna, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night, that I did feast with Caesar,
And things unlikely charge my fancy.
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

1. Cit. What is your name?
2. Cit. Whither are you going?
3. Cit. Where do you dwell?
4. Cit. Are you a married man, or a bachelor?
2. Cit. Answer every man directly.
1. Cit. Ay, and briefly.
4. Cit. Ay, and wisely.
3. Cit. Ay, and truly; you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going?
Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor?
Then, to answer every man directly, and briefly, wisely, and truly, wisely I say, I am a bachelor.
2. Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry:—you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed: directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Caesar's funeral.
1. Cit. As a friend, or an enemy?
2. Cit. As a friend.
2. Cit. That matter is answered directly.
4. Cit. For your dwelling.—briefer.
Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.
3. Cit. Your name, sir, truly.

Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.
1. Cit. Tear him to pieces: he's a conspirator.
2. Cit. I am Cinna, the poet; I am Cinna, the poet.
4. Cit. Tear him for his bad verses; tear him for his bad verses.
Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.
2. Cit. It is no matter; his name's Cinna: pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.
3. Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come! brands, ho! fire-brands! To Brutus, to Cassius; burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Cassius's; some to Ligarius. Away! go! [Exit, forcing out Cinna.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in Antony's House.

ANTONY, OCTavius, and LEPIDUS, seated at a Table.

Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are pricked.

Ct. Your brother, too, must die: consent you, Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live.
Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar's house;
Fetch the will hither, and we will determine
How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What, shall I find you here?

Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol. [Exit LEPIDUS.

Ant. This is a slight, unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit,
The threefold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be pricked to die
In our black sentence and proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you:
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads,
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven, as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze on commons.

Oct. You may do your will;
But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender;
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on,
His corporal motion governed by my spirit.

1 unlikely: in f. e. 2 the rest of this direction is not in f. e. 3 so the folio, 1632; first folio gives the line: Our best friends made, our means stretch'd.
But not with such familiar instances, Nor with such free and friendly conference, As he hath used of old.

Brutus. Thou hast describ'd A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius, When love begins to sicken and decay, It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith; But hollow men, like Cassius, not at hand, Make brilliant show and promise of their mettle, But when they should endure the bloody spur, They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades, Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?
Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:
The greater part, the horse in general, Are come with Cassius.  [March within.

Brutus. Hark! he is arriv'd. —
March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!
Brut. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.
Within. Stand.
Within. Stand.  [One after the other, and fainter. Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.
Brut. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?
Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;
And when you do them —

Brutus. Cassius, be content; Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well. Before the eyes of both our armies here, Which should perceive nothing but love from us, Let us not wrangle: bid them move away; Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs, And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus, Bid our commanders lead their charges off A little from this ground.
Brut. Lucilius, do you the like; and let no man Come to our tent, till we have done our conference. Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.  [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Within the Tent of Brutus.

Lucius and Titinius at some distance from it.

Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this: You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella For taking bribes here of the Sardians; Wherein my letters, praying on this side, Because I knew the man, were slighted off.
Brut. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.
Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet That every nice offence should bear his comment.
Brut. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm; To sell and mart your offices for gold To undeserving.

Cas. I am an itching palm? You know that you are Brutus that speak this, Or by the gods this speech were else your last.
Brutus. The name of Cassius honours this corruption, And chaste opinion does therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement! Brutus. Remember March, the ide of March remember. Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake? What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, And not for justice? What! shall one of us,
Enter Lucilius and Titiarius.

Bru. Lucilius and Titiarius, bid the commanders
Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.
Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you,
Immediately to us. [Exit Lucilius and Titiarius.

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine.

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.
Bru. O Cassius! I am sick of many griefs.
Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.
Bru. No man bears sorrow better.—Portia is dead.
Cas. Ha! Portia? Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How soon! I killing, when I cross'd you so?—
O, insupportable and touching loss!—
Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong—for with her death
That tidings came.—With this she fell distinct,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.
Cas. And died so?
Bru. Even so.
Cas. O, ye immortal gods!

Enter Lucius, with Wine and Tasters.

Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine:
In that I weary all unkindness. Cassius. [Drinks.
Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.—
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erawell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.

Re-enter Titiarius, with Messala.

Bru. Come in, Titiarius.—Welcome, good Messala.
Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.
Cas. Portia, art thou gone?
Bru. No more, I pray you.—
Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius, and Mark Antony,
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi.
Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.
Bru. With what additions?
Mes. That by proscription, and bills of outlawry,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.
Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;
Mine speak of seventy senators, that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.
Cas. Cicero one?
Mes. Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription.—
Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?
Bru. No, Messala.
Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?
Mes. That, methinks, is strange.
Bru. Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours?
Mes. No, my lord.
Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.
Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.
Bru. Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die, Messala;—
With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.
Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.
Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,
But yet my nature could not bear it so.
Bru. Well, to our work alive.—What do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Cas. This it is.

'Tis better, that the enemy seek us:
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people, 'twixt Caesar and this ground,
Do stand but in a fore'd affrontment.
For they have grudg'd us contribution:
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-hearted, and encourag'd;
From which advantage shall we cut him off,
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon. You must note beside,
That we have tried the utmost of our friends;
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is rife:
The enemy increaseth every day;
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There's a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat,
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on:
We will along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night has crept upon our talk,
And nature must obey necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?

Cas. No more.—Good night:
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius, my gown. [Exit Lucius.—Farewell, good Messo]—

Good night, Titinius.—Noble, noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O! my dear brother,
This was an ill beginning of the night.
Never come such division 'twixt our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mes. Good night, lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one. [Exit Cas. Tit. and Mes.

Re-enter Lucius, with the Gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What! thou speak'st drowsily?
Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'er-watch'd.
Call Claudius, and some other of my men; I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Claudius!

Enter Varro and Claudius.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent, and sleep: It may be, I shall raise you by and by.
On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand, and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so; lie down, good sirs:

It may be, I shall otherwise bethink me.

Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;
I put it in the pocket of my gown. [Servants lie down.

Luc. I was sure, your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.
Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru. It does, my boy.

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might:
I know, young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again;
I will not hold thee long; if I do live,
I will be good to thee. [Music, and a Song.
This is a sleepy tune.—O murderous slumber!

Lucius falls asleep.

Luc. Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,
That plays thee music?—Gentle knave, good night;
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument:
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.—
Let me see, let me see: is not the leaf turn'd down,
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

[He sits down to read.]

Enter the Ghost of Cæsar.

How ill this taper burns.—Ha! who comes here?
I think, it is the weakness of mine eyes.
That shapes this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me.—Art thou any thing?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?
Speak to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee, thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well; then I shall see thee again?

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then——
Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest! Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.—Boy! Lucius!—Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!—

Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks, he still is at his instrument.—

Lucius, awake!

Luc. My lord.

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see any thing?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius.—Sirrah, Claudius! Fellow thou: awake!

Var. My lord.

Claud. My lord.

Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var. Claud. Did we, my lord?

Bru. Ay: saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother Cassius:
Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.

Var. Claud. It shall be done, my lord. [Exeunt.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered. You said, the enemy would not come down, But keep the hills and upper regions; It proves not so: their battles are at hand; They mean to warm us at Philippi here, Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut! I am in their bosoms, and I know Wherefore they do it; they could be content To visit other places; and come down With fearful bravery, thinking by this face To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage; But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals; The enemy comes on in gallant show: Their bloody sign of battle is hung out, And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on, Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep then the left. Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent? Oct. I do not cross you; but I will so do. [March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army; Lucilius, Titinius, Messala, and others.

Brut. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk. Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge. Make forth: the generals would have some words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Brut. Words before blows; is it so, countrymen?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do. Brut. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart, Crying, "Long live! hail, Caesar!"

Cas. The posture of your blows is yet unknown; But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees, And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless, too.

Brut. O! yes, and soundless too;

For you have stolen their buzzing, Antony, And very wisely threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar:

You show'd your teeth like spee, and faw'd like hounds;

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;

While damned Casea, like a cur, behind

Struck Caesar on the neck. O, you flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers!—Now, Brutus, thank yourself: This tongue had not offended so to day, If Cassius might have run'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.

Look; I draw sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?—

Never, till Caesar's three and thirty wounds 1

Be well aveng'd; or till another Caesar

Have added slaughter to the word of traitor; 2

Bru. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands, Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope:

I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O! if thou wert the noblest of thy strain, Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable.

Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour, Join'd with a masker and a reveller.

Ant. Old Cassius still.

Oct. Come, Antony; away!—

Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth.

If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;

If not, when you have stomachs.

[Exeunt Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Cas. Why now, blow wind, swell sillow, and swim bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Bru. Ho, Lucilius! hark, a word with you.

Luc. My lord. [Brutus and Lucilius talk apart.

Cas. Messala!

Mess. What says the general?

Cas. This is my birth-day: as this very day Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:

Be thou my witness, that against my will, As Pompey was, am I compelled to set Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know, that I held Epicurus strong, And his opinion: now, I change my mind, And partly credit things that do presage.

Coming from Sardis, on our forward' ensign Two mighty eagles fell: and there they perch'd, Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands; Who to Philippi here consorted us:

This morning are they fled away, and gone, And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites, Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us, As we were silently prey: their shadows seem A canopy most fatal, under which

Our army lies ready to give up the ghost.

Mess. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly, For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd To meet all perils very constantly.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius. [Lucilius stands back.

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,

The gods to-day stand friendly! that we may, Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age: But since the affairs of men rest still uncertain, Let's reason with the worst that may befal. If we do lose this battle, then is this

The very last time we shall speak together:

What are you then determined to do?

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy, By which I did blame Cato for the death Which he did give himself. I know not how, But I do find it cowardly and vile, For fear of what might fall, so to prevent The term of life, arming myself with patience, To stay the providence of those high powers, That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
SCENE II.—The Same. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Brutus. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills Unto the legions on the other side. [Loud Alarum.

Let them set on at once; for I perceive But cold demeanour in Octavius’ wing; And sudden push gives them the overthrow. Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter Cassius and Titiunus.

Cassius. O, look, Titiunus, look! the villains fly. Myself have to mine own turn’d enemy: This ensign here of mine was turning back; I slew the coward, and did take it from him. Titinius. O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early; Who having some advantage on Octavius, Took it too eagerly; his soldiers fell to spoil, Whilst we by Antony are all enclos’d.

Enter Pindarus.

Pindarus. Fly farther off, my lord, fly farther off; Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord: Fly, there comes a noble Cassius far off. Cassius. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titiunus; Are those my tents where I perceive the fire? Titinius. They are, my lord.

Cassius. Titiunus, if thou lov’st me, Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him, Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops, And here again; that I may rest assur’d, Whether yond’ troops are friend or enemy. Tit Innus. I will be here again, even with a thought. [Exit. Cassius. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill: My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius, And tell me what thou not’st about the field. [Exit Pindarus.

This day I breathed first: time is come round, And where I did begin, there shall I end: My life is run his compass.—Sirrah, what news? Pindarus. [Above.] O my lord! Cassius. What news? Pindarus. Titiunus is enclosed round about With horsemen, that make to him on the spur;— Yet he spurs on:—now they are almost on him. Now, Titiunus!—now some light:—O! he lights too: He’s tu’en: and, hark! [Shout.] they shout for joy. Cassius. Come down; behold no more.—O, coward that I am, to live so long, To see my best friend tu’en before my face! Enter Pindarus.

Cassius. Come hither, sirrah. In Parthia did I take thee prisoner; That ever Brutus will go bond to Rome; He bears too great a mind: but this same day Must end that work the ideas of March began, And whether we shall meet again, I know not. Therefore, our everlasting farewell take:— For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius. If we do meet again, why we shall smile; If not, why then, this parting was well made. Cassius. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus. If we do meet again, we’ll smile indeed; If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made. Brutus. Why then, lead on.—O, that a man might know The end of this day’s business, ere it come! But it sufficeth, that the day will end, And then the end is known.—Come, he! away! [Exeunt.

Enter Pindarus.

Pindarus. Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men The things that are not? O error! soon conceiv’d, Thou never com’st unto a happy birth, But kill’st the mother that engender’d thee.

Titinius. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus? Cassius. Seek him, Titiunus, whilst I go to meet The noble Brutus, thrusting this report Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it; For piercing steel, and darts envenom’d, Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus, As tidings of this sight.

Titinius. Hie you, Messala, And I will seek for Pindarus the while. [Exit Messala. Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius? Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory, And bid me give it thee? Didst not thou hear their shouts?— Alas! thou hast misconstrued every thing. But hold thee; take this garland on thy brow: By your leave, gods:—This is a Roman’s part: Come, Cassius’ sword, and find Titinius’ heart. [Dies. Alarum. Re-enter Messala, with Brutus, young Caton, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius. Brutus. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? Cassius. Lo! yonder; and Titinius mounting it. Brutus. Titinius’ face is upward.

Caton. He is slain. Brutus. O Julius Caesar! thou art mighty yet: Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords In our own proper entrails. [Low Alarums SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.
Alarum. Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then Brutus, Cassius, Lucilius, and others.

Brut. Yet, countrymen, O! yet hold up your heads. Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me? I will proclaim my name about the field. I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend. I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! Charges the Enemy. Brut. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I; Brutus, my country's friend: know me for Brutus.

[Exit, charging the Enemy. Cato is overpowered, and falls.

Luc. O, young and noble Cato! art thou down? Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius, and may'st be honour'd being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Luc. Only I yield to die: there is so much that thou wilt kill me straight.

[Offering money.

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

1 Sold. We must not.—A noble prisoner! 2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en. 1 Sold. I'll tell the news:—Here comes the general.

Enter Antony. Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough. I dare assure thee, that no enemy shall ever take alive the noble Brutus: the gods defend him from so great a shame! When you do find him, or alive, or dead, he will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you, a prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe, give him all kindness: I had rather have such men my friends, than enemies. Go on, and see who's Brutus be alive, or dead; and bring us word unto Octavius' tent, how every thing is change'd.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Brut. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock. Clit. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord, he came not back: he is or ta'en, or slain.

Brut. Sit thee down, Clitus; slaying is the word; it is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.—

[Whispering.

Clit. What! I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Brut. Peace then: no words.

1 Not in f. e.

Clit. What ill request did Brutus make to thee? Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates. Clitus. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, that it runs over even at his eyes.

Brut. Come hither, good Volumnius: list a word. Vol. What says my lord?

Brut. Why, this, Volumnius. The ghost of Cesar hath appear'd to me. Two several times by night: at Sardis once; and, this last night, here in Philippi's fields. I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Brut. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius. Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes; our enemies have beat us to the pit: [Low Alarums. It is more worthy to leap in ourselves, than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius, thou know'st that we two went to school together; even for that our love of old, I pray thee, hold thou my sword-hilts whilst I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.

[Alarum still.

Clit. Fly, fly, my lord! there is no tarrying here.

Brut. Farewell to you;—and you;—and you, Volumnius. [Shaking hands severally.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countrymen, my heart doth joy, that yet in all my life I found no man, but he was true to me. I shall have glory by this losing day; more than Octavius, and Mark Antony; by this vile conquest shall attendant. So, fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue hath almost ended his life's history. Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest, that have but labour'd to attain this hour.

[Alarum. Cry within; Fly, fly, fly!

Clit. Fly, my lord, fly!

Brut. Hence: I will follow.

[Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.

I pray thee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord. Thou art a fellow of a good respect; thy life hath had some snatch of honour in it: hold, then, my sword, and turn away thy face, while I do run upon it. Will thou, Strato?

Strato. Give me your hand first: fare you well, my lord.

Brut. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now be still: I 'lkill not thee with half so good a will.

[He runs on his Sword, and dies.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man.—Strato, where is thy master?

Strato. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala: the conquerors can but make a fire of him; for Brutus only overcame himself, and no man else hath honour by his death.

Luc. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee, Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus I will entertain them.

Fellow, wilt thou be here thy time with me?

Strato. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, good Messala.
Mes. How died my master, Strato?
Str. I held the sword, and he did run on it.
Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.
Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all:
All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Caesar;
He, only, in a generous, honest thought
Of common good to all, made one of them.

His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world, "This was a man!"
Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,
With all respect, and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.—
So, call the field to rest; and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day.  [Exeunt.

LADY MACBETH.
LADY MACDUFF.
Gentlewoman attending Lady Macbeth. HECATE, and Witches.

The Ghost of Banquo, and other Apparitions.

SCENE, in the end of the fourth Act, in England; through the rest of the Play, in Scotland.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An open Place.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again,
In thunder, lightning, or rain?—
2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.—
3 Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.
1 Witch. Where the place?—
2 Witch. Upon the heath:—
3 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.—
1 Witch. I come, Graymalkin!—

All. Paddock calls:—Anon.—
Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
Hover through the fog and filthy air. [Witches vanish.

SCENE II.—A Camp near Forees.

Sennet within. Enter King DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant,
Who, like a good and wary soldièr, fought
Gainst my captivity.—Hail, brave friend!—
Say to the king thy knowledge of the broil,
As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtful it stood;
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald (Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
The multiplying villainies of nature
Do swarm upon him) from the western isles

Of Kernes and Gallowglasses is supplied;
And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak;
For brave Macbeth (well he deserves that name)
Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion, carv'd out his passage,
Till he fae'd the slave;
Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O, vaillant cousin! Worthy gentleman!
Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflexion
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break,
So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark:
No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heels,
But the Norwegian lord, surveying vantage,
With furnish'd arms, and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?
Sold. Yes;—
As sparrow eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;
So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell.—
But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.
Dun. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds:

They smock of honour both.—Go, get him surgeons.
[Exit Soldier, attended.

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Who comes here?

Mai.  The worthy thane of Rosse.
Len.  What haste looks through his eyes!
So should he look, that comes to speak things strange.
Rosse.  God save the king!

Dun.  Whence cam’st thou, worthy thane?
Rosse.  From Fife, great king;
Where the Norwegian banners fly the sky
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,
The thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict;
Till that Bellona’s bridegroom, lapp’d in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point, rebellious arm against arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us—

Dun.  Great happiness!
Rosse.  That now
Sweno, the Norway’s king, craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men,
Till he disbursed at Saint Colme’s Inch
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun.  The name of Cawdor shall deceive
Our bosom interest.—Go, pronounce his present death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.
Rosse.  I’ll see it done.

Dun.  What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Heath.

Thunder.  Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch.  Where hast thou been, sister?
3 Witch.  Sister, where thou?
1 Witch.  A sailor’s wife had chestnuts in her lap,
And mounch’d, and mounch’d, and mounch’d: “Give me,” quoth I.—
“Aroin thee, witch!” the rump-fed bonyron cries.
Her husband’s to Aleppo gone, master o’ the Tiger:
But in a sieve I’ll thither sail,
And, like a rat without a tail,
I’ll do, I’ll do, and I’ll do.
2 Witch.  I’ll give thee a wind.
1 Witch.  Thou art kind.
3 Witch.  And I another.
1 Witch.  I myself have all the other;
And the very ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know
I’ll draw; the shipman’s card to show;
I’ll drain him dry as hay:
Sleep shall, neither night nor day,
Hang upon his pent-house lid;
He shall live a man forbid.
Weary sev’n-nights, nine times nine,
Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine—
Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-toss’d.  —
Look what I have.
2 Witch.  Show me, show me.
1 Witch.  Here I have a pilot’s thumb,
Wreck’d as homeward he did come.  [Drum within.
3 Witch.  A drum; a drum!
Macbeth doth come.

All.  The weird sisters, hand in hand,

Posters of the sea and land,
Thus do go about, about:
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine,
Peace!—the charm’s wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.
Macb.  So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
Ban.  How far is’t called to Fores?—What are these,
So wither’d, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like inhabitant of the earth,
And yet are on’t?  Live you? or are you aught
That man may question? You seem to understand me,
By each at once her character having,
Upon her skinny lips. You should be women,
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb.  Speak, if you can.—What are you?
1 Witch.  All hail! Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Glamis!
2 Witch.  All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Cawdor!
3 Witch.  All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.
Ban.  Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear
Things that do sound so fair?—I ’t the name of truth,
Are ye fantastical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace, and great prediction
Of noble having, and of royal hope,
That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak not.
If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say which grain will grow, and which will not,
Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor fear,
Your favours, nor your hate.
1 Witch.  Hail!
2 Witch.  Hail!
3 Witch.  Hail!
1 Witch.  Lesser than Macbeth, and greater,
2 Witch.  Not so happy, yet much happier.
3 Witch.  Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none.
So, all hail, Macbeth, and Banquo!
1 Witch.  Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail!
Macb.  Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more.
By Sinel’s death, I know, I am thane of Glamis;
But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,
A prosperous gentleman; and to be king
Stands not within the prospect of belief,
No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence
You owe this strange intelligence? or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
With such prophetic greeting?—Speak, I charge you.

[Witches vanish.

Ban.  The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them. Whither have they vanish’d?
Macb.  To Fores, and find out the mystery; and what seem’d corporal, melted
As breath into the wind.  —Would they had stay’d!
Ban.  Were such things here, as we do speak about,
Or have we eaten on the insane root,
That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb.  Your children shall be kings.
Ban.  You shall be king.
Macb.  And thane of Cawdor too: went it not so?
Ban.  To the self-same tune, and words. Who’s here?

Enter Rosse and Angus.
Rosse.  The king hath happily receiv’d, Macbeth,
The news of thy successes; and when he reads
Thy personal venture in the rebel’s fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend,
SCENE IV.
MACBETH.

Which should be thine, or his. Silence'd with that,
In viewing o'er the rest of the self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afraid of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale; —
Came post with post; and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent, To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.

Rosse. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me from him call thee thane of Cawdor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thane,
For it is thine.

Ban. What! can the devil speak true?

Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives: why do you
In borrow'd robes? —

Ang. Who was the thane, lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd
With those of Norway, or did line the rebel
With hidden help and vantage, or that with both
Ho labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;
But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.

Macb. Glamis, and thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind. [Aside.] Thanks for your pains.—
Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. That, thrust'd home,
Might yet entinkle you unto the crown,
Besides the thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest trifles, to betray us
In deepest consequence.—
Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme. [Aside.] I thank you, gentlemen.—
This supernatural soliciting
[Aside.
Cannot be ill: cannot be good:—if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawdor:
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion,
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings.
My thought, where murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man, that function
Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is,
But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.

Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,
Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him,
Like our strange garments, cleft not to their mould,
But with the aid of use.

Macb. Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was

With things forgotten.—Kind gentlemen, your pains
Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king.—

[To Banquo.] Think upon what hath chanc'd; and,
at more time,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough. —Come, friends. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Fore's. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Lenox, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return'd?

Mal. My liege, They are not yet come back; but I have spoke
With one that saw him die, who did report,
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons,
Implor'd your highness' pardon, and set forth
A deep repentance. Nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it: he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 't were a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

[Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross, and Angus.]

O worthiest cousin! [Embrace.

The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee: would thou hast less deserv'd,
That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been more! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties: and our duties
Are to your throne and state, children, and servants;
Which do but what they should, by doing everything
Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing.—Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so; let me infold thee,
And hold thee to my heart. [Embrace.

Ban. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. —Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm; whom we name hereafter
The prince of Cumberland: which honour must
Not, unaccompanied, invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all descended. —From hence to Inverness,
And bind us farther to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!

Macb. The prince of Cumberland! —That is a step
On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leaf, [Aside.

For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires
Let not light see my black and deep desires;
The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see (Exit.

Dun. True. worthy Banquo: he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinman. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Inverness. A Room in Macbeth’s Castle.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a letter.

Lady M. [Reads.] “They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them farther, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. While I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me, ‘Thane of Cawdor;’ by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with, ‘Hail, king that shalt be!’ This have I thought good to deliver thine, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou might-est not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.”

Gladius thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be
What thou art promis’d—yet I do fear thy nature:
It is too full of the milk of human kindness,
To catch the nearest way. Thou wouldst be great;
Art not without ambition; but without
The illness should attend it: what thou wouldst highly;
That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongfully win: thou’st had, great Gladius,
That which cries, “Thus thou must do, if thou have it;
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Than wishest should be undone.” His thee hither,
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valour of my tongue,
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown’d withal.—

Enter an Attendant.

What is your tidings?

Attent. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou’rt mad to say it.
Is not thy master with him? who, were’t so,
Would have inform’d for preparation.

Attent. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming.
One of my fellows had the speed of him;
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending:
He brings great news. [Exit Attendant.] The raven himself is hoarse,
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here,
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-full
Of direst cruelty: make thick my blood
Stop up th’ access and passage to remorse;
That no compunction visitings of nature
Shake my full purpose, nor keep peace between
Th’ effect and it. Come to my woman’s breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers,
Wherever in your sightless substance

You wait on nature’s mischief. Come, thick night,
And pall thee in the dunnet smoke of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
Nor heaven peep through the blankness of the dark,
To cry, “Hold, hold!”

Enter Macbeth.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!

They embrace.

Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?

Macb. To-morrow, as he purposes.

Lady M. O! never Shall sun that morrow see.
Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men
May read strange matters: to beguile the time,
Look like the time: bear welcome in your eye;
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under it. He that’s coming
Must be provided for; and you shall put
This night’s great business into my despatch,
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely soveraign away and murtherd.

Macb. We will speak farther.

Lady M. Only look up clear:
To allier favour ever is to fear,
Leave all the rest to me. [Ereunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo, Lenox, Macduff, Rossie, Angus, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat: the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his lov’d mansionry, that the heaven’s breath
Smells wooingly here: no juty, frieze,
Buttress, nor coigne of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed, and procreant cradle;
Where they much’ brede and haunt, I have observ’d,
The air is delicate.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Dun. See, see! our honour’d hostess.—
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love: herein I teach you,
How you shall bid God yield us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poor and single business to contend
Against those honours deep and broad, wherewith
Your majesty loads our house. For those of old,
And the late dignities hie’d up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where’s the thane of Cawdor?
We cour’d him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor: but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath help’d him
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever
Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,
To make their audit at your highness’ pleasure,

1 blanket: in f. e.
2 Not in f. e.
3 most: in f. e.; altered by Rowe, from “must,” of folio.
4 Beadmen—bound to pray for a benefactor.
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand; Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly, And shall continue our graces towards him. By your leave, hostess. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. — The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage; a Woman, and divers Servants with dishes and service. Then, enter MACBETH.

MACB. If it were done when 'tis done, then 't were well It were done quickly: if the assassination Could trammel up the consequence, and catch With his surcease success: that but this blow Might be the be-all and the end-all here. But here, upon this bank and shoil of time, We'd jump the life to come. — But in these cases, We still have judgment here; that we but teach Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return To plague th' inventor: such even-handed justice Commends th' ingredients of our poison'd chalice To our own lips. He's here in double trust: First, as I am his kinsman and his subject; Strong both against the deed: then, as his host, Who should against his murderer shut the door, Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been So clear of doubt. will in his great office, that his virtues Will plead, like angels trumpet-tongued, against The deep damnation of his taking-off; And pity, like a naked new-born babe, Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hord's Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye, That tears shall drown the wind. — I have no spur To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself, And falls on the other.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. How now! what news?

MACB. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not, he has?

MACB. We will proceed no farther in this business: He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought Golden opinions from all sorts of people, Which would be worn now in their newest gloss, Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk, Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since, And wakes it now, to look so green and pale

At what it did so freely? From this time, Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid To be the same in thine own act and valour, As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life And live a coward in thine own esteem, Letting I dare not wait upon I would, Like the poor cat i' the adage? MACB. Pr'ythee, peace. I dare do all that may become a man; Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What boast was 't then, That made you break this enterprise to me? When you durst do it, then you were a man; And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place, Did then adhere, and yet you would make both: They have made themselves, and that their fitness now Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me: I would, while it was smiling in my face, And pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums, And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as you Have done to this.

MACB. If we should fail?

Lady M. But screw your courage to the sticking-place, And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep, (Whereoth the rather shall his day's hard journey Soundly invite him) his two chamberlains Will I with wine and wassell so convince, That memory, the worder of the brain, Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason A limbeck only: when in swinish sleep Their drenched natures lie, as in a death, What cannot you and I perform upon Th' ungarded Duncan? what not put upon His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt Of our great quell?

MACB. Bring forth men-children only! For thy undaunted mettle should compose Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd When we have mark'd with blood those sleepily two Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers, That they have done't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other, As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar Upon his death?

MACB. I am settled; and bend up Each corporal agent to this terrible feat. Away, and mock the time with fairest show: False face must hide what the false heart doth know.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. — The Same. Court within the Castle.

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE, with a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Flé. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock. Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Flé. I take it, 't is later, sir.

Ben. Hold, take my sword. — There's husbandry in heaven;

1 An officer who placed and removed dishes. 2 schoole: in folio. Theobald made the change. 3 this: in f. e. 4 "The cat loves fish, but dare not wet her feet." 5 no: in folio. 6 beast: in f. e. 7 Some eds. place an exclamation, or comma, in place of the interrogation point; such, Dyce informs us, was Mrs. Siddons' delivery of the passage—as if "we fail," was the conclusion of MACBETH's remark.

Their candles are all out. — Take thee that too. A heavy summons lies like lead upon me, And yet I would not sleep: merciful powers! Restrain in me the cursed thoughts, that nature Gives way to in repose! — Give me my sword.

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.

Who's there?

MACB. A friend.

Ben. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed;
He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great largess to your offices.
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess, and shut up
In measureless content.
Macb. Being unprepar’d,
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrought.
Ban. All ’s well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:
To you they have show’d some truth.
Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entertain an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that business,
If you would grant the time.
Ban. At your kind’st leisure.
Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent, when ’t is,
It shall make honour for you.
Ban. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis’d, and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsel’d.
Macb. Good repose, the while.
[Exit Banquo and Fleance.
Macb. Go; bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.—
[Exit Servant.
Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee—
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.
Thou marshall’st me the way that I was going;
And such an instrument I was to use.—
Mine eyes are made the fools of the other senses,
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still:
And on thy blade, and dudgeon,4 gouts of blood,
Which was not so before.—There’s no such thing:
It is the bloody business, which informs
Thus to mine eyes.—Now o’er the one half world
Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
The curtain’d sleeper;5 witchcraft celebrates
Pale Hecate’s offerings; and wither’d murder,
Alarum’d by his sentinel the wolf,
Whose howl ’s his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
With Tarquin’s ravishing strides,6 towards his design
Moves like a ghost.—Thou sure and firm-set earth,
Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
The very stones that rise about my head,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suits with it.—Whiles I live thron’;
Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.
[A bell rings.
I go, and it is done: the bell invites me.
I hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell,
That summons thee to heaven or to hell.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same.
Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold: [Peace! What hath quench’d them hath given me fire.—Hark!—

It was the owl that shriek’d, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern’st good-night. He is about it.
The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg’d their posses,
That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live, or die.
Macb. [Within.] Who ’s there?—what, ho! Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak’d,
And ’t is not done:—the attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds us.—Hark!—I laid their daggers ready,
He could not miss them.—Had he not resembled
My father as he slept, I had done ’t.—My husband?

Macb. I have done the deed.—Didst thou not hear a noise?
Lady M. I heard the owl scream, and the crickets cry.
Did not you speak?
Macb. When?
Lady M. Now.
Lady M. Ay.
Macb. Hark!—
Who lies ’t the second chamber?
Lady M. Donalbain.
Macb. This is a sorry sight. [Show his hands.
Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight.
Macb. There ’s one did laugh in ’s sleep, and one cried, “murder!”
That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them;
But they did say their prayers, and address’d them
Again to sleep.
Lady M. There are two lodg’d together.
Macb. One cried “God bless us!” and “Amen,” the other,
As they had seen me with these hangman’s hands.
Listening their fear, I could not say amen,
When they did say God bless us.
Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.
Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce amen?
I had more than need of blessing, and amen
Stuck in my throat.
Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways: so, it will make us mad.
Macb. Methought, I heard a voice cry, “Sleep no more!
Macbeth does murder sleep,”—the innocent sleep;
Sleep, that knits up the ravel’d sleeve7 of care,
The death of each day’s life, sore labour’s bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature’s second course,
Chief nourisher in life’s feast.—
Lady M. What do you mean? Macb. Still it cried, “Sleep no more!” to all the house:
“Glamis hath murder’d sleep, and therefore Cawdor
Shall sleep no more; Macbeth shall sleep no more!”
Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength, to think
So briskly of things. ’Go, get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand.—
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there: go, carry them, and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.
Macb. I ’ll go no more:
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on ’t again, I dare not.
Lady M. Infirm of purpose!
SCENE III.

MACBETH.

Give me the daggers. The sleeping, and the dead,
Are but as pictures: 't is the eye of childhood.
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt. [Exit.—Knocking within.
Macb.
Whence is that knocking?—
How is 't with me, when every noise appals me?
What hands are here! Ha! they pluck out mine eyes.
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.
Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame
To wear a heart so white. [Knock.] I hear a knocking
At the south entry:—retire we to our chamber.
A little water clears us of this deed:
How easy is it, then? Your constancy
Hath left you unattended.—[Knock.] Hark! more knocking.

Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers.—Be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed, 't were best not know myself.

[Knock.
Wake, Duncan with thy knocking: I would thou couldst!

[Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter a Porter. [Knocking within.

Porter. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old7 turning the key.

[Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock. Who's there,
't the name of Beelzebub?—Here's a farmer, that handled himself on the expectation of plenty: come in time;
have napkins enough about you; here you'll sweat for 't. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, Who's there, in the other devil's name?—'Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale: who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O! come in, equivocator.
[Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock. Who's there?—'Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose: come in, tailor:
here you may roast your goose, [Knocking.] Knock, knock.
Never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no farther:
I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon: I pray you, remember the porter.

Enter Macduff and Lenox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed,
That you do lie so late?

Port. 'Faith, sir, we were courting till the second cock;
and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine.

Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance.
Therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuadest him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equivocates him a-sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, 't is the very throat on me: but I required him for his lie; and I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?—

Enter Macbeth,

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir.

Macb. Good-morrow, both.

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

Len. Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him:
I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macd. I'll bring you to him.

Macd. I know, this is a joyful trouble to you;
But yet, 't is one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain.
This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call,
For 't is my limited service.

[Exit Macduff.
Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb. He does:—he did appoint so.

Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay,
Our chimney's were blown down; and, as they say,
Lamentings heard 't the air; strange screams of death,
And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combination, and confus'd events
New hatch'd to the worstful time. The obscene bird
Clamour'd the livelong night: some say, the earth
Was feverous, and did shake.

Macb.
't was a rough night,
Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue, nor heart,
Cannot conceive, nor name thee.

Macb. Len.
What's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his master-piece.

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' the building.

Macb. What is 't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight
With a new Gorgon.—Do not bid me speak:
See, and then speak yourselves. Awake! awake!—

[Exit Macbeth and Lenox.

Ring the alarum-bell!—Murder, and treason!
Banquo, and Donaldain! Malcolm, awake!

Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself: up, up, and see
The great doom's image!—Malcolm! Banquo!
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites
To countenance this horror. Ring the bell! [Bell rings.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. What's the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!

Macd. O, gentle lady! 't is not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman's ear,

Enter Banquo unready.

Would murder as it fell.—O Banquo! Banquo!
Our royal master's murdered!

Lady M. Woe, alas!

What! in our house?

Ban.
Too cruei, any where.

Dear Duff, I pr'ythee, contradict thyself,
And say, it is not so.

Re-enter Macbeth and Lenox.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance, I had liv'd a blessed time, for from this instant There's nothing serious in mortality; All is but toys: renown and grace are dead; The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees Is left this vault to drag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know 't: The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. O! by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't.

Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood; So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found Upon their pillows: they star'd, and were distracted.

No man's life was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O! yet I do repent of my fury, That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious, Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:
The expedition of my violent love Out-ran the peson reason.—Here lay Duncan, His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood; And his gash'd stabbs look'd like a breach in nature For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers, Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers Unmannerly breoch'd with gore. Who could refrain, That had a heart to love, and in that heart Courage to make's love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macb. Look to the lady. [Lady Macbeth swoons.]

Mal. Why do we hold our tongues, That most may claim this argument for ours?

Don. What should be spoken Here, where our fate, hid in an auger-hole, May rush, and seize us? Let's away: our tears Are not yet brewd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow

Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady.—[Lady Macb. is borne out.]

At and when we have our naked frailties hid, That suffer in exposure, let us meet, And question this most bloody piece of work, To know it farther. Fears and scruples shake us: In the great hand of God I stand; and, thence, Against the undisguiz'd pretence I fight Of treasonous malice.

Macd. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness, And meet 't the hall together.

All. Well contented.

[Exeunt all but Mal. and Don.

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them: To show an unfelt sorrow is an office Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, 1: our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer: where we are, There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood, The nearer bloody.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—Fores. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou hast it now, king, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear,
Thou play'st most foully for 't: yet it was said,
It should not stand in thy posterity;
But that myself should be the root, and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from them,
(As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches show)
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But, hush! no more.

Sennent. Enter MACBETH, as King; Lady MACBETH, as Queen; LEXON, Rosse, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.
Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all things unbecoming.
Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And 'twill request your presence.
Ban. Lay your highness' command upon me, to which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.
Macb. Ride you this afternoon?
Ban. Ay, my good lord.
Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice
(Which still hath both grave and prosperous)
In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow.
Is't far you ride?
Ban. As far as my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the better,
I must become the borrower of the night
For a dark hour, or twain.
Macb. Fail not our feast.
Ban. My lord, I will not.
Macb. We hear, our bloody cousins are bestow'd
In England, and in Ireland; not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention. But of that to-morrow;
When, therewithal, we shall have cause of state
Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: adieu,
Till you return at night. Goes FLeance with you?
Ban. Ay, my good lord, our time does call upon us.
Macb. I wish your horses swift, and sure of foot;
And so I do commend you to their backs.

Farewel.—
Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night. To make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourselves
Till supper-time alone: while then, God be with you.

[Exit Lady MACBETH, Lords, Ladies, &c.

Sirrah, a word with you. Attend those men
Our pleasure?

Att. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.—[Exit Att.]

My genius is rebuk'd, as it is said,
Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the sisters,
When first they put the name of king upon me,
And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
They hail'd him father to a line of kings.
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unmelial hand,
No son of mine succeeding. It's to be so,
For Banquo's issue have I fill'd my mind,
For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man,
To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
Rather than so, come, fate, into the list,
And champion me to the utterance⁵.—Who's there?

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now, go to the door, and stay there till we call.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?
1 Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now, have you consider'd of my speeches? Know,
That it was he, in the times past, which held you
So under fortune; which, you thought, had been
Our innocent self. This I made good to you
In our last conference; pass'd in probation with you,
How you were borne in hand; how cross'd; the instruments;
Who wrought with them; and all things else, that might
To half a soul, and to a notion craz'd,
Say, "Thus did Banquo."

1 Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so; and went farther, which is now
Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature,
That you can let this go? Are you so gospel'd
To pray for this good man, and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave,
And beggar'd yours for ever?

1 Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men,
As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,
Shoughers, water-rugs, and demi-wolves. are cleft
All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Distinguisheth the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The house-keeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him clos'd, whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the quill
That writes them all alike; and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file
Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say it,
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incens'd, that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another,
So wearied with disasters, tug'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on 't.

Macb. Both of you

Know Banquo was your enemy.

2 Mur. True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life. And though I could
With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,
And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wait his fall.
Whom I myself struck down; and thence it is,
That to your assistance do make love,
Masking the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most,
I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
Acquaint you, with a perfect spy; o' the time,
The moment on 't; for 't must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought,
That I was a cleanness; and with him,
(To leave no rubs, nor botches, in the work)
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart:
I'll come to you anon.

[Exeunt Murderers.

It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?
Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
'T is safer to be that which we destroy,
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,
Using those thoughts, which should indeed have died
With them they think on? Things without remedy,
Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Macb. We have scarf'd the snake, not kill'd it:
She'll close, and be herself, whilst our poor malice
Remains in danger of her former tooth,
But let the eternal frame of things disjoint,
Both the worlds suffer,
Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams,
That shake us nightly. Better be with the dead,
Whom we to gain our peace have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave:
After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well;
’Tis strange how soon then, too long to bear,
Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him farther!

Lady M. Come on:
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
Be bright and jovial 'mong your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you.
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo:
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we must lose our honours
In these flattering streams, and make our faces
Vizards to our hearts, disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this:

Macb. O! full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife,
Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance live.
Lady M. But in them nature's copy 's not eternal.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are assailable:
Then, be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight: ere to black Heeate's summons
The sherd-borne beetle, with his drowsy hums,
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done
A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,
Till thou applaudit the deed. Come, seeing' night,
Scar' the tender eye of pitiful day,
And with thy bloody and invisible hand,
Cancel, and tear to pieces, that great bond
Which keeps me pale!—Light thickens; and the crow
Makes wing to the rocky wood:
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,
Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse,
Thou marvell'st at my words; but hold thee still:
Things, bad begun, make strong themselves by ill.
So, pr'ythee, go with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Park, with a road leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.

1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

3 Mur. Banquo. Macbeth. 2 Mur. He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers
Our offices, and what we have to do,
To thy direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us.

The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day:
Now spurs the lated traveller apace,
To gain the timely inn; and here approaches
The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Hark! I hear horses.
Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho! 2 Mur. Then, 't is he: the rest,
That are within the note of expectation,
Already are in the court.

1 Mur. His horses go about.

3 Mur. Almost a mile: but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, with a torch.

2 Mur. A light, a light!

3 Mur. 'Tis he. 1 Mur. Stand to't. Ban. It will be rain to-night.

1 Mur. Let it come down. [Strikes Banquo.

3 Mur. Who did strike out the light?

1 Mur. 'Tis not the way?

3 Mur. There 's but one down: the son is fled.

2 Mur. We have lost best half of our affair.

1 Mur. Well, let 's away, and say how much is done.

[Exeunt.]
SCENE IV.—A Room of State in the Palace.

A Banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, Lady MACBETH, ROSE, LENOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees; sit down: at first
And last the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.

Macb. Ourself will mingle with society,
And play the humble host.
Our hostess keeps her state; but in best time
We will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends;
For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.
Both sides are even: here 'twill sit 't the midst.
Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink a measure
Enter first Murderer, to the door.

The table round.—There's blood upon thy face.
Mur. 'T is Banquo's then.

Macb. 'T is better thee without, than him within.
Is he despatch'd?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats;
Yet is he good, that did the like for Fleance:
If thou didst it, thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir, Fleance is 'scap'd.

Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been Whole as the marble, founded as the rock, [perfect:
As broad and general as the casing air;
But now, I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in
To saucy doubts and fears.—But Banquo's safe?

Mur. Ay, my good lord, safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trench'd gashes on his head,
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that:—
There the crowned serpent lies: the worm, that's fled,
Hath nature in that to which it will employ breed,
No teeth for the present.—Get thee gone: to-morrow
We'll hear ourselves again. [Exit Murderer.

Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold,
That is not often vouch'd the while 't is making;
'T is given with welcome. To feed were best at home;
From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrance!—
Now, good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!

Len. May it please your highness sit?

[The Ghost of BANQUO enters, and sits in MACBETH's place.

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd,
Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present;
Who now may I rather chance for unkindness,
Than pity for mischance?

Rosse. His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon his promise. Please it your highness
To grace us with your royal company?

Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.
[Pointing to the Ghost.

Macb. Where?

Len. Here, my good lord. What is't that moves
Your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say; I did it: never shake
 Thy gory locks at me.

Rosse. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not well.

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends. My lord is often thus,
And hath been from this his youth: pray you, keep seat.
The fit is momentary; upon a thought
He will again be well. If much you note him
You shall offend him, and extend his passion;
Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man?

[Coming to MACBETH: aside to him.]

Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O, proper stuff! This is the very painting of your fear;
This is the air-drawn dagger, which, you said,
Led you to Duncan. O! these flaws, and starts,
(Impostors to true fear) would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done,
You look but on a stool.

Macb. Pr'ythee, see there! behold! look! lo! how say you this?

Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.—
If charnel-houses, and our graves, must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites. [Exit Ghost.

Lady M. What! quite unmann'd in folly?

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fie! for shame!
Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, 'tis' olden
Time,
Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal;
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,
That when the brains were out the man would die,
And there an end; but now, they rise again
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools. This is more strange
Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord. [Going back to her seat.]* Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget.—
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all;
Then, I'll sit down.—Give me some wine: fill full—
I drink to the general joy of the whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss:

Re-enter Ghost.

Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst
And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Macb. Avant! and quit my sight. Let the earth
Hide thee!

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes,
Which thou dost glare with.

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble: or, be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I exhibit, then protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!

[Exit Ghost.

Unreal mockery, hence!—Why, so,—being gone,

1 vouch'd while 't is a making: in f. e. 2 These directions not in f. e. 3 inhabit: in f. e.
I am a man again.—Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displac’d the mirth, broke the good meeting.

With most admir’d disorder.

Macb. Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer’s cloud,
Without our special wonder? You make me strange,
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch’d with fear.

Rosse. What sights, my lord?

Lady M. I pray you, speak not: he grows worse and worse:
Question enranges him. At once, good night:
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good night; and better health
Attend his majesty.

Lady M. [Exit Lords and Attendants.

Macb. It will have blood, they say; blood will have blood:
Stones have been known to move, and trees to speak;
Augurs, and understood relations, have,
By magot-pies, and choughs, and rooks, brought forth
The secret’st man of blood.—What is the night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning; which is which.

Macb. How say’st thou, that Macduff denies his person,
At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send.
There’s not a one of them, but in his house
I’ll keep a servant fee’d. I will to-morrow,
(And betimes I will) to the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know,
By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good,
All causes shall give way: I am in blood
Stept in so far, that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o’er.
Strange things I have in head, that will to hand,
Which must be acted ere they may be seam’d.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we’ll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse
Is in the initiate fear, that wants hard use:
We are yet but young in deed.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting Hecate.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecate! you look angerly.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are,
Saucy, and over-bold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth,
In riddles, and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call’d to bear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful, and wrathful; who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me if the morning: thither he
Will come to know his destiny.
Your vessels, and your spells, provide,
Your charms, and every thing beside.
I am for the air; this night I’ll spend
Upto a dismal and a fatal end:
Great business must be wrought ere noon.
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound;
I’ll catch it ere it come to ground:
And that, distill’d by magic sleights,
Shall raise such artificial sprites,
As by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his confusion.
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes ’bove wisdom, grace, and fear;
And, you all know, security
Is mortal’s chiefest enemy.

Song. [Within.] Come away, come away, &c.

Hark! I am call’d: my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit Hecate.

1 Witch. Come, let’s make haste: she’ll soon be back again.

[Exeunt Witches.

SCENE VI.—Forez. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Lenox and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret farther: only, I say,
Things have been strangely borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pitted of Macbeth:—marry, he was dead;
And the right valiant Banquo walk’d too late;
Whom, you may say, if’t please you, FLEANCE kill’d,
For FLEANCE, &c. Men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbain,
To kill their gracious father? damned fact!
How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight,
In pious rage the two delinquent’s tears,
That were the slaves of drink, and thralls of sleep?
Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely, too;
For ’t would have anger’d any heart alive,
To hear the men deny ‘t. So that, I say,
He has borne all things well; and I do think,
That had he Duncan’s sons under his key,
(As, an’t please heaven, he shall not) they should find
What ’t were to kill a father; so should FLEANCE.
But, peace!—for from broad words, and ‘cause he fail’d
His presence at the tyrant’s feast, I hear,
Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan,
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
Lives in the English court; and is receiv’d
Of the most pious Edward with such grace,
That the malevolence of fortune nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff
Is gone, to pray the holy king upon his nid
To wake Northumberland, and warlike SIWARD;
That by the help of these, (with Him above
To ratify the work) we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,
Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives,
Do faithful homage, and receive free honours,
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath so exasperate the king, that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute, "Sir, not I;"
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums, as who should say, "You’ll rue the time
That clogs me with this answer!"
ACT IV.

(SCENE I.—A dark Cave. In the middle, a Cauldron.

ThunDer. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Thrice the brindled cat hath mew'd.
2 Witch. Thrice ; and once the hedge-pig whin'd.
3 Witch. Harper' cries.—'T is time, 't is time.

1 Witch. Round about the cauldron go ;
In the poison'd entrails throw.—
Toad, that under cold stone,
Day and nights has thirty-one
Swelter'd venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first i' the charmed pot.
All. Double, double toil and trouble ;
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.
2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake:
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and owlet's wing,
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth and bubble.
All. Double, double toil and trouble,
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.
3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf;
Witches' mummy : maw, and gulf
Of the ravin's salt-sea shark;
Root of hemlock, digg'd i' the dark;
Liver of blaspheming Jew;
Gall of goat, and slips of yew
Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse;
Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips;
Finger of bith-strangled babe,
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,
Make the gruel thick and slab;
Add thereto a tiger's tooth,
For the ingredients of our cauldron,
All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.
2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood;
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter Hecate, and other Witches.

Hec. O, well done ! I commend your pains,
And every one shall share i' the gains.

And now about the cauldron sing,
Like elves and faeries in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes.—

[Knocking.
Open, locks, whoever knock'd.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags !
What is 't you do?
All. A deed without a name.
Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess,
His message cre he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accuses !

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him! [Exeunt.
MACBETH.

Descends.

Mach. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest; bid the treen
Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bedements! good!
Rebellions' head, rise never, till the wood
Of Birnam rise; and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom.—Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, (if your art
Can tell so much) shall Banquo's issue ever
Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Mach. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know.—
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this?

The cauldron descends.* Hautboys sound.

1 Witch. Show! 2 Witch. Show! 3 Witch. Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.

A show of eight Kings, and Banquo first and last, with a Glass in his Hand.

Mach. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo: down!
Thy crown does scarce wear eye-balls;—and thy hair,
Thou other gold-bound brow art like the first:—
A third is like the former:—Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this?—A fourth?—Start, eyes!
What? will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?
Another yet?—A seventh? I'll see no more:
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass,
Which shows me many more; and some I see,
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry.
Horrible sight!—Now, I see, 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his.—What! is this so?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: but why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?—
Come, sisters, cheer we up his spirits,
And show the best of our delights.
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round;
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

[Music. The witches dance, and vanish.

Mach. Where are they? Gone?—Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye ascurred in the calendar!—
Come in! without there!

Enter Lenox.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Mach. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Mach. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Mach. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them!—I did hear
The galloping of horse: who was 't come by?

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word,
Macduff is fled to England.

Mach. Time, thou antic'st my dread exploits:
The flighty purpose never is o'ertook,
Unless the deed go with it. From this moment,
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now,
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:
The castle of Macduff I will surprise;

Seize upon Fife: give to the edge o' the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool:
But no more confabulates.—Where are these gentlemen?
Come; bring me where they are.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Fife. A Room in Macduff's Castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Rosse.

L. Macd. What had he done to make him fly the land?

Rosse. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none:
His flight was madness. When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.

Rosse. You know not,
Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his Mansion, and his titles, in a place.

Rosse. From whence himself does fly? He loves us not:
He wants the natural touch; for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear, and nothing is the love:
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Rosse. My dearest coz,
I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much farther
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
And do not know 'tis ourselves: when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent sea,
Each way and move.—I take my leave of you;
'T shall not be long but I'll be here again.
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.
Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort.
I take my leave at once.

[Exit Rosse.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead:
And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. I'll be a man,
L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?
Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.
L. Macd. Poor bird! thou dost never fear the net,
nor lime,
The pit-fall, nor the gin.
Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?
L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.
L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;
And yet! faith, with wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?
L. Macd. Ay, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor?
L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.
Son. And he all traitors that do so?
L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.

1 Rebellions: in f. e. 2 The first part of this direction is not in f. e. 3 Banquo last: in f. e. 4 Beinnew. 5 sights: in f. e. 6 know: in f. e. 7 Shall: in f. e.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil
In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon:
That which you are my thoughts cannot transpose;
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,
Yet grace must still look so.

Mal. I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts.
Why in that rawness left you wife, and child,
Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,
Without leave-taking?—I pray you,
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties: you may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs:
Thy title is affeer'd!—Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st,
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp.
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think, wthal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer

[Shewing a Paper.]

Of goodly thousands; but, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so drafted,
That, when they shall be riper'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state
Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms.

Macd. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd,
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name; but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'er-bear,
That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth,
Than such a one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny: it hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Enjoy your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink.
We have willing dames enough; there cannot be
That vulture in you to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

*Probably a misprint for "hair'd." 1 discern: in folio. Theobald made the change. 2 affeer'd: in folio. To affeer, is a law phrase, for to affirm. 3 Not in f. e. 4 open'd: in f. e. 5 Convey: in f. e.
Mac. With this, there grows
In my most ill-compos'd affection such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels, and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more; that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macc. This avarice
Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root,
Than summer-seeming lust; and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foison to fill up your will,
Of your mere own. All these are portable
With other graces weight'd.

Macc. But I have none. The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macc. O Scotland, Scotland!
Macc. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Macc. Fit to govern!
No, not to live.—O, nation miserable!
With an unitletit tyrant, bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands assure'd,
And does blasphme his breed?—Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king; the queen, that bore thee,
Other upon her knees than on her foot,
ried every day she lived. Fare thee well.
These evils thou repeast upon thyself
Have banish'd me from Scotland.—O, my breast!
Thy hopes end here.

Macc. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hast from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcile'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-creedulous haste; but God above
Deal between thee and me, for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and
Unspeak mine own defection; here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was foreworst;
Scarce had coveeted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth, than life: my first false speaking
Was this upon myself. What I am truly
Is thine, and my poor country's, to command:
Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now, we'll together; and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent?

Macc. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once.
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Macc. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray you?

Doc. Ay, sir: there are a crew of wretched souls;
That stay his cure: their malady convinces
The great assay of heart; but at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

Macc. I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor.

Macc. What's the disease he means?

Macc. 'Tis call'd the evil:
A most miraculous work in this good king,
Which often, since my here remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people,
All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers: and 'tis spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy;
And sundry blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Rosse.

Rosse. See, who comes here?
Macc. My countryman; but yet I know him not.
Macc. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.
Macc. I know him now. Good God, betimes remove
The means that make us strangers!

Rosse. Sir, amen.
Macc. Stands Scotland where it did?
Rosse. Alas, poor country! Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where nothing,
But who knows nothing, is once seem to smile:
Where sighs, and groans, and shrieks that rend the air,
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems
A modern ecstasy: the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd, for whom: and good men's lives
Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they sicken.

Macc. O, relation,
Too nice, and yet too true!

Macc. What is the newest grief?
Rosse. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker.
Each minute teems a new one.

Macc. How does my wife?
Rosse. Why, well.

Macc. And all my children?

Rosse. Well, too.

Macc. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Rosse. No: they were well, at peace, when I did leave them.

Macc. Be not a naggard of your speech: how goes it?

Rosse. When I came hither to transport the tiding,
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot.
Now is the time of help. Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Macc. Be it their comfort, We are coming thither. Gracious England hath Lest us good Siward, and ten thousand men:
An older, and a better soldier, none
That Christendom gives out.

1 foison: in f. e. ; plenty. 2 Overtures.
Rosse. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words,
That would be how'd out in the desert air
Where hearing should not latch' them.
Macd. What concern they?
Rosse. No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the main part
Pertains to you alone.
Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it.
Rosse. Let not your cars despise your tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound,
That ever yet they heard.
Macd. Humph! I guess at it.
Rosse. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife, and babes,
Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner
Were, on the quarry² of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.
Mal. Merciful heaven!—
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows:
Give sorrow words; the grief, that does not speak,
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break.
Macd. My children too?
Rosse. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.
Macd. And I must be from hence!
My wife kill'd too?
Rosse. I have said.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.
Enter a Doctor of Physic, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed: yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching. In this slumber agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what at any time have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may, to me; and 'tis most you should.

Gent. Neither to you, nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a Taper.

Lady. Lo you! here she comes. This is her very guise, and upon my life fast asleep. Observe her: stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Mal. Be comforted:
Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty ones?
Did you say, all?—O, hell-kite!—All?
What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop?

Macd. Dispute it like a man.

Mal. I shall do so; but I must also feel it like a man:
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.—Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff!
They were all struck for thee. Naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword: let grief,
Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O! I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And bragrant with my tongue.—But, gentle Heavens,
Cut short all intermission: front to front,
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland, and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tune² goes manly.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

[Taking out his Tables.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One; two: why, then 'tis time to do 't. Hell is murky!—
Fire, my lord, fire! a soldier, and sear'd? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doct. Do you mark that?

[Writing.

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife: where is she now?—What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—
No more o' that, my lord: no more o' that; you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to: you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.

Oh! oh! oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well.—

Gent. Pray God, it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep, who have died holly in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night-gown; look not so pale.—I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried: he cannot come out on 's grave.
MACBETH.

Doct. Even so?
Lady M. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand.
What's done, cannot be undone: to bed, to bed, to bed. [Exit Lady MACBETH.

Docf. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Docf. Foul whisperings are abroad. Unnatural deeds
Do breed unnatural troubles: infected minds
To their dear pillows will discharge their secrets.
More needs she the divine, than the physician.—
God, God, forgive us all! Look after her;
Remove from her the means of all annoyance,
And still keep eyes upon her.—So, good night:
My mind she has mated?, and amaz'd my sight.
I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MENTEITH, CATHNESS,
ANGUS, LENOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,
His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff.
Revenues burn in them; for their dear causes
Would, to the bleeding and the grim alarm,
Excite the mortified man.

Exeunt.

Ang. Near Birnam wood
Shall we well meet them: that way are they coming.

Cath. Who knows, if Donaldbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not. I have a file
Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son,
And many untough youths, that even now
Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Cath. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies.
Some say, he's mad: others, that lesser hate him,
Do call it valiant fury; but, for certain,
He cannot buckle his distemper'd course?

Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel
His secret murders sticking on his hands;
Now minute revolts upbraids his faith-breath:
Those he commands move only in command,
Nothing in love: now does he feel his title
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who, then, shall blame
His pester'd senses to recoil and start,
When all that is within him does condemn
Itself, for being there?

Cath. Well; march we on,
To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd:
Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal;
And with him pour we, in our country's purge,
Each drop of us.

Men. Or so much as it needs
To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds.
Make we our march towards Birnam.

[Exeunt, marching.

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all:
Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane,
I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?
Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know
All mortal consequences have pronounced me thus:
"Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman

Shall e'er have power upon thee."—Then fly, false
And mingle with the English epieures: [thence,
The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear,
Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon!
Where got'st thou that goose look?
Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain?
Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,
Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch?
Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine
Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whiey-face?
Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. [Exit Serv.]

Seyton!—I am sick at heart.
When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will chair me, or, ever, or disseat me now.
I have liv'd long enough: my May of life
Is fall'n into the sea, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses, not loud, but deep, mouth-honour, breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.

Seyton—

Enter Seyton.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?
Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.
Macb. I'll fight, till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.
Give me my armour.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.
Send out more horses, skirr' the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour.

How does your patient, doctor?

Docf. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that.

Caitn thou not minister to a mind diseas'd,
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous grief,
Which weighs upon the heart?

Docf. Therein the patient
Must minister unto himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.—
Come, put mine armour on: give me my staff.—
Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from me.—
Come, sir, despatch.—If thou couldst, doctor, cast
The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull it off, I say.—
What rubarb, senna, or what purgative drug,
Would scourc these English hence?—Hearst thou of them?

Docf. Ay, my good lord: your royal preparation
Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.
I will not be afraid of death and bane,
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. [Exit.

Docf. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,
Profit again should hardly draw me here. [Exit.

- Astounded. 2 cause: in f. e. 3 Fool. 4 Not in f. e. 5 cheer: in f. e. 6 way: in f. e. Johnson also suggested the change.

7 Scour. 8 stuff: in f. e. 9 eyne: in fols. Rowe made the change.
SCENE IV.—Country near Dunsinane: a Wood in view.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Malcolm, old Siward, and his Son, Macduff, Montaigne, Cathness, Angus, Lenox, Rosse, and Soldiers marching.

Mac. Cousins, I hope, the days are near at hand, That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.

Siv. What wood is this before us?

Ment. The wood of Birnam.

Mac. Let every soldier hew him down a bough, And bear 't before him: thereby shall we shadow The numbers of our host, and make discovery Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Siv. We learn no other but the confident tyrant Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure Our setting down before 't.

Mac. 'Tis his main hope; For where there is advantage to be gotten, Both more and less have given him the revolt, And none serve with him but constrained things, Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let us just censure Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

Siv. The time approaches, That still with due decision make us know What we shall say we have, and what we owe, Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate, But certain issue strokes must arbitrate; Towards which, advance the war. [Exeunt, marching.

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, Macbeth, Seyton, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls: The cry is still, "They come!" Our castle's strength Will laugh a siege to scorn; here let them lie, Till famine and the ague eat them up. Were they not fare'd 2 with those that should be ours, We might have met them thankful, heard to beard, [A cry within, of Women.

And beat them backward home. What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord. [Exit.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fear. The time has been, my sense would have qual'd 3 To hear a night-shriek; and my fell 4 of hair Would at a dismal treatise rouse, and stir. As life were in 't. I have supp'd full with horrors: Direness, familiar to my slaughters thoughts, Cannot once start me.—

Re-enter Seyton.

Sey. Wherefore was that cry?

Macb. She should have died hereafter: There would have been a time for such a word.—To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, To the last syllable of recorded time; And all our yesterdays have lighted fools The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle! Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player, That struts and frets his hour upon the stage, And then is heard no more: it is a tale Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story, quickly.

1 given: in f. e. 2 Greater. 3 for'd: in f. e. 4 Not in f. e. 5 cool'd: in f. e. 6 Skin. 7 Not in f. e.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Plain before the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, Malcolm, old Siward, Macduff, &c., and their Army with Boughs.

Mal. Now near enough: your leafy screes throw down, And show like those you are.—You, worthy uncle, Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son, Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff, and we, Shall take upon's what else remains to do, According to our order.

Siv. Fare you well.— Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night, Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath, Those clamorous harbinger of blood and death. [Exeunt. Alarums continued.

SCENE VII.—The Same. Another Part of the Plain.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake: I cannot fly, But, bear-like, I must fight the course.—What's he, That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young Siward.

Yo. Siv. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou 'lt be afraid to hear it. Yo. Siv. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name, Than any is in hell.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siv. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant: with my sword I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

[They fight, and young Siward is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born woman: But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, Brandish'd by man that is of a woman born. [Exit. Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face!
If thou be slain, and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their staves: either thou, Macbeth,
Or else my sword, with an unbatter'd edge,
I sheathe again unshed. There thou shouldst be:
By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune,
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarum.]

Rosse. This way, my lord. — The castle's gently render'd:
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war.
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.
Macb. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.
Ros. Enter, sir, the castle. [Exeunt. Alarum.]

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macb. Turn, hell-hound, turn.
Macd. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
But get thee back; my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macb. I have no words;
My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain,
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.

Macd. Thou lostest labour.
As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed:
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macb. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel, whom thou still hast serv'd,
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man;
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That patter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope. — I'll not fight with thee.

Macb. Then, yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze of the time:
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
"Here may you see the tyrant."

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
And to be tainted with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou opp'st be of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body

I throw my warlike shield: lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be he that first cries, "Hold, enough!"

[Exeunt. Fighting.

Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with Drum and Colours,
Malcolm, old Siward, Rosse, Thanes, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would, the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.
Ros. Some must go off; and yet, by these I see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.
Rosse. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:
He only liv'd but till he was a man,
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd:
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.
Ros. Then he is dead?
Rosse. Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Ros. Had he his hurts before?

Rosse. Ay, on the front.

Ros. Why then, God's soldier be he.
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Ros. He's worth no more:

They say, he parted well, and paid his score,
And God be with him! — Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter Macduff, with Macbeth's Head, on a Pike.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands
[Sticking the Pike in the ground.]
The usurper's cursed head: the time is free.
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—
Hail, king of Scotland!

Mal. Hail, king of Scotland! [Flourish.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time,
Before we reckon with our several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,
Henceforth be earls; the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time, —
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad,
That fled the snare of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life; — this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place.
So, thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE, Elsinore.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.
Francisco on his Post. Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. Who’s there?
Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold Yourself.
Ber. Long live the king!
Fran. Bernardo?
Ber. He.
Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.
Ber. ’Tis new 1 struck twelve: get thee to bed, Francisco.
Fran. For this relief much thanks. ’Tis bitter cold, And I am sick at heart.
Ber. Have you had quiet guard?
Fran. Not a mouse stirring.
Ber. Well, good night.
If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is there?
Hor. Friends to this ground.
Mar. And liegenmen to the Dane.
Fran. Give you good night.
Mar. O! farewell, honest soldier: Who hath reliev’d you?
Fran. Bernardo has my place.
Give you good night. [Exit Francisco.

What is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.
Ber. Welcome, Horatio: welcome, good Marcellus.
Hor. What, has this thing appear’d again to-night?
Ber. I have seen nothing.
Mar. Horatio says, ’tis but our fantasy,

And will not let belief take hold of him,
Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us:
Therefore, I have entreated him along
With us, to watch the minutes of this night;
That, if again this apparition come,
He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush! ’twill not appear.
Ber. Sit down awhile;
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.
Ber. Last night of all,
When yond’ same star, that’s westward from the pole,
Had made his course 3 illumine that part of heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself,
The bell then beating one,—

Mar. Peace! break thee off: look, where it comes again!

Enter Ghost, armed.*

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that’s dead.
Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.
Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.
Hor. Most like:—it harrows me with fear, and wonder.
Ber. It would be spoke to.
Mar. Question it, Horatio.
Hor. What art thou, that usurp’st this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike form,
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!
Mar. It is offended.
Ber. See! it stalks away.
Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak!

[Exit Ghost.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT I.

Mar. 'T is gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble, and look pale. Is not this something more than fantasy? What think you on 't? Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe, Without the sensible and true avouch Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king? Hor. As thou art to thyself. Such was the very armour he had on, When he th' ambitious Norway combated: So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle, He smote the sledged Polack's on the ice. 'T is strange.

Mar. Thus, twice before, and jump'd at this dead hour, With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch. Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not; But in the gross and scope of mine opinion, This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down; and tell me, ho that knows, Why this same strict and most observant watch So nightly tells the subject of the land? And why such daily cast of brazen cannon, And foreign mart for implements of war? Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task Does not divide the Sunday from the week? What might be toward, that this sweaty haste Doth make the night joint labourer with the day? Who is 't, that can inform me?

Hor. That can I; At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, Whose image even but now appear'd to us, Was, as you know, for Fortinbras of Norway, Theroeto prick'd on by a most emulat prise, Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet (For so this side of our known world esteem'd him) Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact, Well ratified by law and heraldry, Did forfeit with his life all those his lands, Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror: Against the which, a meeting was gaged by our king; which had return'd To the inheritance of Fortinbras, Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same co-mart, And carriage of the article design'd, His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras, Of unimproved mettle hot and full, Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there, Shark'd up a list of lawless resolute, For food and diet, to some enterprise That hath a stomach in 't: which is no other (As it doth well appear unto our state) But to recover of, by strong hand And terms compell'd, the foemen lands So by his father lost. And this, I take it, Is the main motive of our preparations, The source of this our watch, and the chief head Of this post-haste and romage in the land.

Ber. I think, it be no other, but e'en so? Well may it sort, that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch: so like the king That was, and is, the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye. In the most high and palmy state of Rome, A little ere the mightyest Julia fell, The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets: As, stars with trains of fire and dews of blood, Disasters in the sun; and the moist star, Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands, Was sick almost to dooms-day with eclipse: And even the like precurse of fierce events— As harbingers preceding still the fates, And prologue to the omen coming on— Have heaven and earth, together demonstrated Unto our climates and countrymen.—

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft! behold! lo, where it comes again! I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion! If thou hast any sound, or use of voice, Speak to me:

If there be any good thing to be done, That may to thee do ease, and grace to me, Speak to me:

If thou art privy to thy country's fate, Which happily foreknowing may avoid, O, speak! Or, if thou hast uphol'd in thy life Extorted treasure in the womb of earth, For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death, Speak of it: stay, and speak!—Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan? Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'T is here!

Mar. 'T is gone.

Hor. 'T is here! We do it wrong, being so majestical, To offer it the show of violence; For it is, as the air, invulnerable, And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew. Hor. And then it started, like a guilty thing Upon a fearful summons. I have heard, The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat Awake the god of day; and at his warbling, Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air, Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies To his confine; and of the truth herein This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.

Some say, that over 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated, This bird of dawning singeth all night long: And then, they say, no spirit dares stir abroad; The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike, No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm, So hallow'd and so gracious is that time. Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it. But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad, Walks o'er the dew of yond' high eastern hill, Breaks our watch up; and, by my advice, Let us impart what we have seen to-night Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life, This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him. Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it, As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do 't, I pray; and I this morning know Where we shall find him most conveniently. [Exit.}
SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State.

Senet. Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, Voltimand, Cornelius, Lords, and Attendants. The King takes his Seat.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death
The memory be green, and that it us befitted
To bathe our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one brow of wo;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wiser sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore, our sometime sister, now our queen,
Th' imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 't were with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious, and one dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole,—
Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along: for all, our thanks.
Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death
Our state to be dishonour'd and out of fame,
Colleged with the dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bands of law,
To our most valiant brother.—So much for him,
Now for ourself; and for this time of meeting.
Thus much the business is: we have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His farther gait herein, in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject: and we here despatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no farther personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow. [Giving them,]
Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.
Cor. Vol. In that, and all things, will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell.

[Execut Voltimand and Cornelius.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice: what wouldst thou beg, Laertes?
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking.
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer.

Your leave and favour to return to France:
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty to your coronation.
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says
Polonius?

Pol. He would be glad, my lord, wringing from me my slow leave;—
By laboursome petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:

I do beseech you, give him leave to go.
King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,
And thy best graces: spend it at thy will.—
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind.

[Aside.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much in the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nightly-like colour off,
And let things go look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not, for ever, with thy tongue pursue
Seek for thy noble father in the dust:
Thou know'st, 'tis common; all that live must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not seems.
'T is not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor winy suspicion of fore'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the rejected labour of the visage,
Together with all forms, all forms, all shows of grief,
That can denote me truly: these, indeed, seem,
For they are actions that a man might play;
But I have that within, which passeth show,
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature,
Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation, for some term,
To do obsequious' sorrow: but to persevere
In obstinate condolence is a course
Of impious stubbornness: 'tis unmanly grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven;
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient.
An understanding simple and unschool'd:
For what, we know, must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,
Take it to heart? 'Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd, whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe, and think of us
As of a father; for, let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And, with no less nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg
It is most retrograde to our desire;
And, we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Hamlet:
I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply:
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;
This gentle and unfore'd gend' of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart; in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT I.

But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heaven shall bruise again,
Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Flourish. Exit King, Queen, Lords, &c.

POLONIUS, and LAERTES.

Ham. O! that this too, too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew;
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter. O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world.
Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seeds; things rank, and gross in nature,
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead—nay, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not betheem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it feed's upon. Yet within a month—
Let me not think on 't. Fraught, my time is woman!
A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even she,
(O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer)—married with my uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules: within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married.—O, most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to inconceivable sheers!
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good;
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Enter HORATIO, BERNARDO, and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you:

Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?—

Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord.

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even, sir.

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?

We'll teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student:
I think, it was to see my mother's wedding.

*Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio: the funeral bak'd meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

*Would it had met my dearest love heaven
Ere ever I had seen that day, Horatio!

My father,—methinks, I see my father.

Hor. O! where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once; he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw whom?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father!

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attaint ear, till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead vast and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,
Armed at point, exactly, cap-a-pie,
Appears before them, and with solemn march
 Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd,
By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes,
Within his tranceleon's length; whilst they, bechill'd.
Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Staid dumb, and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did,
And I with them the third night kept the watch;
Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and good,
The apparition comes. I knew your father;
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did,

But answer made it none; yet once, methought,
It lifted up its head, and did address
Itself to motion, like as it would speak;
But, even then, the morning cock crew loud,
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true;
And we did think it writ down in our duty,
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.

Hold you the watch to-night?

All. We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

All. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then, saw you not his face?

Hor. O! yes, my lord; he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What! look'd he frowningly?

Hor. A countenance more

In sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale, or red?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there!

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like,

Very like. Stay'd it long?

Hor. With one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Hor. Not when I saw it.

Ham. His beard was grizzled? no?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
SCENE III.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night:
Perchance, 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceiv'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever she shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue:
I will require your loves. So, fare you well:
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you. Farewell. [Exeunt Horatio, Marcellus, and Bernardo.]

My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt some foul play: would the night were come!
Till then, sit still, my soul. Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Polonius's House.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd; farewell:
And, sister, as the winds give benefit,
And convoy assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,
Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood;
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute;
No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more!

For nature, creased, does not grow alone
In thews, and bulk: but, as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now;
And now no soil, nor cantel, doth besmirch
The virtue of his will; but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own,
For he himself is subject to his birth;
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
The safety and health of this whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body,
Whereof he is the head. Then, if he says he loves you,
It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,
As he in his particular act and place;
May give his saying deed; which is no farther,
Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then, weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs,
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chaster maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon;
Virtue itself escapes not calumnious strokes;
The tanker calls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclosed;

And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall th' effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
Wherein, like a natural and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own read.*

Laer. O! fear me not.
I stay too long;—but here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes? aboard, aboard, for shame!
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There,—my blessing with you;
[Leaving his hand on Laertes' head.]

And these few precepts in thy memory
Look thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any other note express'd in thine act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar:
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
Bear 't, that th' opposer may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man,
And they in France, of the best rank and station,
Are of a most select and generous choice3 in that,
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all,—to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.

Farewell: my blessing season this thee!

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites thee: go; your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'T is in my memory lock'd,

And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell.

Pol. What is 't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord.

Pol. Marty, well bethought:

'T is told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous.
If it be so, (as 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly,
As it behoves my daughter, and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection? pooh! you speak like a green girl,
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

1 These two words, not in folio. 2 sanctity: in folio. 3 peculiar sect and force: in folio. 4 Counsel. 5 chief: in f. e. 6 invents: in quarto.
Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby; That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay, Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly; Or, not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Running it thus, you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love, In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to. Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my So, with almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springs to catch woodcocks. I do know, When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter, Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both, Even in their promise, as it is a making,— You must not take for fire. From this time, Be somewhat seanter of your maiden presence: Set your entertainments at a higher rate, Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet, Believe so much in him, that he is young; And with a larger tether may he walk, Than has been given you. In few, Ophelia, Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers Not of that die which their investments show, But mere importunators of unholy suits,Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds, The better to beguile. This is for all,— I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth, Have you so squander any moment's leisure, As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet. Look to 't, I charge you; so now, come your ways. Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping, and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. It think, it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it: then draws near the season, Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk. [A Flourish of Trumpets, and Ordnance shot off, within. What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night; and takes his rouse, Keeps wassal, and the swaggering up-spring reels; And as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down, The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't? But to my mind,—though I am native here, And to the manner born,—it is a custom More honour'd in the breach, than the observance. This heavy-headed revel, east and west Makes us traduced and tax'd of other nations: They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes From our achievements, though perform'd at height, The pith and marrow of our attribute. So, of it chance in particular men, That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
SCENE V.—A more remote Part of the Platform.

Enter Ghost and Hamlet.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak, I'll go no farther.

Ghost. Mark me, I am thy father's spirit; Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night, And for the day confin'd to lastling fires, Till the foul enimes, done in my days of nature, Are burnt and pur'd away; But that I am forbid To tell the secrets of my prison-house, I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood, Make thy two eyes like stars start from their spheres, Thy knotted and combin'd locks to part, And every particular hair to stand on end, Like quills upon the fretful porcupine: But this eternal blazon must not be To ears of flesh and blood.—List, list, O list!—

If thou didst ever thy dear father love,—

Ham. O God!—

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder, Ham. Murder?—

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is; But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Hasten me to know 't, that I, with wings as swift As meditation, or the thoughts of love, May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt; And droller shouldst thou be than the fat weed That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf, Wouldst thou not stir in this: now, Hamlet, hear. 'T is given out, that sleeping in mine orchard, A serpent stung me: so the whole ear of Denmark Is by a forged process of my death Rankly abus'd; but know, thou noble youth, The serpent that did sting thy father's life Now wears his crown.

Ham. O, my prophetic soul! my uncle?—

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast, With witchcraft of his wilt, with traitorous gifts, (O wicked will, and gifts, that have the power So to seduce!) won to his shameful lust The will of my most seeming virtuous queen. O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there! From me, whose love was of that dignity, That it went hand in hand even with the vow I made to her in marriage; and to decline Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd, Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven, So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd, Will sate itself in a celestial bed, And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks, I scent the morning air: Brief let me be.—Sleeping within mine orchard, My custom always in the afternoon, Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole, With juice of cursed hebenon in a phial, And in the porches of mine ears did pour The leperous distillation; whose effect Holds such an enmity with blood of man, That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through The nether gates and all the aerys of the body; And with a sudden vigour it doth posset, And curd, like eager* droppings into milk, The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine: And a most instant tetter barker'd about, Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand, Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despoil'd: Cut off even in the blossom of my sin, Unhouse'd, disappointed, unanch'd: No reckoning made, but sent to my account With all my imperfections on my head: O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not; Let not the royal bed of Denmark be A couch for luxury and damnd incest. But, howsoever thou pursuest this act, Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive Against thy mother aught: leave her to heaven, And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge, To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once. The glow-worm shows the matin to be near, And 'gins to pale his unreflecting fire:

Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me. [Exit.]

Ham. O, all you host of heaven! O earth! What else? And shall I couple hell?—O fie!—Hold, heart; And you, my sinews, grow not instant old, But bear me stiffly!—Remember thee? Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat In this distracted globe. Remember thee? Yes, from the table of my memory I'll wipe away all trivial fond records, All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past, That youth and observation copied there, And thy commandment all alone shall live Within the book and volume of my brain, Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven! O, most pernicious and peridious woman! O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain! My tables,—meet it is, I set it down, That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain; At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark.—

[Writing.]
So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
It is, "Adieu, adieu! remember me?"
I have sworn't.

Hor. [Within.] My lord! my lord!
Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet!
Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!
Mar. [Within.] So be it!
Hor. [Within.] Illo, ho, ho, my lord!
Ham. Hillo, ho, ho! boy! come, bird, come.
Enter Horatio and Marcellus.
Mar. How is't, my noble lord?
Hor. What news, my lord?
Ham. O, wonderful!
Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. You'll reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven,
Mar. Nor I, my lord.
Ham. How say you then; would heart of man once think it?—
But you'll be secret.

Hor. Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.
Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark,
But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave
To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right: you are i' the right;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part:
You, as your business and desire shall point you,
For every man hath business and desire,
Such as it is: and, for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'll go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.
Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; yes,
'Faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,
And much offence too. 'Touching this vision here,
It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you:
For your desire to know what is between us,
O'er-master 't as you may. And now, good friends,
As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is't, my lord?

Mar. We will.
Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.

Hor. Mar. My lord, we will not.

Ham. Nay, but swear 't.

Hor. In faith,

My lord, not I.

Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.

Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, true-penny?

Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,—
Consent to swear.

Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Hie et ubique? then, we'll shift our ground. —

Come hither, gentlemen,
And lay your hands again upon my sword:
Never to speak of this that you have heard,

Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' the earth so fast?

A worthy pioneer!—Once more remove, good friends.

Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy. But come;—

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,

How strange or odd soe'er I bear myself;—

As I, perchance, hereafter shall think meet

To put an antic disposition on,—

That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,

With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,

As, "Well, well, we know;"—or, "We could, an if we would;"—

Or, "If we list to speak;"—or, "There be, an if they might;"—

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note

That you know aught of me:—this not to do,

So grace and mercy at your most need help you,

Swear.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!—So, gentlemen,

With all my love I do commend me to you:

And what so poor a man as Hamlet is

May do, 't express his love and friend ing to you,

God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;

And still your fingers on your lips, I pray,—

The time is out of joint; O cursed spite!

That e'er I was born to set it right.—

Nay, come; let's go together.

[Exeunt.]
What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him: take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.
Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling,
Drabbling—you may go so far.
Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.
Pol. 'Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency:
That's not my meaning; but breathe his faults so quaintly,
That they may seem the taints of liberty;
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind;
A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.
Rey. But, my good lord,—
Pol. Wherefore should you do this?
Rey. I would know that.
Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant.
You laying those slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,
Mark you,
Your party in converses, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd,
He closes with you in this consequence:
"Good sir," or so; or "friend," or "gentleman;"
According to the phrase, or the addition
Of man, and country.
Rey. Very good, my lord.
Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does—
What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was About to say something,—where did I leave?
Rey. At closes in the consequence,
As "friend or so," and "gentleman."
Pol. At, closes in the consequence,—ay, marry;
He closes thus:—"I know the gentleman;
I saw him yesterday, or 't other day,
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,
There was he gaming; there o'took in his rouse;
There falling out at tennis: or perchance,
I saw him enter such a house of sale,
Videlocet, a brothel!" so forth.
See you now;
Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlasses, and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out:
So, by my former lecture and advice,
Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?
Rey. My lord, I have.
Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.
Rey. Good my lord.
Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.
Rey. I shall, my lord.
Pol. And let him ply his music.
Rey. Well, my lord. [Exit.

Enter OPHELIA.
Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter?
Oph. Alas, my lord! I have been so affrighted!
Pol. With what, in the name of God?
Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my chamber,

Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd;
No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his neckle;
Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;
And with a look so pitious and purport,
As if he had been loosed out of hell,
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.
Pol. Mad for thy love?
Oph. My lord, I do not know;
But, truly, I do fear it.
Pol. What said he?
Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;
Then goes he to the length of all his arm,
And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
He falls to such perusal of my face,
As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so:
At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,
And trieth his head thus waving up and down,—
He rais'd a sigh so pitious and profound,
That it did seem to shatter all his bulk,
And end his being. That done, he lets me go,
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
For out o' doors he went without their help,
And to the last bended their light on me.
Pol. Come, go with me: I will go seek the king.
This is the very ecstasy of love;
Whose violent property fordoes itself,
And leads the will to desperate undertakings,
As oft as any passion under heaven;
That does afflicht our natures. I am sorry,—
What! have you given him any hard words of late?
Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did command,
I did repel his letters, and denied
His access to me.
Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorry that with better heed and judgment
I had not quoted him: I fear'd, he did but trifle,
And meant to wreck thee; but, bestrew my jealousy.
By heaven, 1 it is as proper to our age
To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions,
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:—
This must be known; which, being kept close, might move
More grief to hide, than hate to utter love. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, ROSENCRANZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern:
Moreover, that we did much long to see you,
The need we have to use you, did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it,
Sith nor th' exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was. What it should be,
More than his father's death, that thus hath put him
So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,
That, being of so young days brought up with him,
And since so neighbour'd to his youth and humour, 2
That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
Some little time; so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,
Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus. 3
That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

1 wit: in quarto, 1604. 2 O my lord: in quartos. 3 Not in folio. 4 Observed. 5 It seems: in folio. 6 deem: in folio. 7 havoir : in quarto. 8 This line is not in folio.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT II.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you; And, sure I am, two men there are not living, To whom he more adheres. If it will please you To show us so much gentry, and good will, As to expend your time with us a while, For the supply and profit of our hope, Your visitation shall receive such thanks As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of us, Put your dread pleasures more into command Than to entreaty.

Guilt. But! we both obey; And here give up ourselves, in the full bent, To lay our service freely at your feet, To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosen-

And I beseech you instantly to visit [crantz: My too much changed son.—Go, some of you, And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is:

Guilt. Heavens make our presence, and our practices, Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen! [Exit Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and some Attendants.]

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Th' ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my goodlie, I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, Both to my God, one to my gracious king: And I do think, (or else this brain of mine Hunts not the trail of policy so sure As it hath us'd to do) that I have found The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O! speak of that; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to th' ambassadors; My news shall be the fruit, to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in.

[Exit Polonius.

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main; His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

Re-enter Polonius, with Voltimand and Cornelius.

King. Well, we shall sit him.—Welcome, my good friends.

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway? Volt. Most fair return of greetings, and desires. Upon our first, he sent out to suppress His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack,

But, better look'd into, he truly found It was against your highness: whereat griev'd,— That so his sickness, age, and impotence, Was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests On Fortinbras; which he in brief obays, Receives rebuke from Norway, and, in fine, Makes vow before his uncle, never more To give th' assay of arms against your majesty. Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy, Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee, And his commission to employ those soldiers, So levy'd as before, against the Polack:

With an entreaty, herein farther shown.

[Giving a Paper.

That it might please you to give quiet pass Through your dominions for this enterprise, On such regards of safety, and allowance, As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well; And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read, Answer, and think upon this business: Mean time, we thank you for your well-look labour. Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together: Most welcome home.

[Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.

Pol. This business is well ended.

My liege, and madam; to expostulate What majesty should be, what duty is, Why day is day, night night, and time is time, Were nothing but to waste day, night, and time. Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes, I will be brief. Your noble son is mad: Mad call I it; for, to define true madness, What is't, but to be nothing else but mad: But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all. That he is mad: 't is true: 't is true, 't is pity, And pity 't is 't is true: a foolish figure; But farewell it, for I will use no art. Mad let us grant him then; and now remains, That we find out the cause of this effect; Or rather say, the cause of this defect, For this effect defective comes by cause: Thus it remains, and the remainder thus. Perpend. I have a daughter; have, while she is mine; Who, in her duty and obedience, mark, Hath given me this. Now gather, and surmise.

[Reads.

—'Tis to the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautiful Ophelia,—

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; "beautified" is a vile phrase; but you shall hear.—Thus:

In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.—

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful:— Doubt thou the stars are fire, [Reads. Doubt, that the sun doth move; Doubt truth to be a liar, But never doubt I love. O dear Ophelia! I am ill at these numbers: I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O! most best, believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet." This in obedience hath my daughter shown me; And more above, hath his solicitings, As they fell out by time, by means, and place, All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she receiv'd his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful, and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think, When I had seen this hot love on the wing, (As I perceive'd it, I must tell you that, Before my daughter told me) what might you, Or my dear majesty, your queen here, think, If I had play'd the desk, or table-book; Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb;
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight:
What might you think? no, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus I did bespeak:
"Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star!"
This must not be!" and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from her resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed, a short tale to make,
Fell into sadness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness; and by this declension,
Into the madness wherein he now raves,
And we all wait for.

King. Do you think 'tis this?

Pol. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, I'd fain know that,
That I have positively said, "'tis so,"
When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise.

[Pointing to his Head and Shoulders]
If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it farther?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks for hours together,
Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he doth, indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him:
Bo you and I belind an arras, then,
Mark the encounter; if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fallen thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away! I do beseech you, both away.
I'll board him presently.—O! give me leave.—
[Exit King, Queen, and Attendants]

How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then, I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir: to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a good kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk in the sun: conception is a blessing:
but not as your daughter may conceive:—friend, look to't.

Pol. [Aside.] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter:—yet he knew me not at first; he said, I was a fishmonger. He is far gone, far gone:
and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love;
very near this. I'll speak to him again.—What do you read,
my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?
very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars' bodies, and our monarchs, and outstretched heroes, the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the heart? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. Oost. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why any thing, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your faces, which your modesties have not enough to colour: I know, the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever- preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, to be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

Ros. What say you? [To Guildenstern.

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you. [Aside.]—If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen mount no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises: and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fires, why, it appeareth nothing to me, but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me; [Ros.smiles.] no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenthen entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way, and hither are they coming to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target: the lover shall not sigh gratis: the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled o' the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for t.— What players are they?

Ros. Even those who were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it, they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. Nay, I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavours keeps in the wonted pace; but there is, sir, an eyry of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What are they children? who maintains them? how are they educated? will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are not better) their writers do them wrong, to make them explain against their own succession?

Ros. 'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guil. O! there has been much booing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hereules, and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange; for my uncle is king of Denmark, and those, that would make moves at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. 'Sblood! there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. [Trumpets within.]

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come, then; the appurtenances of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players (which, I tell you, must show fairly outward) should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw. [Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; and you too;—at each ear aearer: that great baby; you see there, is not yet out of his swaddling-cloths.

Ros. He is the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to tell me of the players; mark it.—You may right, sir: o' Monday morning: 'tis then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When

Roscius was an actor in Rome.—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buzz, buzz!

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be the worse, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ, and the liberty,1 these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, Judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why—

"One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well."3

Pol. Still on my daughter. [Aside.

Ham. Am I not the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why, "As by lot, God wot." And then, you know,

"It came to pass, as most like it was."

The first row of the pious chanson will show you more: for look, where my abridgment comes.

Enter Four or Five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all.—I am glad to see thee well—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! why, thy face is vanished4 since I saw thee last: com'dst thou to hear me in Denmark?—What, my young lady and mistress! By'Lord, by' ladyship is nearer to heaven, than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine.5 Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We'll o'en t'et like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

1 Play. What speech, my good6 lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once,—but it was never act; or, if it was, not above once, for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 't was caviare to the general: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. And indeed, there was no salt1 in the lines in the manner to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indite the author of affectation, but called it an honest method, as1 wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Æneas' tale6 to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this line:—let me see, let me see;—

"The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast;"—it is not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

"The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose sable arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble

Pol. Look, whether he has not turned his colour, and has tears in 's eyes.—Pr'ythee, no more.
Ham. 'Tis well; I'li have thee speak out the rest of this' soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstracts, and brief chronicles, of the time: as thy father was, thy son would have been a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live.
Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.
Ham. God's bodkin, man, much better: use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.
Pol. Come, sirs.
[Exit Polonius, with some of the Players.
Ham. Follow him, friends: we'li hear a play to-morrow.—Dost thou hear me, old friend? can you play the murder of Gonzago?
1 Play, Ay, my lord.
Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in' t, could you not?
1 Play. Ay, my lord.
Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My good friends, [To Ros. and Guild.] I'Il leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.
Ros. Good my lord!
[Ereunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.
Ham. Ay, so, good bye yout.—Now I am alone.—O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! Is it not monstrous, that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, Could force his soul so to his own conceit, That from her working all his visage wan'd; Tears in his eyes, distraction in his aspect, A broken voice, and his whole function suiting With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing: For Hecuba! What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, That he should weep for her? What would he do, Had he the motive and the cue for passion, That I have? He would drown the stage with tears, And cleave the general ear with horrid speech; Make mad the guilty, and appall the free, Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed, The very faculties of eyes and ears. Yet I, A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak, Like John a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause, And can say nothing; no, not for a king, Upon whose property, and most dear life, A dam'd defeat was made. Am I a coward? Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across? Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face? Tweakes by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat, As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this? Ha! 'S wounds! I should take it; for it cannot be, But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall To make transgression' bitter, or ere this I should have fatted all the region kites With this slave's offal. Bloody, bawdy villain! Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain! O, vengeance! Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave; That I, the son of a dear father's murder'd, Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell, Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words, And fall a cursing, like a very drab, A scullion! Fie upon 't! foh! About my brain!—I have heard, That guilty creatures, sitting at a play, Have by the very cunning of the scene Been struck so to the soul, that presently They have proclaim'd their malefactions; For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak With most miraculous organ. I'Il have these players Play something like the murder of my father, Before mine uncle: I'Il observe his looks; I'Il tell him to the quick: if he but blench, I know my course. The spirit, that I have seen, May be the devil; and the devil hath power To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps, Out of my weakness, and my melancholy, As he is very potent with such spirits, Abuses me to damn me. I'Il have grounds More relative than this: the play's the thing, Wherein I'Il catch the conscience of the king. [Exit

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.
Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you, by no drift of conference, Get from him why he puts on this confusion, Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?
Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted; But from what cause he will by no means speak.
Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded, But with a crafty madness keeps aloof, When we would bring him on to some confession Of his true state.
Queen. Did he receive you well?
Ros. Most like a gentleman.
Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition. Ros. Niggard of question; but to our demands

The fair Ophelia.—Nymph, in thy orisons,
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. [Coming forward.] Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?
Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.
Ham. No, not I; I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, I know right well you did;
And with them words of so sweet breath compos'd
As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,
Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord!

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce with itself than honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly: for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it. I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better my mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my back, than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to get them in. What should such fellows as I do, crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no where1 but in's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O! help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. I'll go thee to this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell! Or, if thou wilt marry, marry a fool, for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery; go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings2 too, well enough: God hath given you one face3 and you make yourselves another: you jog, you amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to; I'll no more on't: it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages, those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go.

[Exit Hamlet.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT III.

The scene is the court of Denmark. The king and queen are conversing, while Hamlet stands in the background. The queen speaks of her grief at the loss of her father, the old king, and of her love for Hamlet. The king then turns to Hamlet and asks him about the play that he has just witnessed. Hamlet tells the king that the play was a representation of a murder that had been committed in his country, and that it was meant to be a test of the king's loyalty. The king is impressed by Hamlet's words and asks him to continue with his plan to uncover the truth.

1. Play. I hope, we have reformed that indifferently with us. —

Ham. O! reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though in the mean time some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that's Villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. —

[Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.]

Ham. What, ho! Horatio! —

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ham. What, ho! Horatio! —

Enter Horatio! —

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation coped withal.

Hor. O! my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter;
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits,
To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No; let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee.
Where thirst may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?
Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice,
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing;
A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those,
Whose blood and judgment are so well commingled,
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please. Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As do I thee.—Something too much of this,—

There is a play to-night before the king:
One scene of it comes near the circumstance,
Which I have told thee, of my father's death;
I pr'ythee, when thou seest that act a-foot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul
Observe mine uncle: if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen,
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stilly. Give him heedful note;
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And, after, we will both our judgments join
In measure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord;
If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft.
SCENE II.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Ham. They are coming to the play: I must be idle; Get you a place.

Senet. Danish March. Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosenkranz, Guildenstern, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the camellion's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed. You cannot feed caps so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet: these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now.—My lord, you played once in the university, you say? [To Polonius.

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. Did I en掛けt Julius Cæsar: I was killed i' the Capitol: Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet; sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the King.

Ham. Lady, shall I tire in your lap?

[Exeunt.

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I mean country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God! your only jig-maker.* What should a man do, but be merry? for, you look, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within those two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, by 'r-ladys, he must build churches then, or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse;* whose epitaph is, 'For, O! for, O! the hobby-horse is forgot.'

Trumpets sound. The dumb Show enters.

Enter a King and Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embraceth him. She kneels, and makes show of profession unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Aonon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and poors poison in the King's ear, and exit. The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner wooed the Queen with gifts; she seems loth and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mewing mallecho;* it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel: they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him: be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught. I'll mark the play.

Pro. "For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently."

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the poesy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter the Player King and Player Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times has Phoebus' car gone round
Neptune's salt wash, and Tellus' orb'd ground;
And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen,
About the world have times twelve thirties been;
Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands,
Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon
Make us again count o'er, ere love be done.

But, wee is nigh! you are so sick of late,
So far from cheer, and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust,
Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must;
For women's fear and love hold quantity,
In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is proof hath made you know,
And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;
My operant powers their functions leave to do:
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, belov'd; and, haply, one as kind
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!
Such love must needs be treason in my breast:
In second husband let me be accurst;
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside.] Wornwood, wornwood.

P. Queen. The instances, that second marriage move,
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:
A second time I kill my husband dead,
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak,
But what we do determine oft we break.

P. Queen. Purpose is but the slave to memory,
Of violent birth, but poor validity;
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree,
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.

Most necessary 't is, that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactors* with themselves destroy:
Where joy most reveals, grief doth most lament;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.

'This world is not for aye; nor 't is not strange,
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;
The poor advance'd makes friends of enemies;
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend,
For who on needs shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly season's him his enemy.
But, orderly to end where I begun,
Our wills and fates do so contrary run,
That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:
So think thou wilt no second husband wed,
But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to 'me give' food, nor heaven light!
Sport and repose lock from me, day and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy,
Meets what I should have well, and it destroy!
Both here, and hence, pursue me lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wise!

Ham. If she should break her vow,—

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while:
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep.

Sleeps.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mishance between us twain!
[Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?
Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.
Ham. O! but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no; they do but jest, poison in jest: no offence i' the world.

King. What do you call the play?

This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna:
Gonzo is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista.
You shall see anon: 't is a knavish piece of work; but what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You have as good a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your lord,
if I could see the puppet's dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your husbands.—Begin, murderer! leave thy damnable faces, and begin.

Come.—The croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;
Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Ophelion's ban thieve blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magic and dire property,
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

Pours the Poison into the Sleeper's Ears.

Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for his estate.

His name's Gonzo: the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian. You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzo's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frightened with false fire?

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light!—away!
All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. Why, let the striken-deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play;
For some must watch, while some must sleep:
Thus runs the world away.

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me) with two Provincial roses on my raised shoes, get me a fellowship in a dry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

Hor. For thou dost know, O Damon dear!
This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very—peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio! I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come! some music! come; the recorders!
For if the king like not the comedy,
Why, then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy.—

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Come, some music?

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer,
To signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would, perhaps, plunge him into moro choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from the affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir: pronounce.

Guil. The queen your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased; but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother:
therefore no more, but to the matter. My mother, you say,—

Ros. Then, thus she says. Your behaviour has struck her into amazement and admiration.
HAMLET, in Promises

Whereto in which, excellent and now the would of Look of you, proverb per liberty, have for the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ay, sir, but "while the grass grows," the proverb is something musty.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O! the recorder: let me see one. To withdraw with you: why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

O, my lord! if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

My lord, I cannot.

I pray you.

Believe me, I cannot.

I do beseech you.

I know no touch of it, my lord.

It is as easy as lying; govern these ventages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look, you are these, the stops.

But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony: I have not the skill.

Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out of the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood! do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me. —

Enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir!

My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shape of a camel?

By the mass, and 't is like a camel, indeed.

Methinks, it is like a weasel.

It-backed like a weasel.

Or, like a whale?

Very like a whale.

Then, will I come to my mother by and by.

They fool me to the top of my bent. — I will come by and by.

I will say so. —

Enter Polonius.

By and by is easily said. — Leave me, friends.

'Tis now the very witching time of night,

When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out Contagion to this world. Stay yet a while. Would quake to look on. Soft! how to my mother. —

Of, heart! lose not thy nature; let not ever

The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:

Let me be cruel, not unnatural.

I will speak daggers to her, but use none;

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrisies;

How in my words soever she be shent, to give them seals never, my soul, consent! [Exit.

— A Room in the Same.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King, I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you; I your commission will forthwith despatch, And he to England shall along with you. The terms of our estate may not endure Hazard so dangerous, as doth hourly grow Out of his lunacies.

We will ourselves provide.

Most holy and religious fear it is, To keep those very many bodies safe, That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

The single and peculiar life is bound, With all the strength and armour of the mind, To keep itself: but man could, with more spirit, upon whose well depend and rest The lives of many. The cease of majesty Dies not alone; but like a gulf doth draw What's near it with it: it is a massy wheel, Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount, To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things Are mortis'd and adjoint'd; which, when it falls, Each small annexment, petty consequence, Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage; For we will fetters put upon this fear, Which now goes too free-footed.

We will haste us.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Enter Polonius.

My lord, he's going to his mother's closet. Behind the arras I'll convey myself; To hear the process: I'll warrant, she 'll tax him home; And, as you said, and wisely was it said; 't is meet that some more audience than a mother, Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege: I'll call upon you ere you go to bed, And tell you what I know.

Thanks, dear my lord. [Exit Polonius.

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;

It hath the primal eldest curse upon it; A brother's murder! — Pray can I not

Though inclination be as sharp as will:

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;

And, like a man to double business bound,

I stand in pause where I shall first begin,

And both neglect. What if this cursed hand

Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,

Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens,

To wash it white as snow? Wherefore serves mercy,

But to confront the visage of offence?

And what 's in prayer, but this two-fold force,

Or pardon'd, being down? Then, I'll look up:

[Scene III.]
My fault is past. But, O! what form of prayer
Can serve my turn?—Forbide me my foul murder!—
That cannot be; since I am still possessor
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd, and retain th' offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shew by justice,
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked purs'd itself
Buys out the law; but 'tis not so above:
There is no shuffling; there the action lies
In his true nature: and we ourselves compell'd,
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can: what can it not?
Yet what can it, when one can not repent?
O wretched state! O base, O death! O limed soul,
That struggling to be free,
Art more engaged! Help, angels! make assay;
Bow, stubborn knaves; and, heart, with strings of steel.
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe.
All may be well.

[Enter HAMLET behind, his Sword drawn.]

Ham. Now might I do it, now; now he is praying;
And now I'll do't; and so he goes to heaven,
And so am I reveng'd; That would be scal'd:
A villain kills my father; and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.
Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush'd as May,
And how his audit stands, who knows, save heaven?
But, in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him; and am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage
No.
Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent.
When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage;
Or in th' incestuous pleasures of his bed;
At gaming, swearing; or about some act,
That has no relief of salvation in't;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd, and black,
As hell, whereeto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sick days.

King. [Rising.] My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:
Words without thoughts never to heaven go.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in the Same.

[Enter Queen and Polonius.]

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him;
Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your grace hath scorn'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll scarce* me even here:
Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother!* 12

Queen. I'll warrant you,

Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Exit Polonius behind the Aaros.

Enter HAMLET.

Queen. Ham, now mother; what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Hamlet. Come, come; you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go; you question with a wicked* 12 tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so:
You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;
And,—would it* 12 were not so!—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay then, I'll send those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not
You go not till, I set you up a glass [budge;
Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me.

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help! help! help!

Ham. How now! a rat? [Drakes.] Dead for a ducat, dead. [HAMILLET makes a pass through the Aaros.

Pol. [Behind.] O! I am slain.

[Falls and dies.]

Queen. O me! what hast thou done?

Ham. [Coming forward]* 12 Nay, I know not:
Is it the king?

[Lefts the Aaros, and draws forth POLONIUS.]

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed; almost as bad; good mother,
As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, it was my word.—
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell.

[Seeing the body of POLONIUS.]

I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune; Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.—
Leave wringing of your hands. Peace! sit you down,
And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff:
If damned custom have not braved it so,
That it is* 12 proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st way thy tongue
In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty;
 Calls virtue, hypocrisy; takes off the rose
From the fair bud and tender top of love,
And sets a blister there; makes marriage vows
As false as driers' oaths: O! such a deed,
As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow,
\ Yea,\ 14 this solidity and compound mass,
With trystful* visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah me! what act,
That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?* 12

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers;
See, what a grace was seals'd and bowered on this brow:
Hyperion's Homer and his Hymen; where the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station* 12 like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination, and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man.
This was your husband: look you now, what follows.
Here is your husband: like a mildewed ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother* 12. Have you eyes?
Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

And batten 1 on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it, love; for, at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment
Would stoop 2 from this to that? Sense, 3 sure, you have,
Else, could you not have motion; but, sure, that sense
Is apoplex'd; for madness would not err,
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd,
But it reserv'd 4 some quantity of choice,
To serve in such a difference. What devil was 't
That thou hast, coz'd 5 you at headman-blind? 6
Eyes 7 without feeling, feeling without sight.
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so mope.
O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine 8 in a matron's bones,
To fluming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame,
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet! speak no more.
Thence must mine eyes into my very soul; 9
And there I see such black and grained spots,
As will not leave their tint.
Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed;
Slew'd 10 in corruption; honeying, and making love
Over the nasty sty;—
Queen. O, speak to me no more!
These words, like daggers enter in mine ears:
No more, sweet Hamlet.

Enter Ghost, unarm'd. 11
Ham. A king of shreds and patches.—
Save me, and hoiver 12 o'er me with your wings,
Heavenly guards!—What would you, gracious Queen. Alas! he's mad. 13
Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,
That, laps'd 14 in fume 15 and passion, leis go by
That important acting of your dread command?
O, say!
Ghost. Do not forget.
This visitation
Is but to what thy almost blunte purposed
But, look! amazement on thy mother sits:
O! step between her and her fighting soul;
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works.
Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady? 16
Queen. Alas! how is 't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with th' incorporeal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in th' alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrescences; 17
Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle son!
 Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience? Whereon do you look?
Ham. On him, on him!—Look you, how pale he glares!

The passages from "That" to "put on," and from "that" to "potency," are not in folio. 15. This line is not in folio.
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'T were good, you let him know;
For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe.
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that.

Queen. Alack! I had forgot: 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd, and my two school-

Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang'd,—
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport, to have the engine
Hoist with his own petar, and it shall go hard,
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon. 'O! 'tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet.—
This man shall set me packing.
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.

Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.—
Good night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; Hamlet dragging in Polonius.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. There's matter in these sights: these profound heaves
You must translate; 'tis fit we understand them.

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while,—

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend
Which is the mightier. In his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
He whips his napier out, and cries, "A rat! a rat!"
And in his brainish apprehension kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed! It had been so with us, had we been there.
His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,
This mad young man; but so much was our love,
We would not understand what most was fit,
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd;
O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure: he weeps for what is done.

King, O, Gertrude! come away,
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence: and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse.—Ho! Guildenstern!

[Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Friends both, go join you with some farther aid.
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he drag'd him:
Go, seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know, both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done: so, haply, slander—
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot,—may miss our name,
And hit the woundless air.—O, come away!
My soul is full of discord, and dismay.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Safely stowed.—[Ros., &c., within. Hamlet!—lord Hamlet! But soft! what noise?—Who calls on Hamlet?—O! here they come.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.

Ros. Tell us where 'tis; that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own.
Besides, to be demanded of a sponge, what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end; he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw, first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord!

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after.

[Exeunt.
SCENE III.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose!

Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;
And where 'tis so, 'tis offender's scourgèd is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,
This sudden sending him away must seem
Deliberate pause: diseases, desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are reliev'd,

Enter Rosencrantz.

Or not at all.—How now! what hath befallen?
Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?
Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.
Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?
Ham. At supper.
King. At supper! Where?
Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten; a certain convocation of palp'd 1 worms are c'en at him.
Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots. Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table; that's the end.

King. Alas, alas! 2 a Man a man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

Ham. What dost thou mean by this?
Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?
Ham. In heaven: send thither to see; if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall name him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. [To some Attendants.
Ham. He will stay till you come. [Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, 3 for thine especial safety,—
Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve
For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence With fiesty quickness: therefore, prepare thyself.
The bark is ready, and the wind at help,
Thy associates tend, and every thing is bent
For England.

Ham. For England?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou know'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. —But, come; for England! —Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife, man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother.

Come, for England! [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard;
Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night.

Away, for every thing is seal'd and done,
That else leans on th' affair: pray you, make haste.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught,
(As my great power thereof may give thee sense,
Since yet thy celerity looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free awe
Pays homage to us) thou may'st not coldly see
Our sovereign process, which imports at full,
By letters conjuring 4 to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England;
For like the hectic in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me. Till I know it's done,
How'er my hopes, my joys were ne'er begun. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter Fortinbras, and Forces, marching.

For. Go, captain; from me greet the Danish king:
Tell him, that by his license Fortinbras
Claims 5 the conveyance of a promis'd march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye;
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do 't, my lord.

For. Go safely 6 on.

[Exeunt Fortinbras and Forces.

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who Commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir,
Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole,
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polish power will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats,
Will not debate the question of this straw:
This is th' imposthume of much wealth and peace,
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without.
Why the man dies.—I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit Captain.

Ros. Will 't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

How all occasions do inform against me,
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good, and market of his time,
Be but to sleep, and feed? a beast, no more.
Sure, he, that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason,
To rust in us uns'd. Now, whether it be
Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
Of thinking too precisely on th' event,—
A thought, which quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,
And ever three parts coward,—I do not know

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT IV.

Why yet I live to say, "This thing 's to do?"  Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and means, To do 't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me: Witness this army, of such mass and charge, Led by a delicate and tender prince, Whose spirit, with divine ambition puff'd, Makes mottles at the invisible event; Exposing what is mortal, and unsure, To all that fortune, death, and danger dare, Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great, Is not to stir without great argument, But greatly to find quarrel in a straw, What honour 's at the stake. How stand I, then, That have a father killed, my mother married? Excitements of my reason and my blood, And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see The imminent death of twenty thousand men, That for a fantasy, and trick of fame, Go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause; Which is not tomb enough, and continent, To hide the slain?—O! from this time forth, My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!  [Exit.

SCENE V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Queen, Horatio, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate; indeed, distract:
Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?

Gent. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears, There 's tricks i' the world; and hems, and beats her heart;
Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt,
That carry but half sense. Her speech is nothing,
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to collection: they aim at it,
And both the words up fit to their own thoughts;
Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them.
Indeed would make one think, might be thought;
Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Hor. 'T were good she were spoken with, for she may strav
Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in.  [Exit Horatio.

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss:
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Horatio, with Ophelia, distracted.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?
Queen. How now, Ophelia?

Oph. How should I your true love know [Singing. From another one? By his cockle hat and staff, And his saval shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady! what imports this song?

He is dead and gone, lady, At his heels a green grass turf; At his heale a stone.

O, ho! Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,— Pray you, mark.

Oph. White his shroud as the mountain snow, [Singing. Enter King.

Queen. Alas! look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded with sweet flowers;
Which bewept to the grave? did go,
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God 'l you! They say, the owl was a baker's daughter.  Lord! we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!  King. Conclude upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let 's have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine:
Then, up he rose, and don'd his clothes,
And dupp'd the chamber door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la! without an oath, I'll make an end on 't;
By Gis and by Saint Charity,
Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do 't, if they come to 't;
By cock, they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promis'd me to wed:
He answers,
So would I ha' done, by yonder sun.
An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient; but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they would lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel.  —Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies: good night, good night.

[Exit.

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio.

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs
All from her father's death.  —And now, behold, O Gertrude, Gertrude!
When sorrow comes, they come not single spies,
But in battalions.  —First, her father slain;
Next, your son gone; and he most violent author
Of his own just remove: the people muddied,
Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers,
For good Polonius' death, and we have done but greenly,
In huffer-nugger to inter him; poor Ophelia,
Divided from herself, and her fair judgment,
Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts;
Last, and as much containing as all these,
Her brother is in secret come from France,
Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
And wants not buzzers to infect his ear
With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
Will nothing stick our persons to arraign
In ear and ear.  O! my dear Gertrude, this,
Like to a murder'd queen, in many places
Gives me superfluous death.  [A noise within.

[10] Our Saviour went into a baker's shop where the people were looking, and asked for bread: the mistress put a piece of dough in the oven for him, which was taken out by her daughter, and reduced to a small lump. It immediately began to swell, and the daughter to cry: heugh, heugh, heugh, which owl-like noises probably induced Our Saviour to change her into that bird.  —An old tradition, quoted by Douce.  [11] should: in folio.  [12] The rest of this line is not in folio.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

SCENE V.

Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

King. Attend! Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.

What is the matter?

Enter a Gentleman, in haste.1

Gent. Save yourself, my lord; the ocean, overhearing of his plot,
Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste,
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
O'erhears your officers! The rattle call him, king;
And, as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot; custom not known,
The ruffians and props of every word.
They cry, "Choose we; Laertes shall be king!"2
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
"Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!"

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trait they cry.

O! this is counter; you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.

Enter Laertes, with his sword drawn;4 Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

Dan. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave. [They retire without the Door.

Laer. I thank you: keep the door.—O thou vile king!

Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard;
Cries, cuckold, to my father; brands the harlot,
Even here, between the chaste ush'mrled brow
Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,
That thy rebellion so great-like?—
Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person:
There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would,
Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes,
Why thou art thus incensed.—Let him go, Gertrude.

Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

Laer. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with.
To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!
Conscience, and grace; to the profoundest pit!
I dare damnation. To this point I stand,
That both the worlds I give to negligence,
Let come what comes, only I'll be reveng'd
Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, will all the world's;
And, for my means, I'll husband them so well,
They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,
If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father's death, it's writ in your revenge,
That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe,
Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them, then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms;
And, like the kind life-rendering pelican,6
Repart them with my blood.

1 Not in folio. 2 In haste; not in f. e. 3 impetuous; in quarto, 1601, and folio. 4 Enter Laertes, armed: in f. e. 5 that calms: in folio. 6 politicians: in folio. 7 piece: in folio. 8 The rest of this direction is not in quarto. 9 Strengthening of the memory.—Knights. 10 O! you must: in folio. 11 Go to thy: in f. e. 12 was as white: in f. e. 13 Gramercy: in folio. 14 The rest of this direction is not in f. e.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT IV.

And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Let this be so:

He's mean'd of death, his obscure burial,
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his bones,
No noble rite, nor formal ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 't were from heaven to earth,
That I must call't in question.

King. So you shall;
And, where th' offence is, let the great axe fall.
I pray you, go with me.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Horatio, and a Servant.

Hor. What are they, that would speak with me?
Serv. Sailors, sir; they say, they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in.—[Exit Servant.

I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

[Enter Sailors.]

1 Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

1 Sail. He shall, sir, an' t please him. There's a letter for you, sir: it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads.] "Horatio, when thou shalt have over-looked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour; and in the grapple I boarded them; in the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did: I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldest fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear which will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold our course for England: of them I have much to tell thee.

Farewell,

He that knowest thine, Hamlet."

Come, I will give you way for these your letters; And do't the speedier, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them.—[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquaintance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So criminal and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O! for two special reasons,
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd,
But yet to me they are strong. The queen, his mother,
Lives almost by his looks; and for myself,
(My virtue, or my plague, be it either which)
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,

Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him;
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone,
Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost,
A sister driven into desperate terms;
Who was, if praises may go back again,
Sole challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections. But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think,
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our heard be shook with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more:
I loved your father, and we love ourselves;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—

How now! what news?

[Enter a Messenger.]

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet.

This to your majesty: this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudio; he receiv'd them Of him that brought them.

King. Leave us. [Exit Messenger.

Mess. If it be so. Laertes, (As he reads.)

(As how should it be so? how otherwise?)

Will you be ruled by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord; So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—
As liking not' his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it.—I will work him To an exploit, nowripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall; And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe, But even his mother shall uncharge the practice, And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rule'd;
The rather, if you could devise it so,
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.

You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him,
As did that one; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

SCENE VII.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears,
Than settled age his sables, and his weeds.
Importing health and graveness.—Two months since,
Here was a gentleman of Normandy:
I have on myself, and so mortal, that but dip I against the French,
And they can't well on horseback; but this gallant
Had witchcraft in't: he grew unto his seat;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incor'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beaute. So far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forging of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laert. A Norman, was't I?

Hamlet. The very same.

Laert. I know him well: he is the brooch, indeed,
And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you;
And gave you such a masterly report,
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your ripier most especially,
That he cried out, 't would be a sight indeed,
If one could match you: the scrimmers of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them. This report of his
Did, Hamlet so envomn with his envy,
That he could nothing do, but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you.

Now, out of this,—

Laert. What's out of this, my lord? A

Laert. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

King. Why ask you this?

Laert. Not that I think you did not love your father.
But that I know love is begun by time;
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it,
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a pleurisy,
Dies in his own too-muchh. That we would do,
We should do when we would; for this "would"
And hath abatements and delays as many, [changes.
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this "should" is like a spendthrift's sigh,
That hurts by casing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer.

Hamlet comes back: what would you undertake,
To show yourself your father's son in deed,
More than in words?

Laert. To cut his throat i' the church.

Hamlet. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuariz;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber.
Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you; bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foils; so that with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unblunted, and in a pass of practice
Requite him for your father.

Laert. I will do it;
And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank,
Which doth resemble the blood of France;
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death,
That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point
With this contagion, that if I gill him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's farther think of this;
Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means,
May fit us to the shape. If this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'T were better not assay'd: therefore, this project
Should have a back, or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see:—
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings, I ha't:
When in your motion you are hot and dry,
(As make your bouts more violent to that end)
And that he calls for drink, I'll have preferr'd him
A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stake;
Our purpose may hold there. But stay! what noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen?

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow.—Your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Laert. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant the brook,
That shows his leaues in the glassy stream;
Therewith fantastic garlands did she make—
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
That liberal shepherds gave a grosser name,
But our cold maids do make dead men's fingers call them.
There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeps
Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke
When down her woody trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide,
And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up;
Which time she chanted snatches of old lauds;—
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and reduc'd
Unto that element: but long it could not be.
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pulled the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To mundy death.

Laert. Alas! O, is she drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laert. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds.
Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,
The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord:
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly blocks it.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude.

How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I, this will give it start again,
Therefore, let's follow.

Exeunt.
SCENE I.—A Church Yard.

Enter two Clowns, with Spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that willfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crowners have set on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself willfully, it argues an act, and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself willingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman Delver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water: good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, will he, he goes, mark you that; but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry, is 't; crowners' quest-law.

2 Clo. Will you have the truth on 't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st; and the more pity, that great folk shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged: could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself.

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outliveth a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well; but how doth it well? it doth well to those that do ill: now, thou wilt ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may de well to thee. To 't again; come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To 't.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker: the houses that he makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee to your 't; fetch me a stoup of liquor. [Exit 2 Clown.

ACT V.

1 Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love,
Methought it was very sweet,
To contract; O! the time, for, ah! my behave
O! methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

1 Clo. But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me tilth the land,
As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches, one that would crown the god, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a curiour, which could say, "Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?" This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it, might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so, and now my lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see 't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats with them? mine aye to think on 't.

1 Clo. A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, [Sings,
For—and a shrouding sheet:
O! a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest as met me.

[Throws up another skull.

Ham. There's another: why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits now, his quilletts, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the scone with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humpf! This fellow might be in 's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchement made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow.—Whose grave's this, sir?

1 Clo. Mine, sir,—
O! a pit of clay for to be made [Sings,
For such a guest as met me.

Ham. I think, it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in it.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.

1 Clo. O! a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest as met me.
1 Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in 't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in 't, to be in 't, and say it is thine; it is for the dead, not for the quick; therefore, thou liest.

1 Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 't will away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

1 Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in 't?

1 Clo. One, that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is; we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the lord! Horatio, these three years have I taken note of it; the age is grown so picked, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his knee. —How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days i' the year, I came to't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that. It was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry; why was he sent into England?

1 Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 't is no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Clo. 'T will not be seen in him there; there, the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Clo. 'Faith, even with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man, and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. 'Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we say, many pokey cows now-a-days,) that will scarce hold the laying in he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a Tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now; this skull hath lain i' the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was: whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pedantish on him for a mad rogue! a' poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, this same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

1 Clo. 'E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas, poor Yorick! —I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times: and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your mirth? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? —quite chapped? Now, get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. —Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. Even so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah! [Puts down the Skull.]

Hor. Even so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio.

Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'T were to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it; as thus: Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returned into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loan, and why of that loan, whereof he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

"Imperial" Caesar dead, and turn'd to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the wind away: O! that that earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a wall i' expel the winter's flaw! But soft! —I must not dream: —here comes the king.

Enter Priests, &c. in Procession; the Corpus of OPHELIA, LARERT, and Queen.

Lar. Enter Mourners following; King, Queen, and their Trains.

The queen, the courtiers. Who is that they follow, And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken, The corse they follow did with desperate hand Fordo its own life: 't was of some estate. Cutch we awhile, and mark.

[Retiring on one side with Horatio.

Lar. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Lrütes,

A very noble youth: mark.

Lar. What ceremony else?

1 Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd As we have warrant: her death was doubtful; And but that great command o'erways the order, She should in ground unsanctified have lodge'd, Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her; Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants. Her maiden strewnments, and the bringing home Of bell and burial.

Lar. Must there no more be done?

1 Priest. No more be done.

We should profane the service of the dead, To sing sad requiem, and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls.

Lar. Lay her i' the earth; And from her fair and unpolluted flesh, May violets spring! —I tell thee, churlish priest, A ministering angel shall my sister be, When thouliest howling.

Ham. What! the fair Ophelia? Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell. [Strewing flowers.

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife:

1 Ham. German, runes, garlandes; rises: in folio. 11 a. in f.c.; from quarto, and folio: sage.
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not to have strew'd thy grave.

_Lear._ O! treble woe!
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,
Whose wicked deed thy most insensible sense
Depriv'd thee of!—Hold off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms.

[Leaping into the Grave.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o'er-top old Pelion, or the skyshe head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief
Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand,
Like wonder-wounded hearers?—this is I.

Hamlet the Dane. [Leaping into the Grave.

_Lear._ The devil take thy soul. [Grappling with him.]

Ham. Thou pr'ythee, not well.

[The attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.

Ham. When I will fight with him upon this theme,
Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

_Queen._ O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?

_King._ O! he is mad, Laertes.

_Queen._ For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Tis wounds! show me what thou 'lt do:
Woul'n't weep? woul'n't fight? woul'n't storm? woul'n't tear thyself?

Woul'n't drink up Exil? eat a crocodile?
I'll do't; I'll do't,—Dost thou come here to whine?
To outface me with leaping in her grave?
Be hur'd quick with her, and so will I:
And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw
Millions of acres on us; till our ground,
Singeing his passion by the burning zone,
Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou 'lt mouth,
I'll rant as well as thou.

_King._ This is mere madness:
And thus a while the fit will work on him.

_Queen._ Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden couples are disclos'd,
His silence will sit dropping.

Ham. [Hearing you, sir.] What is the reason that you use me thus?
I lov'd you ever; but it is no matter;
Let Hellenes himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, the dog'll have his day. [Exit.

_King._ I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him.

[Exit Horatio.

_To Laertes._ Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;
We'll put the matter to the present push. —
Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.

This grave shall have a living monument:

An hour of quiet thereby shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you see the other.—
You do remember all the circumstance.

_Hor._ Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep: methought, I lay
Worse than the mutines12 in the bilboes.13 Rashly,—
And prais'd be rashness for it,—let us own,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
When our deep14 plots do fail;15 and that should Teach us...

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.

_Hor._ That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,
My sea-gown scar'f about me, in the dark
Grop'd I to find out them; had my desire;
Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again: making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unfold16
Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio,
O royal knavery! an exact command,—
Larded with many several sorts of reasons,
Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,
With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,—
That on the supervise, no leisure bated,
No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
My head should be struck off.

_Hor._ Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission: read it at more leisure. [Giving it.19

But will thou hear me14 how I did proceed?

_Hor._ I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villains,—
Ere I could make a prologue to my brains,
They had begun the play,—I sat me down,
Devil's a new commission; wrote it fair.
I once did hold it, as our statistis do,
A baseness writ, and labour'd much
How to forget that learning; but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote?

_Hor._ Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,—
As England was his faithful tributary,
As love between them like the palm might flourishe,
As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,
And stand a comma 'tween their amities,
And many such like as's of great charge,
That on the view and know20 of these contents,
Without debateam farther, more or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving time allow'd.

_Hor._ How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinate.21
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal;
Folded the writ up in form of the other;
Subscribe'd it; gave th' impression; plac'd it safely;
The changeling never known. Now, the next day
Was our sea-fight, and what to this was sequent true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concurrence, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me.—Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is.

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the impu- tation laid on him by them, in his heed he's unfollowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Bar- bary horses; against the which he has imposed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girtle, hangers, and so. Three of the car- rriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hills, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew, you must be edified by the margin, ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more germane to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides: I would, it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages: that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this imposed, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid on twelve, for nine; and that would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall; if it please his Majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me, let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. [Exit.

Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.
Ham. He did comply 1 with his dag before he sucked it. Thus he has (and many more of the same breed that, I know, the drossy age doth on) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond 2 and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My 3 lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osrick, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know, if your pleasure how to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whersoever, I'd be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so: since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. Thou wouldst not think, how ill all is here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord.—Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gaining, 4 as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury: there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 1 is it not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man, of aught he leaves, knows, what's it to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osrick, and Attendants with Foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet; come, and take this hand from me. [The King puts the hand of Laertes into that of Hamlet.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I've done you wrong;

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman,

This presence knows,

And you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd
With sore distraction. What I have done,

That might your nature, honour, and exception,

Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never, Hamlet: If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,

And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not; Hamlet denies it.

Who does it then? His madness. If't be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd;

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,

Let my confessions from a purpos'd evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house,

And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,

Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most

To my revenge; but in my terms of honour,

I stand aloof, and will no reconcilement,

Till by some elder masters, of known honour,

I have a voice and precedent of peace.

To keep my name unger'd. But till that time,

I do receive your offer'd love like love,

And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;

And will this brother's wager frankly play.—

Give us the foils; come on. 9

[Foils brought.]

Lae. Come; one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance.

Your skill shall, like a star 's the darkest night,

Stick fiery off indeed.

Lae. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osrick.—Cousin Hamlet,

You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;

Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it; I have seen you both;

But since he is better, we have therefore odds.

Lae. This is too heavy; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length? 10 [They prepare to play.

Os. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoops of wine upon that table.—

If Hamlet give the first or second hit,

Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the battlements their ordinance fire;

The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;

And in the cup an union 11 shall he throw,

Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,

The trumpet to the cannoner without,

The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,

Now the king drinks to Hamlet!—Come, begin;—

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir. [They play.

Lae. Come, my lord. [They play.

Ham. No. [They play.

Lae. Judgment.

Os. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Lae. Well:—again.

King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;—

Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and Cannon shot off within.

Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile.—

Come.—Another hit; what say you? [They play.

Lae. A touch; a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Here is a napkin, rub thy brows, my son: 12

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

Queen. Gertrude, do not drink.

King. I will, my lord: I pray you, pardon me.

She drinks.

King. It is the poison'd cup! it is too late. [Aside.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Lae. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Lae. And yet it is almost against my conscience. [Aside.

1 Compliment. 2 mine: in folio. 3 berry: in folio. 4 Wribbanon read: flesh (former). 5 This and the following speeches to. 6 Exit Lord. 7 are not in folio. 8 this wager is not in quarto. 9 Misprint. 10 So the quarto, 1604. Since no man has sought of what he leaves, what is 't to leave betimes? in folio. 11 This line is not in quarto. 12 Text in quarto, (except that of 1604). 13 Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows: in f. e.
Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes. You but dally:
I pray you, pass with your best violence.
I am afraid, you make a wanton of me.
Laer. Say you so? come on.
Osr. Nothing, neither way.
Laer. Have at you now.
[Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in scuffing they change Rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.
King. Part them! they are incensed.
Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.
Osr. Look to the queen there, ho?
Hor. They bleed on both sides.—How is it, my lord?
Osr. How is it, Laertes?
Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe,
Osrick; I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.
Ham. How does the Queen?
King. She swoons to see them bleed.
Queen. No, no; the drink, the drink.—O my dear Hamlet!
The drink, the drink: I am poison'd. [Dies.
Ham. O villainy!—How? let the door be lock'd:
Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.
Laer. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good:
In thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated, and envenom'd. The foul practice Hath turn'd itself on me: lo! here I lie,
Never to rise again. Thy mother's poison'd;
I can no more. The king, the king's to blame.
Ham. The point
Envenom'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work.
All. Treason! treason! [Stabs the King.
King. O! yet defend me, friends! I am but hurt.
Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion:—is thy union here?
Follow my mother. [King dies.
Laer. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd by himself—
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me! [Dies.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.—
I am dead, Horatio.—Wretched queen, adieu!—
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest) O! I could tell you,—
But let it be.—Horatio, I am dead;
Thou liv'st: report me and my cause aright* To the unsatisfied.
Hor. Never believe it: [Taking the Cup.
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
Here's yet some liquor left.
Ham. As thou'rt a man,
Give me the cup: let go; by heaven I'll have it.—
[Struggling: Hamlet gets the Cup.
O God!—Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!
If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story. [March afar off, and Shot within.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

LEAR, King of Britain.
King of France.
Duke of Burgundy.
Duke of Cornwall.
Duke of Albany.
Earl of Kent.
Earl of Gloucester.
EDGAR, Son to Gloster.
EDMUND, Bastard Son to Gloster.
CURAN, a Courtier.

SCENE, Britain.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King Lear's Palace.

Enter KENT, GLOSTER, and EDMUND.

KENT. I thought, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdoms, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed, that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

KENT. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

KENT. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could; whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

KENT. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this kinsman came somewhat saucily into the world, before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair, there was good sport at his making, and the whorsom must be acknowledged. Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

KENT. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. The king is coming. [Sennet within.]
LEAR, KENT, GLOSTER, EDGAR AND FOOL.

King Lear, Act III. Scene 4
KING LEAR.

SCENE I.

LEAR. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy woods, and with thimnaps rich'd,
With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady : to thine and Albany's issue
Be this perpetually. —What says our second daughter,
Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall? Speak.
Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find, she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short, that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys,
Which the most precious sphere of sense possesses,
And find, I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love.
Cor. Then, poor Cordelia! [Aside.
And yet not so: since, I am sure, my love's
More plenteous than my tongue. LEAR.
To thee, and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity, and pleasure,
Than that confer'd on Goneril. —Now, our joy,
Although our last, not least: to whose young love
The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy,
Strive to be inferior: what can you say, to draw
A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.
Cor. Nothing, my lord.
LEAR. Nothing will come of nothing: speak again.
Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot have
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond; nor more, nor less.
LEAR. How? how, Cordelia? mend your speech a little,
Lest you may mar your fortunes.
Cor. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say,
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care, and duty:
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.
LEAR. But goes this with thy heart?
Cor. Ay, my good lord.
LEAR. So young, and so tender?
Cor. So young, my lord, and true.
LEAR. Let it be so: thy truth, then, be thy dover;
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night,
By all the operation of the orbs,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me,
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Seythian,
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou, my sometime daughter.
KENT. Good my liege,—
LEAR. Peace, Kent!
Come not between the dragon and his wrath.
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest.
On her kind nursery. —Hence, and avoid my sight! —
To Cordelia.
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her! —Call France. —Who's there?
Call Burgundy. —Cornwall, and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest the third:
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty. —Ourselves, by monthly course,
With reservation of an hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turns. Only, we will keep
The name, and all th' additions to a king;
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm,
This coronet part between you. [Giving the Crown. KENT.
Royal Lear.
Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
And as my patron thought on in my prayers,—
LEAR. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.
KENT. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart: be Kent unmanfully,
When Lear is mad. —What wouldst thou do, old man?
Think'st thou that such duty shall have dreed to speak,
When power and flattering bows? To plainness honour's bound,
When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom;[10]
And in thy best consideration check
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment,
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;
Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound
Reverbs no hollowness.
LEAR. Kent, on thy life, no more.
KENT. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.
LEAR. Out of my sight!
KENT. See better, Lear; and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.
LEAR. Now, by Apollo,—
KENT. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.
LEAR. O, vassal! recreant![11] [Laying his hand upon his Sword.
ALB. CORN. Dear sir, forbear.[12]
KENT. Do;
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Up—o the soul disease. Revoke thy gift[14];
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee, thou dost evil.
LEAR. Hear me, recreant!
On thine allegiance hear me.
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,
(Which we durst never yet) and, with strain'd pride,
To come betwixt our sentence and our power,
(Which nor our nature nor our place can bear)
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee for provision
To shield thee from diseases of the world,
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back.
Upon our kingdom: if the seventh day following,
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death. Away! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.
Kent. Fare thee well, king: since thus thou wilt appear,
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.—
The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,
[To Cordelia.
That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said! —
And your large speeches may your deeds approve,
[To Regan and Goneril.
That good effects may spring from words of love.—
Thus Kent, O princes! bid ye all adieu; —
He'll shape his old course in a country new. [Exit
Flourish. Re-enter Gloster, with France, Burgundy, and Attendants.
Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.
Lear. My lord of Burgundy, we first address toward you, who with this king Hath riddell for our daughter: what, in the least, Will you require in present dower with her, Or cease your quest of love?
Bur. Most royal majesty, I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd, Nor will you tender less.
Lear. Right noble Burgundy, When she was dear to us, we did hold her so; But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands: If aught within that little seeming substance, Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd, And nothing more, may flit like your grace, She's there, and she is yours.
Bur. I know no answer.
Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes, Unfriend, new-adopted to our hate, Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath, Take her, or leave her?
Bur. Pardon me, royal sir; Election makes not up on such conditions.
Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me, I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king,
[To France.
I would not from your love make such a stray, To match you where I hate: therefore, beseech you T' avert your liking a more worthier way, Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd Almost t' acknowledge hers.
France. This is most strange, That she, that even but now was your blest object, The argument of your praise, balm of your age, Most best, most dearest, should in this trice of time Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle So many folds of favour. Sure, her offence Must be of such unnamable degree, That monsters it, or your fore-venomed affection Fall'n into taint: which to believe of her, Must be a faith that reason, without miracle, Could not, ever plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your majesty, (If for I want that glib and oily art, To speak and purpose not, since what I well intend, I'll do't before I speak) that you make known It is no vicious blot, nor other foulness, No unchaste action, or dishonest'd stoop; That hath deprived me of your grace and favour; But then for want of that for which I am richer, A still-collecting eye, and such a tongue That I am glad I have not, though not to have it, Hath lost me in your liking.
Lear. Better thou
Hast not been born, than not to have pleas'd me better.
France. Is it 11 but this? a tardiness in nature, Which often leaves the history unspoke,
That it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady? Love is not love,
When it is mingled with respects, that stand
Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry. 12
Bur. Royal Lear. 13
Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.
Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.
Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father,
That you must lose a husband.
Cor. Peace be with Burgundy:
Since that respects of 14 fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.
France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor,
Most choice, forsaken, and most lov'd, despis'd,
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! 't is strange, that from their cold'st neglect
My love should kindle to inflam'd respect. —
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,
Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy Shall 15 buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me. —
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:
Thou dostest here, a better where 16 to find.
Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine, for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again.—Therefore, be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.—
Come, noble Burgundy.
[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloster, and Attendants.
France. Bid farewell to your sisters.
Cor. Ye jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are; And, like a sister, am most leath to call Your faults as they are nam'd. Love 17 well our To your professed bosoms I commit him; [father: But yet, alas! I stood within his grace, I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.
Gon. Prescribe not us our duty.
Reg. Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you As fortune's alms: you have obedience seem'd, And well are the worth that you have want'd. Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides; Who cover faults, at last shame them 18 derides. Well may you prosper! France.
Come, my fair Cordelia.
[Exeunt France and Cordelia.
Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertain's to us both. I think, our father will hence to-night.
Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.
Gon. You see how full of changes his age is: the observation we have made of it hath not 19 been little: he always loved our sister most, and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.
Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age; yet he hath ever but slanderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then, must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that infring and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is farther compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall farther think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and in the heat.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Earl of Gloucester's Castle.

Enter Edmund, the Bastard, with a Letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom, and permit The curiosity of nations to deprive me, For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base, When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true, As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us With base? with baseness? bastardy? base? base? Who in the lusty stealth of nature take More composition and fierce quality, Than doth within a dull, stale, tired bed, Go to the creating a whole tribe of fools, Get 'tween asleep and wake?—Well then, Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund, As to the legitimate. Fine word,—legitimate! Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper:—
Now, gods; stand up for bastards! [Reads the Letter.]

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler parted!

And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd his power! Confined to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad!—Edmund? How now! what news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Hiding the Letter.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No! What needed, then, that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: come; if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not o'er-read; and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] "This policy, and reverence of age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the opinion of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the belovéd of your brother, Edgar."—Humph!—Conspiracy!—"Sleep till I waked him,—you should enjoy half his revenue."—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in?—When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought to me, my lord; there's the cunning of it: I found it thrown in at the easement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his: but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but, I hope, his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore soured you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord; but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that sons at perfect age, and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutal villain! I worse than brute!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him. Abominable villain!—Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistakes his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall bear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any farther delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently, convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you with it.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us; though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects. Love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason, and the bond cracked between son and fathers. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there’s son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there’s father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders; follow us discreetly to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully.

And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty.—T’is strange. [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour) we make guilty of our disasters, the sin, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools, by heavenly companion; knives, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence, and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrustering on. An admirable evasion of whore-master man, to lay his gostly disposition to the charge of stars. My father compounded with my mother under the dragon’s tail, and my nativity was under ursa major; so that, it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut! I should have been that I am, had the maidensiest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. [Exit Edgar.]

Enter Edgar.

and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o’Bedlam.—O! these eclipses do pretend these divisions. Fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, death, dissolution of ancient affinities; divisions in state; menaces and maladjustments against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishments, miseries and dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary of astrology?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word, or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Benthink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure. Be constant so rage; in him, that with the miscarriage of your person it would soothe speedy ally.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That’s my fear. I pray you, have a constant forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go: there’s my key. If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it. Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.—[Exit Edgar.

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none, on whose foolish honesty
My practices ride easy.—I see the business.—
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit: All with me’s meet, that I can fashion fit. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Duke of Albany’s Palace.

Enter Gonenir, and Oswald her Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osir. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me: every hour He flashes into one gross crime or other.

That sets us all at odds: I’ll not endure it. His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us On every trifle.—When he returns from hunting, I will not speak with him; say, I am sick: If you come slack of former services, You shall do well; the fault of it I’ll answer.

Osir. He’s coming, madam; I hear him.

[Horus within.]

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please, You and your fellows; I’d have it come to question: If he distaste it, let him to my sister, Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one, Not to be over-rul’d. Idle old man, That still would manage those authorities, That he hath given away!—Now, by my life, Old fools are babes again; and must be us’d With checks as flatteries; when they are seen abus’d. Remember what I have said.

Osir. Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you. What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows, so: he would break a vein where I would not; and I shall; That I may speak.—I’ll write straight to my sister, To hold my course.—Prepare for dinner. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the Same.

Enter Kent, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow, That can my speech diffuse, my good intent May carry through itself to that full issue For which I raz’d my likeness.—Now, banish’d Kent, If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn’d, (So may it come! ’tis) thy master, whom thou lov’st, Shall find thee full of labours.

[Enter Lear, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem: to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little: to fear judgment; to fight when I cannot choose, and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?
KENT. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.
LEAR. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?
KENT. Service.
LEAR. Whom wouldst thou serve?
KENT. You.
LEAR. Dost thou know me, fellow?
KENT. No, sir; but you have that in your counteillance which I would fain call master.
LEAR. What's that?
KENT. Authority.
LEAR. What services canst thou do?
KENT. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.
LEAR. How old art thou?
KENT. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.
LEAR. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho! dinner!—Where's my knife? my foil? Go you, and call my foot hither.

Enter Oswald.

You, sirrah, where's my daughter?

Osw. So please you,—[Exit.]
LEAR. What says the fellow there? Call the esquire back. [Exit Knight.]—Where's my foil, ho?—I think the world's asleep.—[Re-enter Knight.] How now, where's that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.
LEAR. Why came not the slave back to me, when I called him?
Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.
LEAR. He would not!
Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is:
but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affectation as you were wont:
there's a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the general dependants, as in the dutie himself also, your daughter.
LEAR. Ha! sayest thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness wronged.

LEAR. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception. I have perceived a most faint neglect of late;
which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity, than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look farther into 't.—But where's my foil? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France,
sir, the foil hath much pined away.
LEAR. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—
Go you, call hither my foot.—[Re-enter Oswald.]

O. You sir, you sir, come you hither. Who am I, sir?

Osw. My lady's father.

LEAR. My lady's father? my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you eur! Osw. I am none of these, my lord: I beseech your pard'on.

LEAR. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal?—

[Striking him.]
Fool. For you know, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it had its head bit off by its young.

So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

LEAR. Are you our daughter?

GON. I would, you would make use of your good will.

Whereof I know you are fraught, and put away
These dispositions, which of late transform you
From what you rightfully are.

FOOL. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?—Whoop, Jug! I love thee.

LEAR. Does any here know me?—Why this is not Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or his discernings are lethargied.—Sleeping or waking?—Ha! sure 'tis not so.—Who is it that can tell me who I am?—Lear's shadow? I would learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

LEAR. Your name, fair gentlewoman?

GON. 'This admiration, sir, is much o' the favour
Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright,
As you are old and reverend, should be wise.
Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires;
Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd and bold,
That this our court, infected with their manners,
Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust
Make it more like a tavern, or a brothel,
Than a graced palace. The shame itself doth speak
For instant remedy: be, then, desir'd
By her, that else will take the thing she begets,
A little to disguis'dly come train:
And the remainder, that shall still depend,
To be such men as may besort your age,
Which know themselves and you.

LEAR. Darkness and devils!—
Saddle my horses; call my train together.
Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee:
Yet have I left a daughter.

GON. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble
Make servants of their better.

Enter Albany.

LEAR. Woe, that too late repents,—O, sir! [To Albany.]
Is it your will?—Speak, sir.—Prepare my horses!—
Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou'stis thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster!

ALBY. Pray, sir, be patient.

LEAR. Detested kite! thou liest:

My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know,
And in the most exact regard support
The worship of their name.—O, most small fault!
How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show,
Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature
From the fix'd place, drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gain!
O Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in, [Striking his head.
And thy dear judgment out!—Go, go, my people.

ALBY. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath mov'd you.

LEAR. It may be so, my lord.
Hear, nature, hear! dear goddess, hear!
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her degenerate body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
And be a blunt dispassion'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks;
Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!—Away! away!
[Exit.]

When I have show'd thy unfitness,—how now, Oswald?!

Re-enter Oswald.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?
Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:
Inform her full of my particular fear;
And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may compact it more. Get you gone,
And hasten your return. [Exit Osw.] No, no, my lord,
This milky gentleness, and course of yours,
Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more attach'd! for want of wisdom,
Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell:
Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.
Gon. Nay, then—

Alb. Well, well; the event.

SCENE V.—Court before the same.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters.
Acquaint my daughter no farther with any thing you know,
than comes from her demand out of the letter.
If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter.

[Exit.]

Fool. If a man's brains were in 's heels, were 't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, if 'pr'ythee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this, as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What cantst tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Canst thou tell why one's nose stands in the middle on's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side's nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong.—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father!—
Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed. Thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perforce!—Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shalt not have been old before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven! Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!—
Enter Gentleman.

How now! Are the horses ready?
Gent. Ready, my lord.
Lear. Come, boy.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of Gloucester.

Enter Edmund and Curan, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.
Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?
Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad: I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-harassing arguments.

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they?
Cur. Have you not heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.
Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business. My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queasy question, Which I must act.—Briefness, and fortune, work!—

Brother, a word; descend.—brother, I say! [Enter Edgar.

My father watches—O sir! fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid:

You have now the good advantage of the night.

Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall?

He's coming hither; now, if the night, in haste, And Regan with him: have you nothing said
Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany?

Adviser yourself?

Edg. I am sure on 't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming.—Pardon me; In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you:

Draw: seem to defend yourself. Now quit you well. Yield:—come before my father.—Light, ho! here!—

Fly, brother;—Torches! torches!—So, farewell. [Exit Edgar.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion

[Wounds his arm.

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards Do more than this in sport.—Father! father! Stop, stop! No help?

Enter Gloucester, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out, Mumbling* of wicked charms, conjuring the moon

To stand auspicous mistress.

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund? Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after. [Exit Serv.] By no means,—what?

Glo. I know not, madam: 'tis too bad, too bad.—
Edm. Yes, madam, yes? he was of that consort.
Reg. No marvel, then, though he were ill-affected:
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the expense and waste of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well informed of them; and with such cautions,
That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.
Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.—
Edmund. I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.
Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.
Glo. He did bewray his practice; and receiv'd
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.
Corn. Is he pursued?
Glo. Ay, my good lord, he is.
Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purpose,
How in my strength you please.—As for you, Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much command of itself, you shall be our:
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.
Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.
Glo. For him I thank your grace.
Corn. You know not why we came to visit you.
Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark-cly'd night.
Occasions, noble Gloster, of some poise,*
Wherein we must have use of your advice.
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought fit
To answer from our home: the several messengers
From hence attend dispatch. Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to our bosom, and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,4
Which craves the instant use.
Glo. I serve you, madam.
Your graces are right welcome.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter Kent and Oswald, severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?
Kent. Ay.
Osw. Where may we set our horses?
Kent. I' the mire.
Osw. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.
Kent. I love thee not.
Osw. Why, then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Finsbury pinfolt, I would make thee care for me.
Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow, I know thee.
Osw. What dost thou know me for?
Kent. A knife, a rascal, an eater of broken meats;
a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suit'd, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lily-liver'd, action-taking knave, a whoreson, glass-gazing, super-serviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldest be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knife, beggarly, wan, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will head into clamorous whining, if thou deniest the least syllable of thy addition.
Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knows thee.
Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me. Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue; for, though it be night, yet the moon shines:
I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you. [Drawing his Sword.] Draw, you whoreson e'lieron barber-monger, draw.
Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw, you rascal! you come with letters against the king, and take Vanity, the puppet's, part, against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks:—draw, you rascal; come your ways.
Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!
Kent. Strike, you slave: stand, rogue, stand; you neat slave, strike. [Beating him.]
Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!
Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Edmund, and Servants.

Kent. With you, gentleman boy, if you please: come,
I'll dress you; come on, young master.
Glo. Weapons! arms! What's the matter here?
Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives:
He dies that strikes again. What is the matter?
Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.
Corn. What is your difference? speak.
Osw. I am scaries in breath, my lord.
Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred your valour.
You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee.
Kent. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?
Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter, or a painter, could not have made him an ill, though they had been but two hours* at the trade.
Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?
Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have
At suit of his grey beard,—[spar'd
Kent. Thou, whoreson zed? thou, unnecessary letter?
—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will treat this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you vagtail?
Corn. Peace, sirrah!
You beastly knave, know you no reverence?
Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.
Corn. Why art thou angry?
Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword,
Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these;
Like rats, oft bite the holy cords at warn.
Which are too intrinsical! e' unloose; smooth every passion
That in the natures of their lords rebel:
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon* banks
With every gale and vary of their masters,
And knowing nought, like dogs, but following.—
A plague upon your epileptic visage!
Smile at my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot!*
Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?
Glo. How tell you out? say that.
Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy,
Than I and this knave.
Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What's his office?
For pilferings and most common trespasses,
Are punish'd with. The king must take it ill,
That he, so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.
Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,
To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—*

[Kent is set in the Stocks.]

Come, my lord, away.

[Exit Regan and Cornwall.]

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,
Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd, nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for thee.

Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd, and travel'd hard:
Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle:
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.
Give you good morrow!

Glo. The duke's to blame in this: 't will be ill taken.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw:—
Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm sun.
Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may
Peruse this letter.—Nothing almost sees miracles,?
But misery:—I know, 't is from Cordelia;
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscure course; and shall find time
From this enormous state, seeking to give Loses their remedies. All weary and o'er-watch'd,
Take vantage, heavy eyes; not to behold
This shameful lodging. Fortune, good night;
Smile once more; turn thy wheel!

[He sleeps.]

SCENE III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;
And by the happy hollow of a tree
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,
Does not attend my taking. While I may 'scape,
I will preserve myself; and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape,
That ever penury, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots,
And with presented nakedness out-face
The winds, and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary;
And with this horrible object, from low farms, poor petling villages, sheep-cotes and mills,
Sometime with lunatic bays, sometimewith prayers,
Enforce their charity.—Poor Turlyg 14 poor Tom!
That's something yet:—Edgar I nothing am. [Exit.
SCENE IV.—Before GLOSTER’S CASTLE.

Enter Lear, Fool, and a Gentleman.

Lear. ’Tis strange that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn’d,
The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this removal.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master! [Waking.

Lear. Ha!

Kent. Mak’st thou this shame thy pastime?

Lear. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha! look; he wears erewh garters. Horses are tied by the head; dogs, and bears, by the neck; monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs. When a man is over-tasty at legs, then he wears wooden netherstocks.

Lear. What’s he, that hath so much thy place mislooked,
To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she:
Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear ay.

Lear. They durst not do’t; They could not, would not do’t: it is worse than murder,
To do upon respect such violent outrage.
Resolve me now with all modest haste which way Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage,
Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness’ letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that show’d
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post,
Stew’d in his base, half-breathless, panting forth
From Goneril, his mistress, salutation;
Deliver’d letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon’d up their mean’y, straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks:
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceive’d, had poison’d mine.
(Being the very fellow which of late Display’d so saucily against your highness)
Having more man than wit about me, drew:
He rais’d the house with loud and coward cries.
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter’s not gone yet; if the wild goose fly that way,
Do make their children blind;
But fathers, that bear bags,
Shall see their children kind.

Courteous, that arrant whore,
Ne’er turns the key to the poor.—
But, for all this, it follows,
Thou shalt have as many dolours
For thy daughters dear,
As thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart!

Hysterica passio, I down, thou climbing sorrow;
Thy element’s below.—Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, sir; here, within.

Lear. Follow me not: Stay here.

[Exit.

Gent. Made ye no more offence than what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a train?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i’ the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserv’d it.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We’ll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there’s no labouring in the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there’s not a nose among twenty but can smell him that’s stinking. Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That sir, which serves and seeks for gain.
And follows but for form,
Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry; the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly:
The fool turns knave: that runs away,
The knave no fool, perdy.

Kent. Where learn’d you this, fool?

Fool. Not i’ the stocks, fool.

[Enter Lear, with Gloster.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? They are weary?
They have travell’d hard to-night? Mere fetches,
The images of revolt and flying off.
Fetch me a better answer.

Glo. My dear lord,
You know the fiery quality of the duke;
How unremovable and fix’d he is
In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion! —

Fiery? what? quality? Why, Gloster, Gloster,
I’d speak with the duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform’d them so.

Lear. Inform’d, them! Dost thou understand me, man?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father
Would with his daughter speak, commands her service:
Are they inform’d of this? My breath and blood! —

Fiery? the fiery duke?—Tell the hot duke, that —

No, but not yet;—may be, he is not well:
Infirmitie doth still neglect all office,
Wherebo the health is bound; we are not ourselves,
When nature, being oppress’d, commands the mind
To suffer with the body. I’ll forbear;

And am fallen out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos’d and sickly fit
For the sound man.—Death on my state! wherefore

[Pointing to Kent.

Should he sit here? This act persuades me,
That this remonstrance of the duke and her is practice only: Give me my servant forth.

Go, tell the duke and 's wife, I'ld speak with them, Now, presently; bid them come forth and hear me, Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum, Till it cry:—'Sleep to death.'

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you. [Exit. Lear. O me! my heart, my rising heart!—but, down.

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the cels, when she put them i' the paste alive; she knapp'd 'em o' the coxcomb with a stick, and cried, 'Down, wantons, down!' 't was her brother, that in pure kind- ness to his horse butter'd his hay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, and Servants. Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your grace! [Kent is set at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason I have to think so: if thou shouldst not be glad, I would divorce thee from thy mother's tomb.

Sepulturing an adultress,—O! are you free? [To Kent. Some other time for that.—Beloved Regan, Thy sister 's naught: O Regan! she hath tied Sharp'd-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here.—

[Points to his heart.

I can scarce speak to thee: thou? It not believe, With how depriv'd a quality.—O Regan!—

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope, You less know how to value her desert, Than she to seem'd her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?—

Reg. I cannot think, my sister in the least, Would fail her obligation: if, sir, perchance, She have restraddled the riots of your followers, 'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end, As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!—

Reg. O, sir! you are old; Nature in you stands on the very verge Of her confines: you should be rud'd, and led By some discretion, that discerns your state Better than you yourself. Therefore, I pray you, That to our sister you do make return: Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?

Do you but mark how this become my month?—

"Dear daughter, I confess that I am old; Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg. [Kneeling. That you 'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food?"

Reg. Good sir, no more: these are insigntly tricks. Return you to my sister.

Lear. Never, Regan. [Rising.

She hath abated me of half my train; Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue, Most serpent-like, upon the very heart.— All the stord's vengences of heaven fall On her ungrateful top! Strike her young bones, You taking airs, with lameness!—

Corn. You nimb'lightning, dart your blinding flames Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,

You fen-suck'ed fogs, drawn by the powerful sun, To fall and blast her pride!—

Reg. O the blest gods!—

So will you wish on me, when the rash mood is on.

Lear. No; Regan; thou shalt never have my curse:—

Thy tender-hearted nature shall not give

Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce; but thine

Do comfort, and not burn. 'Tis not in thee

To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,

To bandy harsh words, to scant my wages,

And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt.

Against my coming in: thou know better'st

The offices of nature, bond of childhood,

Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;

Thy half o' the kingdom thou hast not forgot,

Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.

Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks? [Tucket within.

Corn. What trumpet's that?

[Enter Oswald.

Reg. I know 't; my sister's: this approves her letter, That she would soon be here.—Is your lady come? Lear. This is a slave, whose easy borrow'd pride Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.—Out, varlet, from my sight!—

Corn. What means your grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope Thou didst not know on 't.—Who comes here? O heavens!—

[Enter Goneril.

If you do love old men, in your sweet sway

Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,

Make it your cause; send down, and take my part—

Art not asham'd to look upon this beard?—

O Regan! will thou take her by the hand?—

Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I off- ended?

All's not offence, that indiscretion finds,

And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides! you are too tough;

Will you yet hold? How came my man i' the stocks?

Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own disorders

Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?—

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak; seem so.

If, till the expiration of your month,

You will return and sojourn with my sister,

Dismissing half your train, come then to me:

I am now from home, and out of that provision Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd?

No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose

To wage against the enmity o' the air;

To be a comrade with the wolf and howl,

Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her?

Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took

Our youngest born, I could as well be brought

To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg

To keep base life afoot.—Return with her?

Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter

To this detested groom. [Looking at Oswald.

Gon. At your service, sir. At your service, sir.

Lear. I pr'ythee, daughter, do not make me mad:

I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell.

We'll no more meet, no more see one another;

But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;

Or, rather, a disease that 's i' my flesh,

Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,

A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,

In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;

1 slack: in quarto. 2 This and the next speech, are only in folio. 3 house: in f. e. 4 Not in f. e. 5 and blister: in folio. 6 tendered-shefed: in f. e. 7 Fixed allowances. 8 Blast of a trumpet. 9 The wolf and ewe. Necessity's, &c. in f. e. 10 that lies within my flesh: in quarto.
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it:
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove.
Mend, when thou canst! be better, at thy leisure:
I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I, and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so:
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister;
For those that mingle reason with their passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir. What! fifty followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger
Speak' gainst so great a number? How, in one house,
Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity? 'T is hard: almost impossible. [Exit
Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attend-
From those that she calls servants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chase'd to slack you,
We could control them. If you will come to me,
(For now I spy a danger) I entreat you
To bring but five and twenty: to no more
Will I give place, or notice.

Lear. I gave you all.
Reg. And in good time you gave it,
Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries,
But kept a reservation to be follow'd
With such a number. What! must I come to you
With five and twenty? Regan, say you so?
Reg. And speak' t again, my lord; no more with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-

favour'd,
When others are more wicked; not being the worst

Stands in some rank of praise.—I'll go with thee:

To Goneril,
Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord.
What need you five and twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. O! reason not the need; our basest

beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady;

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.

A Storm, with Thunder and Lightning. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded, like the weather, most unequally.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful elements;

Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,

That things might change or cease: tears his white hair,
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,

Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:

1 follow: in quartos. 2 This and the next speech, to "horse," are not in quartos. 3 not: in quartos. 4 The rest of this speech is not in folio.
KING LEAR.  ACT III.

With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall; 1
Who have (as who have not, that their great stars Thron'd and set high?) servants, who seem no less,
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in snuffs and packaging of the dukes,
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but flourishings. 2
But, true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open manner.—Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To trust a secret foot for ever, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding,
And from some knowledge and assurance offer
This office to you.
Gent. I will talk farther with you.
Kent. No, do not.
For confirmation that I am much more
Than my out wall, open this private, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
(As fear not but you shall) show her this ring,
And she will tell you who that 4 fellow is
That yet you do not know. [Thunder.] Pie on this storm!
I will go seek the king.
Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?
Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;
That, when we have found the king, in which your pain
That way, I’ll this, he that first lights on him,
Holla the other.  [Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Heath. Storm continues.

Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
You cataracts and hurricanes spout,
Till you have drenched our steeples, drown’d our cocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers to oak-eating thunder-bolts,
Sing me my song, and then, all-shaking thunder,
Strike flat the thick roundality o’ the world.
Crack nature’s moulds, all germs spill at once,
That make ingrateful man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water 3 in a dry house is better than this rain-water out of door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughter’s blessing: here’s a night
pities neither wise men nor fools.

[Thunder.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire! spout, rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;
I never gave you kingdom, call’d you children,
You owe me no subscription; then, let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis’d old man.
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That will 8 with two penurious daughters join;
Your high-angender’d battles ‘gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! ’tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put his head in has a good head-piece.

Lear. The cod-piece that will house,
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall house;—
So beggars marry many.
The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of a corn cry wee,
And turn his sleep to wake.

—For there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience; I will say nothing.

Kent. Who’s there?

Fool. Marry, here’s grace, and a cod-piece; that’s a wise man, and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir! are you here? Things that love night,
Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies
Gallow 11 the very, wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves. Since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,
Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard: man’s nature cannot carry
That affliction, nor the fear. 12

Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother 14 o’er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,
That hast within thee undisguised crimes,
Unwhipp’d of justice: hide thee, thou bloody hand;
Thou perjurer, and thou simuler 12 of virtue,
That art incestuous: caitiff, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming
Hast practis’d on man’s life: close pent-up guilt,
Lire your concealing continents, 13 and cry
These dreadful summoners grace.—I am a man,
More sin’d against, than sinning.

Kent. Alack! bare-headed.

Gracious my lord, hard by here is a holov
Some friendship will it lend you ‘gainst the tempest:
Repose you there, while I to this hard house,
(More hard 14 than is the stone whereof it is rais’d,)—
Which even but now, demanding after you,
 Denied me to come in) return, and force
Their seem’d courtesy.

[Alarums. Their wits begin to turn.—

Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art cold?
I am cold myself.—Where is this straw, my fellow?
The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.
Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That’s sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has a little tiny wit,— [Alarums. With heigh, ho, the wind and the rain,—

Must make content with his fortunes fit;
For the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy.—Come, bring us to this hovel.

Enter Lear and Kent.

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtier;

I’ll speak a prophecy ere I go:
When priests are more in word than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors’ tutors;
No heretics burn’d, but wench’d suitors;
When every case in law is right;

When slander do not live in tongues.

Nor cutpurses come not to throns;
When usurers tell their gold i’ the field,
And bawds and whores do churches build;
Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion:
Then comes the time, who lives to see it,
That going shall be us’d with feet.
This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time.

SCENE III.—A Room in Gloster’s Castle.

Enter Gloster and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack! Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the dukes, and a worse matter than that. I have received a letter this night;—it is dangerous to be spoken:—I have locked the letter in my closet. These injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed; we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privately relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived. If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king, my old master, must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund: pray you, be careful.

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke instantly know; and of that letter too.

This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses; no less than all;
The younger rises, when the old doth fall.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Part of the Heath, with a Hovel.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter:
The tyranny of the open night 's too rough
For nature to endure. [Storm still.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I 'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st it is much, that this contentious
Storm invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou 'dst shun a bear;
But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,
Thou 'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind 's free,
The body's delicate; the tentpest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what beats there.—Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to ''t?—But I will punish home,
No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
To shut me out!—Pour on:—I will endure!—
In such a night as this! O Regan! Goneril!
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all—
O! that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease:
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things which hurt me more.—But I 'll go in:
In, boy; go first,—[To the Fool.] You houseless poverty.

Nay, get thee in. I 'll pray, and then I 'll sleep.—

[Fool goes in.

Poor naked wretches, wherein 's your rest?
That bide the pelt ing of this pitiless storm;
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O! I have ta'en
Too little care of this. Take physic, pome;
Exposeth thy to feel what wretches feel,
That thou may'st shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half!

Poor Tom! [The Fool runs out from the Hovel.

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle; here's a spirit.

Help me! help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who 's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name's poor Tom Kent.
What art thou that dost grumble there? I come forth.

Enter Edgar disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—
"Through the sharp hawthorn blade the cold wind?"—
Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters?
And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through swamp and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; and hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inch bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor.—Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold.—O! do, do, do, do.

Bless thee from whirl winds, star-blastig, and taking thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters?
And art thou come to this?

Lear. What! have his daughters brought him to this pass?—

Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket; else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues, that in the pendulous air Hang fated o'er men's faults; light on thy daughters!—

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature.
To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.—

Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy of their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 't was this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:—

Hallow, hallow, loo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend. Obey thy parents; keep thy word; do justice: swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold.
Lear. What hast thou been?
Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled his hair, wore gloves in his cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spoke words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and woke to do it. Wine loved I deeply; dide dearly; and in woman, out-paramour'd the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creating of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to woman: keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of placlets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend. —Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind,/selects. /slow mon.
KENT. Good my lord, take his offer: go into the house.
Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.
What is thy study?
Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.
Lear. Let me ask you one word in private. [They talk apart.]
KENT. Importune him once more to go, my lord,
His wits begin to unsettle.
GLO. Canst thou blame him?
His daughters seek his death. —Ah, that good Kent!
He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man! —
Thou say'st, the king grows mad: I'll tell thee, friend,
I am almost mad myself. I had a son,
Now outlaw'd from my blood: he sought my life,
But lately, very late: I lov'd him, friend,
No father his son dearer: true to tell thee,
The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!
[Storm continues.]
I do beseech your grace,
Lear. O! cry you mercy, sir.
Noble philosopher, your company.
Edg. Tom's a-cold.
GLO. In fellow, there, into the hovel: keep thee warm.
Lear. Come, let's in all.
KENT. This way, my lord.
Lear. With him:
I will keep still with my philosopher.
KENT. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.
GLO. Take him you on.
KENT. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.
Lear. Come, good Athenian.
GLO. No words, no words:
Hush!
Edg. "Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
His word was still,—Fee, feh, tum,
I smell the blood of a British man." [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

ENTER CORNWALL and EDMUND.

CORN. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.
EDM. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.
CORN. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death;
but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable
badness in himself.
EDM. How malicious is my fortune, that I must reptent to be just! This is the letter which he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!
CORN. Go with me to the duchess.
EDM. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.
CORN. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.
Edn. [Aside] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully,—[To him.] I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer[1] father in my love. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farm-House, adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOSTER, Lear, KENT, POOL, and EDGAR.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience.—The gods reward your kindness! [Exit GLOSTER.

Edg. Fraterrreto calls me, and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Pool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Pool. No: he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son: for he is a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come whizzing in upon them.—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Pool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign them straight.

Come, sit thou here, most learned justice;—

[To EDGAR.

Thou, supient sir, sit here. Now, you she foxes!— Edg. Look, where he stands and glares!—

Wansteth thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me:—

Pool. Her boot hath a leak;

And she must not speak.

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel! I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd: Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions? Lear. I'll see their trial first.—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou robed man of justice, take thy place;—[To EDGAR.

And thou, his yoket-fellow of equity, [To THE POOL.

Bench by his side.—You are of the commission, Sit you too. [To KENT.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Pool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Pool. Cry you mercy; I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made on.—Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place! False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now, That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. [Aside.] My tears begin to take his part so much, They'll mar my counterfetting.

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tom, Blanche, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them.—Avault, you ours!

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel, grin,

Hound, or spaniel, brach, or lym';

Or bobtail 'tis, or trundle-tail,

Tom will make them* weep and wail:

For with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do, de, de, de. See, see! Come, march to wakés and fairs, and market towns.—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then, let them anatomize Regan, see what breeds about her heart: Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, [To EDGAR.] I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian attire;[2] but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise: draw the curtains. So, so, so: we'll go to supper i' the morning; so, so, so.

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend; where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir: but trouble him not; his wits are gone.

Glo. Good friend, I pr'ythee take him in thy arms; I have o'er-heard a plot of death upon him.

There is a litter ready; lay him in 't;

And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: If thou should'st daily half an hour, his life,

With thine, and all that offer to defend him,

Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up;

And follow me, that will to some provision Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps. This rest might yet have bal'm'd thy broken sense; Which, if convenience will not allow,

Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master; Thou must not stay behind. [To THE POOL. Glo. Come, come, away.

[Exeunt KENT, GLOSTER, and THE POOL, bearing off the King.

Edg. When we be better seeth searing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes.

Who alone suffers, suffers most i' the mind,

Leaving free things and happy shows behind;

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erdispire,

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.

How light and portable my pain seems now,

When that which makes me bend, makes the king bow:

Hechild, as I father'd!—Tom, away!

Mark the high noises; and thyself bewray,

When false opinion, whose wrong thought destiles thee,
In thy just proof, repeals and reconciles thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe escape the king!
Lurk, lurk. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—A Room in GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Sentries.

CORN. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter:—the army of France is landed. Seek out the traitor Gloster. [Exeunt some of the Sentries.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

GON. Pluck out his eyes.

CORN. Leave him to my dispose.—Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenues we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister.—farewell, my lord of Gloster.

Enter OSWALD.

How now! Where's the king?

Osw. My lord of Gloster hath convey'd him hence:
Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questrists after him, met him at gate;
Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,
Are gone with him towards Dover, where they boast
To have well-armed friends.

CORN. Get horses for your mistress.

GON. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

[Exeunt GONERIL, EDMUND, and OSWALD.

CORN. Edmund, farewell.—Go, seek the traitor Gloster,
Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us. [Exeunt other Sentries.

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not control. Who's there? The traitor?

Re-enter Sentries, with GLOSTER.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 't is he.
CORN. Bind fast his corky' arms.
GLO. What mean your graces?—Good my friends, consider
You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.
CORN. Bind him, I say. [Sentries bind him.
Reg. Hard, hard.—O filthy traitor!
GLO. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none.
CORN. To this chair bind him.—Villain, thou shalt find—[They bind him: REGAN pulls his beard.
GLO. By the kind gods, 't is most ignobly done
To pluck me by the beard.
Reg. So white, and such a traitor!
GLO. Naughty lady.

These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,
Will quicken, and accuse thee. I am your host:
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?
CORN. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?
Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.
CORN. And what confederacy have you with the late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands
Have you sent the lunatic king? Speak.
GLO. I have a letter2 guessing set down,
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppos'd.

CORN. Cunning.

Reg. And false.
CORN. Where hast thou sent the king?
GLO. To Dover.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
CORN. Wast thou not charg'd at peril—
Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.
CORN. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
GLO. Because I would not see thy cruel nails
Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh flash4 boarish fangs.
The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endur'd, would have buoy'd up,
And quench'd the stedfast fires;
Yet, poor old heart, he holp the heavens to rain.5
If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern' time,
Thou shouldst have said, 'Good porter, turn the key.'
All cruels else subscribe;* but I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.
CORN. See it shalt thou never.—Follows, hold the chair.—

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.
GLO. He, that will think to live till he be old,
Give me some help!—O cruel! O ye gods!
[Exeunt some of the Sentries.
Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.
CORN. If you see, vengeance—
SERV. Hold your hand, my lord. I have serv'd you ever since I was a child,
But better service have I never done you,
Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog!

SERV. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrel! What do you mean?
CORN. My villain! [Draws and runs at him.
SERV. Nay then, come on, and take the chance of anger.
[Draws. CORNWALL is wounded.
Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus!
SERV. O, I am slain!—My lord, I have one eye left
To see some mischief on him!—O! [Dies.
CORN. Lest it see more, prevent it.—Out, vile jelly!
Where is thy lustre now? [Tearing out his other eye."
GLO. All dark and comfortless.—Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain! Thou call'st on him that hates thee: it was he
That made the overture of thy treasons to us,
Who is too good to pity thee.
GLO. O my follies! Then Edgar was abused—
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!
Reg. Go, thrust him out at gates, and let him smell
His way to Dover. How is 't, my lord? How look you?
CORN. I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me, lady.—
Turn out that eyeless villain: throw this slave
Upon the dunghill.—Regan, I bleed space:
Untimely comes this hurt. Give me my arm.

[Exit CORNWALL, led by Regan.—Sentries unbind GLOSTER, and lead him out."

1 Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do,
If this man comes to good.

---1 villain: in quarto. 2 Dry-withered: applied in "Harriet's Declaration," to an old woman. 3 true: in quarto. 4 stick: in folio. 5 throw: in quarto. 6 rage: in quarto. 7 deem: in quarto: dreary. 8 Stiled. 9 It is in r. e. 10 The rest of the scene is not in folio.
ACT IV.

Old Man. Alack, sir! he is mad.
Glo. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.
Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest, be gone.
Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have,
Come on 't-what will.
[Exit.
Glo. Sirrah: naked fellow.
Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.—[Aside.] I cannot daub it farther.
Glo. Come hither, fellow.
Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—[To him.] Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.
Glo. Is not thou the way to Dover?
Edg. Both sile and gate, horse-way and foot-path.
Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidiet; Hobbildance, prince of dumberness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Fibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing, who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women. So bless thee, master!
Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heaven's plagues
Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched,
Makes thee the happier:—Heavens, deal so still!
Let the superfluous, and lust-dieted man,
That braves your ordinance, that will not see
Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;
So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough.—Dost thou know Dover?
Edg. Ay, master.
Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head
Looks fearfully in the confined deep:
Bring me but to the very brim of it,
And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear,
With something rich about me; from that place
I shall no leading need.
Edg. Give me thy arm:—[Exit.

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Gonereil and Edmund; Oswald meeting them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild husband
Not met us on the way.—Now, where's your master?
Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd:
I told him of the army that was landed;
He smil'd at it: I told him, you were coming;
His answer was, "The worse!" of Gloster's treachery,
And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out.
What must he should dislike? seems pleasant to him;
What like offensive.
Gon. Then, shall you go no farther. [To Edmund. It is the cowish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs,
Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way
May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;
Hasten his masters, and conduct his powers.
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff
Into my husband’s hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,
If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress’s command. Wear this; spare speech;

[Giving a chain.]

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak;
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air.—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloster! [Exit EDMUND.

O, the difference of man, and man!
To thee a woman’s services are due:
My fool usurps my body.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exit OSWALD.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Gonori! You are not worth the dust, which the rude wind
Blows in your face—fear your disposition:
That nature, which contains its origin,
Cannot be render’d certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more: the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile;
Filth’s savour but themselves. What have you done?
Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform’d?
A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence the head-lugg’d bear would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madd’d,
Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefic’d
That if the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
It will come,

Humility must perforce prey on itself;
Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver’d man!

That bear’st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know’st,
Fools do those villains pity, who are punish’d
 Erie they have done their mischief.

Where’s thy drum? France spreads his banners in our noiseless land;

And with plumed helm thy slayer begins threats;
Whilst thou, a moral sot, sit’st still, and criest,

“Alack! why does he so?”

Alb. See thyself, devil! Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid, as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb.* Thou changed and self-cover’d thing, for shame,
Bo-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones: how’er thou art a fiend,
A woman’s shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now! —

[Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O, my good lord! the duke of Cornwall’s dead;

Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.

Alb. Gloster’s eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill’d with remorse,
Oppos’d against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, thereat enrag’d,
Flew on him, and amongst them fell’d him dead,
But not without that harmful stroke, which since
Hath pluck’d him after.

[This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge!—But, O poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.

[This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer:

[Giving it.

’Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well:
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in* my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life. Another way,
The news is not so tart. [To him.] I’ll read, and

[Exit.

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; ’twas he inform’d against him,
And quit the house, on purpose that their punishment
 Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloster, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show’dst the king,
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither, friend;
Tell me what more thou knowest.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The French Camp near Dover.

[Enter KENT, and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back, know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Which since his coming forth is thought of; which
Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,
That his personal return was most requir’d,
And necessary.

Kent. Whom hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence:

And now and then an ample tear trill’d down
Her delicate cheek: it seem’d, she was a queen
Over her passion, who, rebel-like,
Sought to be king o’er her.

Kent. O! then it mov’d her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow dropp’d
Who should express her goodness. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better May: those happy smiles,
That play’d on her riper lip, seem’d not to know
What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,
As pears from diamonds drop’d.—In brief, sorrow
Would be a rarity most belov’d, if all
Could so become it.

SCENE VI. —The Country near Dover.

Enter GLOSTER, and EDGAR dressed like a Peasant.

GLO. When shall I come to the top of that same hill?

EDG. You do climb up it now: look, how we labour.

GLO. Methinks, the ground is even.

EDG. Horribly steep.

HARK! do you hear the sea?

GLO. No, truly.

EDG. Why, then you hear other sounds grow imperfect

By your ears’ anguish.

GLO. So may it be, indeed.

Methinks, thy voice is alter’d; and thou speakest
In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.

Edg. Y' are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I chang'd, But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks, y' are better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still.—

How fearful,
And dizzy, 't is to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows, and coughs, that wing the midday air,
Show scarce so gross as beetles: half way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire; dreadful trade!
Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head.
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear life mice; and yond' tall anchoring bark,
Diminish'd to her cock!; her cock, a buoy
Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge,
That on th' number'd idles pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high.—I'll look no more;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Tumble down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand; you are now within a foot
Of th' extreme verge; for all beneath the moon
Would not I leap up.

Glo. Let go my hand.

Here, friend, is another purse; in it, a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking: fairies, and gods,
Prosper it with thee! Go thou farther off:
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why do I trifle thus with his despair,
Is done to cure it.

Glo. O, you mighty gods!

This world I do renounce, and in your sights
Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,
My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!—
Now, fellow, fare thee well. [He leaps, and falls along.

Edg. Gone, sir; farewell.

And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself
Yields to the throes: had he been where he thought,
By this had thought been past. — Alive, or dead?
Oh, you sir! fresh! Hear you, sir? — speak!
Thus might he pass indeed; —yet he revives.
What are you, sir?

Glo. Away, and let me die.

Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,
So many fathom down precipitating,
Thou' st shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost breathe;
Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st not; art sound.
Ten masts at each make not the altitude,
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell;
Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again.

Glo. But have I fallen, or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn,
Look up a height; the shrill-gorg'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.

Glo! Alack! I have no eyes.—

Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,
To end itself by death? 'T was yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm: [Helping him up.
Up: —so, how is't? Feel you your legs? You stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness.

Upon the cliff, what thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glo. As I stood here below, methought, his eyes
Were too full moons; he had a thousand noses,
Horns whelk'd, and wavy'd like the enridged sea:
It was some fiend: therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now; henceforth I'll bear
Affliction, till it do cry out itself
"Enough, enough!" and die. That thing you speak of,
I took it for a man: often 't would say,
"The fiend, the fiend!" he led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.—But who comes here?

Enter Lear, fantastically dressed with Straws and Flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate
His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; * I am the king himself.

Edg. O, thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.—There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard. — Look, look! a mouse. Peace, peace! — this piece of toasted cheese will do. — There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant. — Bring up the brown billy. — O, well-drown, bird!
— the clout, the clout! woe! — Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Gon'eril! * — with a white beard! — They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me, I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say
"ay," and "no," to every thing I said! — "Ay" and
"no" too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter, when the thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing;
't is a lie, I am notague-proof.

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember;

Lear. Is not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:

When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.

I pardon that man's life: what was thy cause?

Adultery.—

Thou shalt not die: die for adultery? No:

The wren goes to it, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Lear. Let copulation thrive; for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To 't, luxury, poll-mell, for I lack soldiers.—

Behold yond' simpering dame,

Whose face between her forks presageth snow;
That mimics' virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name;

The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to't

With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are centaurs,

Though women all above:

But to the girdle do the gods inherit,

Beneath is all the fiends; there's hell, there's darkness, there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;"—see, see, see! pah; pah! Give me an ounce of cirt, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

---

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!
Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.
Glo. O, ruin'd piece of nature! This great world Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know me?
Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squint at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge: mark the penning of it.
Glo. Were all the letters sung, I could not see one.
Edg. I would not take this from report; it is, And my heart breaks at it.
Lear. Read.
Glo. What! with the case of eyes?
Lear. O, ho! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: yet you see how this world goes.
Glo. I see it feelingly.
Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears; see how yond' justice rails upon yond' simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?
Glo. Ay, sir.
Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou mightest behold the great image of authority: a dog's obey'd in office.—Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand! Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back; Thou hasty lust' to use her in that kind
For which thou whippst her. The usurer hangs the cozenor.
Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear; Robes, and fur'd gowns, hide all. Plate sin with gold, And the strong lance of justice hurls it breaks: Armin it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it. None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able 'em: Take that of me, my friend, who have the power To soil th' accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes; And, like a scurvy politician, seem To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now, now, now!
Pull off my boots: harder, harder; so.
Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd;
Reason in madness!
Lear. If you will weep my fortunes, take my eyes. I know thee well enough; thy name is Glosser: Thou must be patient. We came crying hither; Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air We wawl, and cry. I will preach to thee; mark me.
Glo. Alack! alack the day!
Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come To this great stage of fools.—'Tis a good plot.
It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe A troop of horse with felt. I'll put it in proof;
And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law, Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman with Attendants.

Gent. I here he is: lay hand upon him. —Sir, Your most fit daughter—
Lear. No rescue? What! a prisoner? I am even The natural fool of fortune.—Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have a surgeon, I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have anything.
Lear. No seconds? All myself?
Why, this would make a man, a man of salt, To use his eyes for garden-water-pots,
Ay, and for laying autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—
Lear. I will die bravely,
Like a snug' bridegroom. What! I will be jovial.
Come, come; I am a king; my masters, know you that?
Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.
Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa.

[Exit: Attendants follow.

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch, Past speaking in a king!—Thou hast one daughter, Who redeems nature from the general curse Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.
Gent. Sir, speed you: what's your will?
Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward? Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears that, Which can distinguish sound.
Edg. But, by your favour, How near 's the other army?
Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main desery Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.
Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,
Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent.

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me:
Let not my worse spirit tempt me again
To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.
Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?
Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows, Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand, I'll lead you to some biding.

Glo. Hearty thanks;
The bounty and the bension of heaven To boot, and boot!

Enter Oswald.

Osw. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy! That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh To raise my fortunes. —Thou old unhappy traitor, Briefly thyself remember:—the sword is out [Drawing. That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to it. [Edgar interposes.

Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant, Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence: Lest that th' infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Ch'ilI'nt let go, zir, without varther 'cision.
Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor folk pass. And ch'ld ha' been zwaggered out of my life, 't would not ha' been so long as 't is by a vontage. Nay, come not near the old man; keep out, ch'ld ye, or les' try whether your costard or my hallow be the harder. Ch'Il'be plain with you.

Osw. Out, dunghill!

1 consummation: in quarto. 2 The next sentence to "Get!" is not in quarto. 3 This: in f. e. 4 block: in f. e. 5 This line is not in folio. 6 Not in quarto. 7 name by: in quarto. 8 Head, or my cudge.
Edg. Ch'ill pick your teeth, zir. Come; no matter for your foins.

[They fight; and Edgar strikes him down.

Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me.—Villain, take my purse.

If ever you will thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters, which thou find'st about me,
To Edmund earl of Gloucester: seek him out.

Upon the British party.—O, untimely death! [Dies.

Edg. I know thee well: a serviceable villain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress,
As badness would desire.

Glo. What! is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.

Let's see his pockets: these letters, that he speaks of,
May be my friends. — He's dead; I am only sorry
He had no other death's-man.—Let us see:—

Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame us not:
To know our enemies' minds we rip their hearts,
Their papers more lawful.

[Reads.] "Let us remember our reciprocal vows.
You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered.
There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror; then, am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol, from the losted warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour.

"Your (wife, so I would say),
The affectionate servant,
Goneril."

O, unextinguish'd blaze of woman's will!
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;
And the exchange, my brother! — Here, in the sands,
Thee I'll rouse up, the post unsanctified,
Of murderous leeches; and in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practis'd duke. For him 'tis well,
That of thy death and business I can tell.

Glo. The king is mad: how stiff is my vile sense,
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract;
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,
And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves. [Drum afar off.]

Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.

Come, father; I'll bestow you with a friend. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp. LEAR. Learn on a Bed, asleep; Doctor, Gentleman, and others, attending: Enter Cordelia and Kent.

Cor. O thou good Kent! how shall I live, and work,
To match thy goodness? My life shall be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-paid.
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better suited: these weeds are memories of those worser hours.
I pray thee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam: yet the known shortens my main intent;
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord.—How does the king? [To the Physician.

Doct. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O, you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
Th' unut'n'd and jarring senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Doct. So please your majesty,
That we may wake the king? be hath slept long.

Cor. Be governed by your knowledge, and proceed
If the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?

Doct. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.

Kent. Good madam, be by when we do awake him:
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well. [Music.

Doct. Please you, draw near.—Louder the music there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess! Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring' winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch (poor perdu)!
With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; and wait thou fail, poor father,
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
'Tis wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to him.

Doct. Madam, do you; 'tis fitter.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

Learn. You do me wrong, to take me out o' the grave.—

Thou art a soul in bliss, but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Learn. You are a spirit, I know. Where did you die?

Cor. Still, still; far wide.

Doct. He's scarce awake: let him alone awhile.

Learn. Where have I been? Where am I?—Fair daylight?

I am mightily abused.—I should even die with pity
To see another thus.—I know not what to say.
I will not swear, these are my hands:—let's see; I Feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd
Of my condition?

Cor. O! look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me.

No, sir, you must not kneel.

Learn. Pray, do not mock me:
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor less;
And, to deal plainly, I fear, I am not in my perfect mind.

Yet I must know you, and know this man;
I am yet a fool, for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is; and all the skill I have,
Remember not these garments; nor I know not
Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me,
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
SCENE 1.

Enter, with Drums and Colors, Edmund, Regan, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold; or whether since he is advis’d by aught to change the course. He’s full of alteration, and self-reproving:—bring his constant pleasure.

[To an Officer, who exit.

Reg. Our sister’s man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. ’Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord, you know the goodness I intend upon you: Tell me, but truly, and then speak the truth, Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour’d love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother’s way To the forfended place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct, And bosom’d with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her. Dear my lord, Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not.—She, and the duke her husband,—

Enter Albany, Goneril, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that sister Should loosen him and me. [Aside.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met.—Sir, this I hear,—the king is come to his daughter, With others, whom the rigour of our state Fore’d to cry out. Where I could not be honest, I never yet was valiant: for this business, It toucheth us, as France invades our land, Not holds the king, with others, whom, I fear, Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason’d?

Gon. Combine together ’gainst the enemy; For these domestic and particular broils Are not the question here.

Alb. Let us, then, determine With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am. Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith. I pray, weep not: If you have poison for me, I will drink it. I know, you do not love me: for your sisters Have, as I do remember, done me wrong: You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Doc. Be comforted, good madam; the great rage, You see, is cur’d in him; and yet it is danger To make him even o’er the time he has lost. Desire him to go in: trouble him no more, Till farther settling.

Cor. Will’t please your highness walk?

Lear. You must bear with me:

Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old, and foolish.

[Exeunt Lear, Cordelia, Doctor, and Attendants. 2

Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As ’tis said, the bastard son of Gloster.

Gent. They say, Edgar, his banished son, is with the earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. ’Tis time to look about; the powers o’ the kingdom approach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought, Or well or ill, as this day’s battle ’s fought. [Exit.

ACT V.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you’ll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. ’Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. O, ho! I know the riddle. [Aside.—I will go. Enter Edgar, disguised.

Edg. If e’er your grace had speech with man so poor, Hear me one word.

Alb. I’ll overtake you.—Speak.

[Exeunt Edmund, Regan, Goneril, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter. If you have victory, let the trumpet sound For him that brought it: wretched though I seem, I can produce a champion, that will prove What is avouch’d there. If you miscarry, Your business of the world hath so an end, And machination ceases. Fortune love you! [Going. Alb. Stay; till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it. When time shall serve, let but the herald cry, And I’ll appear again. [Exit.

Alb. Why, fare thee well: I will o’erlook thy paper.

Re-enter Edmund.

Edm. The enemy’s in view; draw up your powers. Here is the guess of their true strength and forces By diligent discovery; [showing a paper, but your haste Is now urg’d on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love; Each jealousy of the other, as the stung Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take? Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy’d, if both remain alive: to take the widow, Exasperates, makes mad, her sister Goneril; And hardly shall I carry out my side, Her husband being alive. Now then, we’ll use His countenance for the battle; which being done, Let her who would be rid of him devise His speedy taking off. As for the mercy Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia, The battle done, and they within our power, Shall never see his pardon; for my state Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.
SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Enter Edgar and Gloster.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree:
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

Enter Edgar and Gloucester.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree:
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all. Come on.

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with Drum and Colours, Edmund; Lear and Cordelia, as Prisoners; Captain, Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,
Until their greater pleasures first be known,
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incurred the worst.
For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown.
Shall we not see these daughters, and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:
We two alone will sing like birds out the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
And ask of thee forgiveness. So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh.
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,
Who loses, and who wins; who's in, who's out;
And take upon's the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones,
That clab and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense.
Have I caught thee? [Embracing her.
He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence like foxes.
Wipe thine eyes; the gougers shall devour them, flesh and fell.
Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see them starve first.

Come. [Exit Lear and Cordelia, guarded.

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note; [Giving a Paper.] go, follow them to prison.

One step before I advance thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost it not thy way
To noble fortunes. Know thou, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword. Thy great employment
Will not bear question: either say, thou 'lt do't, or thrive by other means.

Capt. I'll do't, my lord. [done

Edm. About it; and write happy, when thou hast

Mark.—I say, instantly; and carry it so,
As I have set it down.

Capt. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oaks;
If it be man's work, I will do't. [Exit Captain. Flourish.

Enter Albany, Gloucester, Regan, Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain,
And fortune led you well. You have the captives,
Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
We do require them of you, so to use them,
As we shall find their merits, and our safety,
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention, and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes.
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen:
My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at farther space, 't appear
Where you shall hold your session.
At this time, we sweat, and bleed: the friend hath lost his friend;
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curst
By those that feel their sharpness.—
The question of Cordelia, and her father,
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him:
Methinks, our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers,
Bore the commission of my place and person;
To which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.
Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Gon. Holla! Holla! That eye that told you so look'd but a-squint.
Reg. I am not well: else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach. General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony:
Disperse of them, of me; the walls are thin.
Witness the world, that I create thee here.
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Gon. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

To Edmund.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason.—Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thy arrest, This gilded serpent. [Pointing to Gon.—For your claim, fair sister, I bar it in the interest of my wife; tis she is sub-contracted to this lord, And I, her husband, contradict your bans.
If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

To prove upon thy heart, whereeto I speak, Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name; But since thy outside looks so fair and warlike, And that thy tongue some 'tis of breeding breathes, What safe and nicely I might well delay By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn. Back do I toss these treasons to thy head; With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart; Which, for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise, This sword of mine shall give them instant way, Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets, speak!

[Alarums. They fight. Edmund falls.

Alb. O, save him! save him!

Gon. This is mere practice, Gloucester. By the laws of arms thou wast not bound to answer An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd, But cozen'd and beguile.

Edm. Shut thy mouth, dames; Or with this paper shall I stop it?—Hold, sir!—

Thou worse than any name, I read thine own evil. [She matches at the Letter.]

Gon. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not thine; Who can13 arraign me for 't?14

Alb. Most monstrous!

Know'st thou this paper?

Gon.15 Ask me not what I know. [Exit Goneril.

Alb. Go after her; she's desperate; govern her. [Exit an Officer.

Edm. What man hast charg'd me with, that have I done, And more, much more; the time will bring it out: 'Tis past, and so am I. But what art thou, That hast this fortune on me? If thou 'rt noble, I do forgive thee. Let's exchange charity, I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund; If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.

[Taking off his Helmet.] My name is Edgar, and thy father's son. The gods are just, and of our pleasant voices Make instruments to plague18 us: The dark and vicious place where thee he got Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right; 't is true;
The wheel is come full circle: I am here. Alb. Methought, thy very gait did prophesy A royal nobleness. I must embrace thee: Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I Did hate thee, or thy father.

Edg. Worthy prince, I know 't.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself? How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord.—List a brief tale; And when 't is told, O, that my heart would burst!—The bloody proclamation to escape, That follow'd me so near, (O, our lives' sweetness! That with the pain of death we'd hourly die, Rather than die at once!) taught me to shift Into a madman's rage, 't assume a semblance That very dogs disdain'd; and in this habit Met I my father with his bleeding rings, Their precious stones new lost; became his guide, Led him, begg'd for him, save'd him from despair; Never (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half hour past, when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing; and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his head's heart
(Alack! too weak the conflict to support)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good: but speak you on:
You look as you had something more to say.
Alb. If there be more more more, hold it in,
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this!

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity.

While I was big in clamour, came there a man;
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhor'd society; but then, finding
Who 't was that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he 'd burst heaven; threw him up on my father;
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd; which in recounting,
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack; twice, then, the trumpets sounded;
And there I left him tran'd.

Alb. But who was this?

Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody Knife.

Gent. Help, help! O help!

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. T is hot, it smokes; it came even from the heart of—O! she's dead:

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poisoned; she hath confess'd it.

Edm. I was contract'd to them both: all three
Now marry in an instant.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead!—
This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,
Touche us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.

Enter Kent.

Edg. O! it is he.

The time will not allow the compliment,
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master eye good night:
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!—
Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cor-
Sect my object, Kent?

[Edg. Kent, at Alnwick?]—

[The Bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in. Kent. Alack! why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd:

The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so—Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life:—some good I mean to do,
Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—
Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia.

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run! O, run!

Edg. To whom, my lord?—Who has the office? send Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on: take my sword,
Give it the captain.

Alb. Hasten thee, for thy life.

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordist herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile!
[Edmund is borne off.

Enter Lear with Cordelia dead in his Arms: Edg., Officer, and others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O! you are men of stones;
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
That heaven's vaults and earth should crack.—She's gone for ever.

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth.—Lend me a looking-glass:
If that her breath will mist or stain the shine,
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall, and cease!

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,
It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. O, my good master!

Lear. Pr'ythee, away.

Edg. 'T is noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all! I Might have sav'd her; now, she's gone for ever.—
Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha! What is 't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman.—
I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'T is true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow? I have seen the day, with my good biting falcon
I would have made them skip: I am old now,
And these same crosset spoil me.—Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o' the best: I'll tell you straight.
Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold,

Lear. This is a dull light:—are you not Kent?

Kent. The same,
Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;
He'll strike, and quickly too.—He's dead and rotten.
Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man—
Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hither.

Kent. Nor no man else. All's cheerless, dark, and deadly:
Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,
And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says; and vain is it,
That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Off. Enter an Officer.

[Edward is dead, my lord.]
Scene III.

KING LEAR.

Alb. That's but a trifle here—
You lords, and noble friends, know our intent.
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be applied; for us, we will resign,
During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power.—To you your rights,

To Edgar and Kent.
With boot, and such addition, as your honours
Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deserving.

Edg. Look up, my lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost: O! let him pass: he hates
That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gone, indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endure'd so long:
He but usurp'd his life.
Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business
Is general woe.—Friends of my soul, you twain
To Kent and Edgar.
Rule in this realm, and the gored state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go:
My master calls me; I must not say, no.
Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey;
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
The oldest hath borne most: we, that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

Exeunt with a dead March.

Scene, for the first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-Port in Cyprus.

Act I.

Scene I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Roderigo in choler; and Iago.

Rod. Tush! never tell me, I take it much unkindly, that thou, Iago, who hast had my purse, As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this. Iago. 'Sblood! but you will not hear me:
If ever I did dream of such a matter, abhor me. Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate. Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city, In personal suit to make me his lieutenant, Off-capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man, I know my price: I am worth no worse a place; But he, as loving his own pride and purposes, Evades them, with a bombast circumstance, Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war; And, in conclusion,^4 Nonsuits my mediators; "For certes," says he, "I have already chose my officer." And what was he? Forsooth, a great arithmetician, One Michael Cassio, a Florentine, A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife; That never set a squadron in the field, Nor the division of a battle knows More than a spinster; unless the bookish theoriz'd, Wherein the toged^1 consuls can propose As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice, Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had't election; And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof, At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds, Christian and heathen,—must be be-lee'd and call'd by debitor and creditor, this counter-caster:
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be, And I, God bless the mark! his Moor-ship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. But there's no remedy: 'tis the curse of service.

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Yet throw such changes of vexation on 't,
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house: I'll call aloud.

Iago. Do; with like envious accent, and dire yell,
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spread in populous cities.

Rod. What ho! Brabantio! signior Brabantio, ho!

Iago. Awake! what, ho! Brabantio! thieves! thieves!

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!

Enter BRABANTIO, above, at a Window.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within?

Bra. Are your doors lock'd?

Rod. Why? wherefore ask you this?

Iago. 'Zounds! sir, you are robb'd; for shame, put on your gown.

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul:
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupp'd your white ewe. Arise, arise!
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you.

Arise, I say.

Rod. What, have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Bra. Not I: what are you?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worse welcome: I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors.
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,
Being full of supper and disturbing draughts,
Upon malicious bravery dost thou come
To start thyquiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—

Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. 'Zounds! sir, you are one of those, that will serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbery horse:
you'll leave your nephews neath to you; you'll have couriers for cousins, and gendets for Germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. This thou shalt answer: I know thee, Rodederigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech
If it be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly, I find, it is) that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clapse of a lascivious Moor,
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter, if you have not given her leave,
I say again, hath made a gross revolt,
Laying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
On' an extravagant and wheeling stranger,
Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself:
If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus defiling you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho! Give me a taper!—call up all my people!—
This accident is not unlike my dream;
Belief of it oppresses me already.—
Light, I say I light! [Exit from above.

Iago. Farewell, for I must leave you,
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produc'd (as if I stay I shall)
Against the Moor: for, I do know, the state,—
However this may gall him with some check,—
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars
[Which even now stand in act] that, for their souls,
Another of his fathom they have none,
To lead their business: in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,
Lead to the sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell. [Exit.

Enter BRABANTIO, and Servants with Torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despaired time
Is nought but bitterness.—Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her?—O, unhappy girl!—
With the Moor, say'st thou?—Who would be a father?—
How didst thou know I was she?—O! thou deceiv'st me
Past thought.—What said she to you?—Get more pace!
Raise all my kindred!—Are they married, think you?
Rod. Truly, I think, they are.

Bra. O heaven!—How get she out?—O, treason of my blood!—
Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them act. Are there not charms,
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir; I have, indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother.—O, that you had had her!—
Some one way, some another.—Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think, I can discover him, if you please
To get good guard, and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call;
I may command at most.—Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.—
On, good Roderigo:—I'll deserve your pains. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants, with Torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men, yet do I hold it very stuff of the conscience To do no contriv'd murder: I lack iniquity Sometimes, to do me service. Nine or ten times I had thought to have yield'd him here, under the ribs.

Oth. 'T is better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prate, And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms Against your honour, That, with the little godliness I have, I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir, Are you fast married? for, be sure' of this, That the magnifico is much beloved;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential, As double as the duke's: he will divorce you; Or put upon you what restraint, or grievance, The law (with all his might 't enforce it on) Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services, which I have done the signior, Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'T is yet to know, Which, when I know that boasting is an honour, I shall promulgate, I fetch my life and being From men of royal siege: and my demerits May speak, unbonneted, to as proud a fortune As this that I have reach'd: for, know, Iago, But that I love the gentle Desdemona, I would not my unhoised free condition Put into circumscription and confine For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yonder?

Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends: You were best go in.

Oth. Not I; I must be found:
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul, Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter Cassio, and certain Officers with Torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.

The goodness of the night upon you, friends.

What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general, And he requires your haste, post-haste appearance, Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine. It is a business of some heat: the galleys Have sent a dozen sequent messengers, This very night, at one another's heels; And many of the consuls, rais'd and met, Are at the duke's already. You have been hotly call'd When, being not at your lodging to be found, [for: The senate sent above three several quests, To search you out.]

Oth. 'T is well I am found by you. I will but spend a word here in the house, And go with you.

[Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack: If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Cas. To whom?

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Duke. There is no composition in these news, That gives them credit. I'll see. Indeed, they are disproportion'd: My letters say, a hundred and seven galleys.

1 be assured: in folio. 2 and: in quarto. 3 height: in quartos. 4 Merits. 5 frequent: in quartos. 6 about: in folio. 7 Freights. 8 * This line is not in quarto, 1622. 9 dearling: in folio. 10 This and the five following words, are not in quarto, 1622. 11 bring: in folio.
Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

2 Sen. And mine, two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,
(As in these cases, with the same reports,
'T is oft with difference) yet do they all remain
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment.
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main articles I do approve
In fearful sense.

Enter an Officer, with a Sailor.

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Duke. Now, the business? Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes:
So was I bid report here to the state,
By signor Angelo.6

Duke. How say you by this change?

1 Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant,
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importunity of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let ourselves again but understand,
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks th' abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in:—if we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskillful,
To leave that latest which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake, and wage, a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injoin'd them4 with an after fleet.

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought—How many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail; and now do they re-stem
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus.—Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain, then, for Cyprus.—

Marcus Luccecos, is not he in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us to him; post, post-haste dispatch.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant Moor.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Iago, Rodenigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you
Against the general enemy Ottoman.—
I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior; 6

[To Brabantio.

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace, pardon me; Neither my place, nor ought I heard of business, Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care Take hold of me, for my particular grief Is of so flood-gate, and o'er-bearing nature, That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows; And it is still itself.

Sen. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me

She is abus'd, stolen from me, and corrupted By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks; For nature so preposterously to err, (Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense) Sans witchcraft could not.

Duke. Whoe'er he be that, in this foul proceeding, Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself, And you of her, the bloody book of law You shall yourself read in the bitter letter, After its own sense; yea, though our proper son Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.

Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems, Your special mandate, for the state affairs, Hath hither brought.

Duke and Sen. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this?

[To Othello.

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,
My very noble and approv'd good masters,
That I have taken away this old man's daughter,
It is most true;—true, I have marri'd her:
The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech, And little bless'd with the set phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith, Till now, some nine moons wasted, they have us'd Their dearest action in the tented field;
And little of this great world can I speak, More than pertains to feats of broil and battle; And, therefore, little shall I grace my cause, In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience, I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver Of my whole course of love: what drugs, what charms, What conjuration, and what mighty magic, (For such proceeding I am charg'd withal) I won his daughter with:

Bra. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion Blush'd at herself; and she,—in spite of nature, Of years, of country, credit, every thing,— To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on? It is a judgment maim'd, and most imperfect, That will confess perfection so could err Against all rules of nature; and must be driven To find out practices of cunning hell,

Why this should be. I, therefore, vouch again, That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood, Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect, He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof:
Without more evidence and overt test, These are thin habits, and poor likelihoods Of modern seeming, you prefer against him.

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak:
Did you by indirect and forced courses Subdue and poison this young maid's affections; Or came it by request, and such fair question As soul to soul affordeth. 6

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary, And let her speak of me before her father:
If you do find me foul in her report, The trust, the office, I do hold of you. 6

_Duke._ Fetch Desdemona hither.

_Oth._ Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place._

[Exeunt Iago and Attendants.

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

_Duke._ Say it, Othello.

_Oth._ Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From her ear; the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I had pass'd.
I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it:
Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents, by flood, and field;
Of hair-breadth escapes; th' imminent deadly breach;
Of being taken by the insolent foe,
And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance in my travel's history:
Wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,
It was but fit to speak, such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat.
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads do^4 grow beneath their shoulders. This, to hear,
Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house affairs would draw her thence;^4
Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse. Which I observing,
Took once a pliant hour; and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by paroles she had something heard,
But not intentionally; I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her fears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke,
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:^3
She swore,—in faith, 't was strange; 't was passing strange;
'T was pitiful, 't was wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd
That heaven had made such a man: she thank'd me;
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story;
And that would woo her.—On this hint^4 I spake;
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I lov'd her; that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have used;
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, and Attendants.

_Duke._ I think, this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands.

_Bra._ I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the wooer,
 Destruction on my head,^3 if my bad blame
Light on the man.—Come hither, gentle mistress:
Do you perceive in all this noble company,

Where most you owe obedience?

_Des._ My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty.
To you, I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of^9 duty;
I am hither to your daughter: but here's my husband;
And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

_Bra._ God be with you!—I have done.—

Please it your grace, on to the state affairs:
I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—

Come hither, Moor:
I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart^11
I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child,
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

_Duke._ Let me speak like yourself; and say a sentence,
Which, as a grieve, or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.^^

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past, and gone
Is the next way to draw on mischief^2. What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The rob'd, that smiles, steals something from the thief
He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

_Bra._ So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile:
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.
He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears;
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow,
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear,
That the bruise'd heart was pierce through the ear.
Beseech you, now to the affairs of state.

_Duke._ The Turk, with a most mighty preparation, makes for Cyprus.—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a most^4 sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must, therefore, be content to suffer the glibness of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

_Oth._ The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch^13 of war
My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find in hardiness: and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly, therefore, bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife;
Due reference of place, and exhibition,
With such accommodation, and resort,
As levels with her breeding.

_Duke._ If you please,
Be't at her father's.^^

_Bra._ I'll not have it so.

_Oth._ Nor I.

_Des._ Nor I; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts,
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend a prosperous ear,
And let me find a charter in your voice,
T' assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona? 9

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdued
Even to the very quality of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind;
And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for which I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interm shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords: 'beseech you, let her will Have a free way.

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with the young affects of heat,
(In me defect) and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And be your counsel, that you think
I will your service and the Moor's account.
When she is with me. No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid foill with wanton dulness
My speculative and active instruments,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skill of my helm,
And all indig and base adversities
Make head against my reputation.

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going. Th' affair cries haste,
And speed must answer it: you must hence to-night.

Des. To-night, my lord? 14

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine 't the morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect,
As do import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty, and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.

Good night to every one.—And, noble signior,

[To BRABANTIO.]

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes 12 to see:
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Execute DUKE, SENATORS, OFFICERS, &c.

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
I priythee, let thy wife attend on her,
And bring her 18 after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee; we must obey the time.

[Execute OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.

Rod. Where shall we meet i' the morning?
Iago. At my lodging.
Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.
Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?
Rod. What say you to?
Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?
Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.
Iago. Go to; farewell: put money enough in your purse.

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;
For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,
If I would time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets
He has done my office: I know not if 't be true:
Yet I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio's a proper man: let me see now;
To get his place, and to plume' up my will
In double knavery,—How, how?—Let's see:—
After some time, to abuse Othello's ear
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected; fram'd to make women false,
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by the nose,
As asses are.—
I have 't;—it is engender'd:—hell and night
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.

[Exit Roderigo.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus. A Platform.

Enter Montano and Two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?
1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Despair a sail.

Mon. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at land;
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortises? what shall we hear of this?

2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds,
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,
Seems to cast water on the burning head,
And quench the guards of th' ever-fixed pole.
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafted flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not shelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;
It is impossible to bear it out.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lads! our ware are done.
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designament halts: a noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in:
A Florentine, Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't: it is a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort,
Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted
With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heaven he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands

Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello.

Even till we make the main, and th' aerial blue,
An indistinct regard.

3 Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio, and several Islanders.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor.—O! let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well ship'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise is this?

Mss. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry, "a sail."

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

[ Guns heard.

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:
Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pay you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 't is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall.

[Exit. Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wi'v'd?
Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid,
That paragon description, and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in that essential vesture of creation,
Does bear all excellency. —How now! who has put in?

Re-enter Second Gentleman.

2 Gent. 'T is one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to derg the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by
The divine Desdemona.

Oth. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A se'ennight's speed.—Great Jove! Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath,
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renow'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort.—O, behold!

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Roderigo, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore.
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.

[They kneel.]—

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enveil thee round.

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O! but I fear.—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship.

[Aside.] A sail, a sail!

But, hark! a sail.

[Gun heard.]—

2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news.—

[Exit Gentleman.]

Good ancient, you are welcome.—Welcome, mistress.—

[To Emilia.]

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners: 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy. [Kissing her.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips,
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas! she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much; I find it still, when I have lost to sleep:
Marry before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors,
Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,
Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,
Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:
You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to 't;
For I am nothing, if not critical.

Des. Come on; assay.—There's one gone to the harbour?

Cas. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.

Come; how wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it, but, indeed, my invention
Comes from my pate, as birdlime does from frize,
It plucks out brains and all; but my muse labours,
And thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit,
The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd!—How, if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How, if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;
For even her folly helps her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes, to make fools laugh in the alcohouse. What miserable praise hast thou for that 's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish thereof,
But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisest the worst
But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of so much malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;
Hath tongue at will, and yet was never loud;
Never lack'd gold, and yet went never gay;
Fled from her wish, and yet said,—"how may I"?
She that, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,
Hades her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly;
She that in nothing never was so frail,
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;
She that could think, and n'er disclose her mind,
See suitors following, and not look behind:—
She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,—

Des. Do to what?

Iago. To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer.

Des. O, most lame and impotent conclusion!—Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal censurer?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may rely him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

[Asides with Desdem.]

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her arm in the palm: ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will give thee in thine own courtship. You say true: it is so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenant, 'twas been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy! it is so indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were elys'er-pipes for your sake.—[A Trumpet heard.] The Moor! I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'T is truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes! Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O, my dear warrior!—

Des. My dear Othello!—

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,
To see you here before me. O, my soul's joy!
If after every tempest come such calms, may the winds blow, till they have waken'd death; and let the labouring bark climb hills of seas, Olympus-high, and duck again as low

As hell's from heaven. If it were now to die,
'T were now to be most happy; for, I fear,
My soul hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid,
But that our loves and comforts should increase,
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers! —
I cannot speak enough of this content;
It stops me here; it is too much of joy:
And this, and this, the greatest discords be.

[Altering her.] That ever our hearts shall make!

Iago. [Aside.] O! you are well turn'd now;
But I'll set down the pegs that makes this music,
As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.—
News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle?
Hon, you shall be well desired in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I dole
In mine own comforts.—I pray thee, good Iago,
Go to the bay, and disembarke my collers.
Bring thou the master to the citadel:
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour.—
Come hither,1 If thou be'st valiant—as they say base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard.—First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger, thus, and let thy soul be instructed.
Mark me with what violence she first lov'd the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies; and will she love him will for prating? let not thy discomposed heart think it. Her love must be fed:
and what delight shall she have to look on the devil?
When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again to inflame it, and to give satisfy a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in.

Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to have the gorge, disbelieve and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice.

Now, sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does? a humble, well-meaned, and no further conceivable, than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none:2 a subtle slippery knave; a finder out of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: a devilish knave!
besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds look after; a pestilent complete knave, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of paper; if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: bless'd pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index,3 and obscure prologue to the history of lust and soul thoughts.
They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshalled the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion. Fish! But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; and the deed must not seduce. Cassio knows you not:—'t will not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or from what other cause you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choleric, and hapy, with his truncheon may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desired, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most speedily removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel! I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

[Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it;
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit:
The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not,—
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature;
And, I dare think, he 'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too;
Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure,
I stand accountable for as great sin)
But partly in my nature.

For that I do suspect the Jovial Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof
Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards,
And nothing can, or shall, content my soul,
'Till I am even'd4 with him, wife for wife;
Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,—
If this poor brachio of Venice, whom I trach,5
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,—
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip;
Abuse him to the Moor; in the rank,6 garb;
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too;
Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,
For making him egregiously an ass,
And practising upon his peace and quiet,
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd;
Knavery's plain face is never seen, till us'd.

[Exit.

SCENE II. A Street.

Enter a Herald, with a Proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello’s pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to adiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open:

and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath tolled eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. A Hall in the Castle.
Enter IAGO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night:
Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
Not to out-sport discretion.
Cas. Iago hath discretion what to do;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to 't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael, good night: to-morrow, with your earliest,
Let me have speech with you. Come, my dear love:
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensure;

That profit's yet to come twixt me and you —
Good night.

[Exit Oth., Des., Cassio, attended. Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdenoma, whom let us not therefore blame:
he hath not yet made wanent the night with her, and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And I'll warrant her, full of game.
Cas. Indeed, she's a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.
Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarum to love?
Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago. I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O! they are our friends; but one cup: I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here. I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels: the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door: I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do 't, but it dislikes me.

[Exit Cassio.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him,
With which he hath drunk to-night already,
'He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Rode-rigo,
Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side outward,
To Desdenoma hath to-night caroused
Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch.

Three elves of Cyprus,—noble, swelling spirits,
That hold their honours in a wary distance,
The very elements of this warlike isle,—
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
And they watch too. Now, amongst this flock of drankards,
Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle.—But here they come.
If consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter Cassio, with him Montano, and Gentlemen.

Cas. For heaven, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink; [Sings
And let me the canakin clink;
A soldier's a man;
A life's but a span;
Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys! [Wine brought.
Cas. For heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in potting; your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your Englishman.

Cas. Is your Englishman so exquisite in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain;
he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general.

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor—lawn.
He was a weight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine auld clank about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things.—Well, heaven's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It is true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part, no offence to the general,
nor any man of quality.—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay; but, by your leave, not before me, the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient.—Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.—Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient;
—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand,—
I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then; you must not think,
then, that I am drunk.

[Exeunt.

Mon. To the platform, masters: come, let's set the watch.
Iago. You see this fellow, that is gone before:
He is a soldier, fit to stand by Caesar
And give direction; and do but see his vice.
'T is to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as 'er other; 'tis pity of him.
I fear the trust Othello puts in him,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?
Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It was well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils. Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

Iago. How now, Roderigo?
[Aside to him]
I pray you, after the lieutenant; go. [Exit Roderigo.

Mon. And 'tis great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place as his own second,
With one of an ingraft infirmity:
It were an honest action to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well, and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?
[Cry within. — Help! Help! —
Re-enter Cassio, pursuing Roderigo.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave! — teach me my duty,
I'll beat the knave into a wicker'd bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue? [Striking Roderigo.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant; [Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir,
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come; you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.

Iago. Away, I say! [Aside to Rod.] go out, and cry a mutiny. [Exit Rod.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen! —
Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;—
Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed!
[Bell rings.

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!
The town will rise: God's will! lieutenant, hold!
You will be shamed for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. Zounds! I bleed still: I am hurt to the death.

[He faints.

Oth. Hold, for your lives!

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant—sir, Montano,—gentleman!—
Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold, hold! the general speaks to you: hold, for shame!
Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence arises this?
Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that,
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites?
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the isle
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?—
Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,

Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know:—friends all but now, even now
In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Divesting them for bed; and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitt'd them)
Swords out, and tilting in at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds:
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs, that brought me to a part of it.

Oth. How came it, Michael, you were thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wiser censure: what's the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you.

While I spare speech, which something now offends me,
Of all that I do know; nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night,
Unless self-charity be sometime a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
And passion, having my best judgment quelled,4
Assays to lead the way. If I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. But know how
This foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall lose me,—What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court of guard and safety?
'T is monstrous.—Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially affir'd, or leagued in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near.
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. Thus it is, general,
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determin'd sword
To execute upon him. 'Sirs, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause:
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest by his clamour (as it so fell out)
The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot,
Outran my purpose; and I return'd, the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath, which, till to-night,
Never might she before. When I came back,
(For this was brief) I found them close together,
At blow and thrust, even as again they were,
When you yourself did part them.
More of this matter can I not report:—
But men are men; the best sometimes forget:—
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,
Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, received

From him that fled some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio.—Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.—

Enter Desdemona, attended.

Look; if my gentle love be not raised up—
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter? Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.—
Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon.—
Lead him off. [Montano is led off. Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.—
Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldier's life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?
Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O! I have lost my reputation. I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial.—My Reputation, Iago, my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wounds: there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; of got without merit, and lost without deserving; you have lost no reputation at all, unless you reckon yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog, to affright an impious lion. Sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive so good a commander, with so light, so drunken, and so indocent an officer. Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine! if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil.

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O God! that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleas'd the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not happen'd; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again: he shall tell me, I am a drunkard. Had I as many mouths as Hy- dra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unlabled, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come; good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used: exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think, you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir.—I drunk!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general:—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and devotement of her parts and graces:—confess yourself freely to her; importune her; she'll help to put you in your place again. She is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint' between you and her husband entreat her to splinter, and my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the morning, I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must be to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. And what's he, then, that says I play the villain.

When this advice is free I give, and honest, Probable to thinking, and, indeed, the course To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy The inclining Desdemona to subdue In any honest suit: she's fram'd as fruitful As the free elements. And, then, for her To win the Moor,—were 't to renounce his baptism, All seals and symbols of redeemed sin,— His soul is so enflatter'd to her love, That she may make, unmake, do what she list, Even as her appetite shall play the god With his weak function. How am I, then, a villain, To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Directly to his good?—Divinity of hell! When devils will their blackest sins put on, They do suggest at first with heavenly shows, As I do now; for whilsts this honest fool Pries Desdemona to repair his fortunes, And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, I'll pour this pestilence into his ear.— That she repels him for her body's lust; And, by how much she strives to do him good, She shall undo her credit with the Moor: So will I turn her virtue into pitch, And out of her own goodness make the net, That shall enmesh them all.—How now, Roderigo? [Enter Roderigo, angrily.

Rodr. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent: I have been to-night exceedingly well endgalled; and, I think, the issue will be— I shall have so much experience for my pains, and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they, that have not patience! What wound did ever heal, but by degrees? Thou know'st best, we work by wit, and not by witchcraft; And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does 't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hast cashier'd Cassio.
Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe:
Content thyself a while.—By the mass, 't is morning;
Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee; go where thou art billeted:
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:

ACT

SCENE I.—Before the Castle.
Enter Cassio, and some Musicians.
Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains;
Something that's brief; and bid good-morrow to the general.

Enter Clown.
Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they squeak? the nose thus?
1 Mus. How, sir, how?
Clo. Are these, I pray you, called? wind instruments?
1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.
Clo. O! thereby hangs a tail.
1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?
Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.
1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.
Clo. If, you have any music that may not be heard, to't again; but, as they say, to hear music the general
does not greatly care.
1 Mus. We have none such, sir.
Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away.
Go; vanish into air; away! [Exit Musicians.
Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?
Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.
Cas. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quilles. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?
Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem so to notify her. [Exit. Enter Iago.
Cas. Do, good my friend.—In happy time, Iago.
Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?
Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife: she's right to her
Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Pursue me some assistance.
Iago. I'll send her to you presently;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free. [Exit.
Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.
Enter Emilia.
Emil. Good-morrow, good lieutenant. I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will soon be well.
The general and his wife are talking of it,
And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies

III.

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus,
And great affinity, and that in wholesome wisdom
He might not but refuse you; but, he protests, he loves
you,
And needs no other suitor but his likings,
To take the safest occasion by the front,7
To bring you in again.
Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—
If you think fit, or that it may be done,—
Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.
Emil. Pray you, come in:
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.
Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.
Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.
Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot,
And by him do my duties to the state.5
That done, I will be walking on the works;
Repair there to me.
Iago. Well, my good lord; I'll do't.
Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we see 't?
Gent. We wait upon your lordship. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.
Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.
Des. He thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf.
Emil. Good madam, do: I know? it grieves my husband,
As if the case were his.
Des. O! that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt,
Cassio,
But I will have my lord and you again,
As friendly as you were.
Cas. Bounteous madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never any thing but your true servant.
Des. O, sir! I thank you. You do love my lord;
You have known him long, and be you well assur'd,
He shall in strangeness stand no farther off
Than in a politic distance.
Cas. Ay, but, lady,
That policy may either last so long,
Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
That, I being absent, and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.
Des. Do not doubt that: before Emilian here,
I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article: my lord shall never rest;

1 speak; i. e. 4 Not in folio. 5 of all loves; in quarto, 1603. 2 This word is not in f. e. 4 These four words are not in folio. 6 sure.
in folio. 7 This line is not in folio. 5 This speech is not in quarto, 1622. 9 senate: in folio. 10 warrant: in folio. 11 cause: in folio.
I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience.
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit. Therefore, be merry, Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die,

To give thy cause away.

Enter Othello and Iago, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease;
Unfit for mine own purpose.

Des. Well, do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure; I cannot think it,
That he would steal! away so guilty-like,
Seeing, you coming.

Oth. I do believe 't was he.

Des. How, now, my lord!

I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is 't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good, my lord,
If I have any grace or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;
For if he be not one, that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face.

I pray you, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona: some other time,
Des. But shall 't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall 't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home:

I meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn;
On Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday morn:
I pray thee, name the time, but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;
And yet his trespass, in our common reason,
(Save that, they say, the wars must make examples
Out of our best) is not almost a fault;
T' incur a private check. When shall he come?

Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul,
What you could ask me that I should deny,
Or stand so manner'd on. What! Michael Cassio,
That came a wooing with you, and so many a time,
When I have spoke of you disparagingly,
Hath ta'en your part, to have so much to do
To bring him in? Trust me, I could do much,—

Oth. Pr'ythee, no more: let him come when he will,
I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon;
'T is as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,
Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
To your own person: nay, when I have a suit
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and false,—
As where's that palace, whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,
But sometimes uncleanly apprehensions
Keep leets, and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,—
Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
(As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not)—that your wisdom yet,
From one that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance.
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name, in man, and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse, steals trash; 't is something,
nothing;
'T was mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But, he that filches from me my good name,
Rob's me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I 'll know thy thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 't is in my custody.

Oth. Ha! ha!

Iago. O! beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-eyed monster, which doth make
The meat it feeds on; that cuckold lives in bliss,
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O! what damned minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet fondly loves!

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich enough;
But riches senseless is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why? why is this?

Think'st thou, I'll make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt,
Is once to be resolv'd. Exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'T is not to make me jealous,
To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;,
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:

Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: no, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt: when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,
Away at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago. I am glad of it: for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With framer spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio:
Wear your eye—thus, not jealous, nor secure;
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to't.
I know our country disposition well:
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience.
Is, not to leave 't undone, but keep 't unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And, when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then; she that, so young, could give out such a seeming,
To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak,—
He thought, 't was witchcraft. —But I am much to blame;
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.

Iago. I hope, you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my love.—But, I do see you are mov'd:—
I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success,
As my thoughts aim not at. 11 Cassio's my worthy friend.

My lord, I see you are mov'd.

Oth. No, not much mov'd.

Iago. I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so; and long live you to think so!

And yet, how nature erring from itself,
Iago. Ay, there's the point: as, to be bold with you,—
Not to affect many proposed matches,
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree,
Whereeto, we see, in all things nature tends.
Poh! one may smell in such a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—
But pardon me; I do not in suspicion 12
Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear,
Her will, recolling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave.

Oth. Why did I marry? —This honest creature, doubtless,
Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfold's.

Iago. My lord, I would I might entertain your ho-

Oth. To scan this thing no farther; leave it to time.

Iago. Although 't is fit that Cassio have his place,
(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability)
Yet if you please to hold him off a while,
You shall by that perceive him and his means.

Note, if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
(As worthy cause I have to fear I am)
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government. [Exit.

Iago. I once more take my leave.

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities with a learned spirit
Of human dealings: if I do prove her haggard,
Though that her juices were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have; or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years;—yet that's not much
She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loath her. O, curse of marriage!
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites. I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogative; are they less than the base?
'Tis destiny unchangeable, like death:
Even then this forked plague is fatal to us,
When we do quicken. Desdemona comes. [Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Des. If she be false, O! then heaven mocks itself!—
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello!
Your dinner and the generous islanders,
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am so blam'd.

Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching: 'twill away again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well. [Offers to bind his Head.

Des. Your napkin is too little; [Let's full her Napkin.

Des. Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt Orth. and Des.

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin.
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Wo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,
(For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it)
That she reserves it evermore about her,
To kiss, and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,
And give 't Iago: what he will do with it,
Heaven knows, not I;
I nothing, but to please his fantasy. [Enter Iago.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide, I have a thing for you.
Iago. A thing for me?—it is a common thing.

Emil. Ha?

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O! is that all? What will you give me now
For that same handkerchief?

Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief! Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her?

Emil. No. 'faith; she let it drop by negligence;
And, to th' advantage, I, being here, took 't up.

Look, how 'tis.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.

Emil. What will you do with 't, that you have been so earnest
To have me fetch it?

Iago. Why, what's that to you? [Snatching it.

Emil. If it be not some purpose of import,
Give't me again: poor lady! she'll run mad,
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not unknown on't; I have use for it.

Go; leave me. [Exit Emilia.

Iago. I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it: trifles, light as air,
Are to the jealous confirmations strong,
As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:—
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to dislodge;
But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:—

Enter Othello.

Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep,
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me? to me?

Iago. Why, how now, general: I more of that.

Oth. Avant! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack—

I swear, 'tis better to be much abus'd,
Than but to know 't a little.

[Exit.

Iago. How now, my lord!

Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust?
I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
I slept the next night well, 14 was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kiss on her lips:
He that is rob'd, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know 't, and he's not rob'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known.—O! now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind; farewell content:
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue: O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing sife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And O! you mortal engines, whose rude 15 throats
Th' immortal Jove's dread clowns immure counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone.

Iago. Is it possible?—My lord,—

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore;
Be sure of it: give me the ocular proof.

[Taking him by the Throat.

Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is it come to this?

Oth. Make me to see 't; or, at the least, so prove it.
That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop,
To hang a doubt on, or woe upon thy life!
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,
Never pray more: abandon all remorse;
On horror's head horrors accumulate;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd,
For nothing canst thou to damnation add;
Greater than that. [Releasing him.

Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me!
And you a man? have you a soul, or sense?—
God be wi' you: take mine office,—O wretched fool,
That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice
O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world!
To be direct and honest, is not safe.—
I thank you for this profit: and, from hence!
I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence.
Oth. Nay, stay.—You shouldst be honest.
Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,
I think my wife be honest, and think she is not;
I think that thou art just, and think thou art not.
I'll have some proof: her name, that was as fresh
As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black
As mine own face. If there be cords, or knives,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it.—Would I were satisfied!
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion:
I do repent me that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would I, nay, I will.
Iago. And may; but how? how satisfied, my lord?
Would you the supervision! grossly gape on?
Behold her topp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring it to that prospect. Damn them then,
If ever mortal eye do see them bolster,
More than their own! What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?
It is impossible you should see this.
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk: but yet, I say,
If imputation, and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you may have!

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.
Iago. I do not like the office;
But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,
Prick'd to 't by foolish honesty and love,
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately,
And being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.
There are a kind of men, so loose of soul,
That in their sleep's will mutter their affairs:
One of this kind is Cassio.
In sleep I heard him say,—"Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!"
And then, sir, would he gripe, and wring my hand,
Cry,—"O, sweet creature!" and then kiss me hard,
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
That grew upon my lips: then, laid his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then,
Cried,—"Cursed fate, that gave thee to the Moor!"
Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.
Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion:
'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.
Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs,
That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces
Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done;
She may be honest yet. Tell me but this:
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?
Oth. I gave her such a one: 'twas my first gift.
Iago. I know not that: but such a handkerchief
(I am sure it was your wife's) did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that,—
Iago. If it be that, or any that's was hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.
Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
Now do I see 't is true.—Look here, Iago;
All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven: 't is gone,—
Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
Yield up, O Love! thy crown, and hearted throne,
To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
For 't is of aspices' tongues!
Iago. Pray, be content.

Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood!
Iago. Patience, I say: your mind, perhaps, may change.
Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er knows surrounding ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontick, and the Hellespont;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up.—Now, by yond marble heaven,
In the due reverence of a sacred vow
I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet.—[Kneeling.
Witness, you ever-burning lights above!
You elements that clip us round about!
Witness, that here Iago doth give up
The execution12 of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service. Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody work13 see'er.

Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will upon the instant put thee to 't.
Within these three days let me hear thee say,
That Cassio's not alive.
Iago. My friend is dead: 't is done at your request;
But let her live.
Oth. Damn her, lowd minis! O, damn her!
Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw,
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fairest devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.
Iago. I am your own for ever.

[Exeunt.

scene iv.—The same.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where the lieutenant
Cassio lies?
Clo. I dare not say, he lies any where.
Des. Why, man?
Othello. What handkerchief? —
Clo. I call'd him to——
Des. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say, he lies here, or he lies there, to lie in mine own throat.
Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified to report?
Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.
Des. Seek him; bid him come hither; tell him, I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.
Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?
Emil. I know not, madam.
Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse full of cruzados; but my noble Moor is true of mind, and made of no such baseness as jealous creatures are; it were enough To put him to ill thinking.
Emil. Is he not jealous?
Des. Who? he! I think the sun, where he was born, Drew all such humours from him.
Emil. Look, where he comes.

Enter Othello.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio
Be call'd to him.——How 'tis with you, my lord!
Oth. Well, my good lady.——[Aside.] O, hardship to disguise!——
How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.
Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady.
Des. It yet hath felt no age, nor known no sorrow.
Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart. Hot, hot and moist: this hand of yours requires A sequester from liberty, fasting and praying.
Much castigation, exercise devout;
For here's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'T is a good hand;
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;
For 't was that hand that gave away my heart.
Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts of old gave hands,
But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.
Oth. What promise, chuck?
Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.
Oth. I have a salt and sudden rheum offends me.
Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord. [Offering it.
Oth. That which I gave you.
Des. Here it is not about me.
Oth. Not?
Des. No, indeed, my lord.
Oth. That is a fault.

That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,
'T would make her amiable, and subdue my father.

Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies. She died, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wife,
To give it her. I did so; and take heed on 't:
Make it a darling like your precious eye:
To lose or give 't away were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is 't possible?
Oth. 'T is true: there's magic in the web of it.
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course, two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk,
And it was dyed in mummy, which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! 't is not true?
Oth. Most veritable: therefore look 't well.
Des. Then, would to heaven that I had never seen it! Oth. Ha! wherefore?
Des. Why do you speak so startingly and rash?
Oth. Is 't lost? is 't gone? speak, is it out of the way?
Des. Heaven bless us!
Oth. Say you?
Des. It is not lost: but what an if it were?
Oth. How?
Des. I say, it is not lost.
Oth. Why, so I can, sir; but I will not now.
This is a trick to put me from my suit:
I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.
Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind mis-
Des. Come, come;
[gives.
You'll never meet a more sufficient man.
Oth. The handkerchief,—
Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.——
Oth. The handkerchief,—
A man that, all his time,
Hath founded his good fortunes on your love;
Shar'd dangers with you;——
Oth. The handkerchief,—
Des. In sooth, you are to blame.
Oth. Away! [Exit Othello.
Emil. Is not this man jealous?
Des. I never saw this before.
Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief: I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'T is not a year or two shows us a man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food.
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full, They belch us.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Look you! Cassio, and my husband.
Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do 't:
And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.
Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news with you?
Cas. Madam, my former suit. I do beseech you,
That by your virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the office of my heart,
Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortal kind,
That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpose'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again.
ACT IV.

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers,
She may, I think, bestow 't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too:
May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;
They have it very oft, that have it not:
But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it.
Thou saist,—O! it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected* house,
Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.
Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That’s not so good, now.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Oth. Or heard him say,—as knaves be such abroad, Who having; by their own importunate suit, Or voluntary doitage of some mistress, Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose But they must blab—

Iago. What hath he said?

Oth. He hath, my lord; but be you well assured, No more than he ’ll answer.

Iago. Faith, that he did,—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her, when they believe her. Lie with her! that’s false.—

Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief!—To confess, and be hanged for his labour.—First, to be hanged, and then to confess:—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shuddering passion without some instruction. It is not words, that shake me thus:—

Fish!—Noses, ears, and lips,—Is it possible?—Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil!—[Falls in a Trance.

Iago. Work on, my handkerchief! Work on, my handkerchief!—

My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught; And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus, All guiltless; meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord!

Enter Cassio.

My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio!

Cas. What’s the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy:

This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear. The lethargy must have his quiet course.

If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by, Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:—

Do you withdraw yourself a little while, He will recover straight: when he is gone, I would on great occasion speak with you.—

[Exit Cassio.

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven. Would you would bear your fortunes like a man.

Oth. A horned man’s a monster, and a beast.

Iago. There’s many a beast, then, in a populous city, And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;

Think, every bearded fellow; that’s but yok’d, May draw with you: there’s millions now alive, That nightly lie in those improper beds, Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better, O! ’tis the spite of hell, the fiend’s arch-mock, To tip a wanton in a secure couch, And to suppose her chaste. No, let me know; And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O! thou art wise; ’tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;

Confine yourself but in a patient list,4

Whilst you were here, o’erwhelmd5 with your grief,

(A passion most unfitting such a man)

Cassio came hither: I shifted him away, And laid good scence upon your estacy;

Bade him anon return, and here speak with me; The which he promised. But eneave yourself, And mark the fearers, the gibes, and notable scorns, That dwell in every region of his face;

For I will make him tell the tale anew,

Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when

He hath, and is again to ope your wife:—

I say, but mark his gesture.—Marry, patience; Or I shall say, you are all-in-all in spleen,

And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?

Iago. I will be found most cunning in my patience; But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

Oth. That’s not amiss; But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

[Othello retires.

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca;

A housewife, that by selling her desires,

Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature,

That dotes on Cassio, as ’tis the strumpet’s plague,

To beguile many, and be beguil’d by one.

He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain?

From the excess of laughter:—here he comes.—

Re-enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;

And his unbookish jealousy must construe

Poor Cassio’s smiles, gestures, and light behaviour,

Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieutenant?

Cas. The worse, that you give me the addition,

Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on.

Now, if this suit lay in Bianca’s power, [Speaking lover.

How quickly should you speed?

Cas. Alas, poor caitiff! [Aside.

Oth. Look; how he lau’rs already! [Aside.

Iago. I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, I faith, she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and lau’rs it out.

[Aside.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him To tell it o’er. Go to; well said, well said: [Aside.

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry her;

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph o’er me? do you triumph?

[Aside.

Cas. I marry her!—what, a customer? I pr’ythee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it is so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so. They laugh that win. [Aside.

Iago. Faith, the cry goes, that you shall marry her.

Cas. Pr’ythee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else. [Aside.

Oh. Have you scorned me? Well. [Aside.

This is the monkey’s own giving out: she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me: now he begins the story.

[Aside.

Cas. She was here even now; she hunted me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes this bauble; and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck:—

1 The rest of the speech is in quarto, 1623. 2 shadowing: in f. e. 3 These words are not in folio. 4 See quarto, 1630; unsuturing: in quarto, 1622; resulting: in folio. 5 restraint: in folio. 6 Do you triumph, Roman? in f. e.
Oh. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: his gesture imports it. [Aside.]

Cas. So hangs', and lolls, and weeps upon me; so hales, and pulls me; ha, ha, ha!—

Oh. Now he tells, how she plucked him to my chamber. O! I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to. [Aside.]

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Iago. Before me! look where she comes.

Enter Bianca.

Cas. 'Tis such another pitch of marrying, a perfumed one.—Who do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief, you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work!—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and know net who left it there. This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There, give it your hobby-horse: wherever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now, how now!

Oh. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief! [Aside.]

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepared for.

[Exit.]

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. 'Faith, I must; she'll rain in the street else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, come; will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more, [Exit Cassio.]

Oh. [Advancing.] How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vices?

Oh. O, Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oh. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oh. I would have him nine years a killing.—A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman! Iago.

Oh. Nay, you must forget that.

Oh. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live. No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O! the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Oh. Nay, that's not your way.

Oh. Hang her! I do but say what she is. —So delicate with her needle! —An admirable musitian! O! she will sing the savageness out of a bear.—Of so high and plentiful wit and invention! —

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oh. O! a thousand? thousand times. And then, of so gentle a condition.

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oh. Nay, that's certain:—but yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago! the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oh. I will chop her into messes.—Cuckold me!

Iago. O! 'tis foul in her.

Oh. With mine officer!

Iago. That's foul.

Oh. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:—I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again. This night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oh. Good; good, the justice of it please; very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker. You shall hear more by midnight. [A Trumpet within.]

Oh. Excellent good.—What trumpet is that same? Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico; Come from the duke; and, see, your wife is with him. Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. Save you, worthy general!

Oh. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.

[Giving him a Packet.]

Oh. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.

[Opens the Packet, and reads.]

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico? Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior:

Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you. How does lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my lord An unkind breach, but you shall make all well.

Oh. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oh. "This fail you not to do, as you will"—[Reading.]

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.

Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one: I would do much

To atone't them, for the love I bear to Cassio. Iago. Fire and brimstone!

My lord?

Oh. Are you wise?

Des. What! is he angry?

Lod. May be, the letter mov'd him;

For, as I think, they do command him home,

Deputing Cassio in his government,

Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.

Oh. Indeed.

Des. I am glad to see you mad.

Oh. How, sweet Othello?

Des. Devil! [Striking her.]

Lod. I have not deserv'd this.

Des. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw it. 'T is very much;

Make her amends, she weeps.

Oh. O devil, devil!

If that the earth should.com with woman's tears,

Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.—

Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.]

Lod. Truly an obedient lady.—

I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oh. Mistress!

Des. My lord?

Oh. What would you with her, sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

Oh. Ay; you did wish, that I would make her turn:

Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,

And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep;

And she's obedient, as you say, obedient,—

Very obedient.—Proceed you in your tears.

Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!

I am commanded home.—Get you away;

I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,
And will return to Venice.—Hence!avanaugh!

[Exit Desdemona.

Cassio shall have my place. And,—sir, to-night,
I do intreat that we may sup together:
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys!
[Exit.

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate
Call, in—all sufficient?—This the noble nature
Whom passion could not shake? whose sole virtue
The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,
Could neither graze, nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?
Iago. He's that he is: I may not breathe his censure.
What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not,
I would to heaven, he were.

Lod. What! strike his wife?
Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew,
That stroke would prove the worst.

Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me, to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe him;
And his own courses will denote him so,
That I may save my speech. Do but go after,
And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry, that I am deceiver'd in him. [Exit.

SCENE II. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and her together.
Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I heard
Each syllable that breath made up between them.

Oth. What! did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out of the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, or nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,
Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.
If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let heaven require it with the serpent's curse,
For if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy: the purest of their wives
Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither:—go,— [Exit Emilia.

She says enough;—yet she's a simple bawd,
That cannot say as much.—This is a subtle whore,
A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets:
And yet she'll kneel, and pray: I have seen her do't.

Re-enter Emilia, with Desdemona.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy is this?

Oth. Some of your function, mistress; [To Emilia
Leave proverbs alone, and shut the door;

Cough, or cry hem, if any body come:
Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.

[Exit Emilia.

Des. Upon my knee, what doth your speech import?
I understand a fury in your words,
[Knells. But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Your wife, my lord; your true
And loyal wife.

[Rises. Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves
Should fear to seize thee: therefore, be double-dam'd;
Swear thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Oth. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? How am I false?

Oth. O Desdemona! —away, away, away!

Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?

Am I the occasion' of these tears, my lord?

If, haply, you my father do suspect
An instrument of this your calling back,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost him,
Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven
To try me with affliction; had he rain'd
All kinds of sores, and shame's, on my bare head;
Stood me in poverty to the very lips;
Giv'n to captivity me and my utmost hopes;
I should have found in some part of my soul
A drop of patience: but, alas! to make me
A fixed figure, for the hand' of scorn
To point his slowly moving* finger at;
Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:
But there, where I have garnered up my heart,
Where either I must live, or bear no life,
The fountain from which my current runs
Or else dry up, to be discarded thence,
Or keep it as a cistern, for foul toads
To knot and gender in!—turn thy complexion there,
Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubin;
Ay, there,^ look grim as hell!

Des. I hope, my noble lord esteems me honest.

Oth. O! ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. O thou* weed!
Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,
That the sense aches at thee, thou wouldst hasten ne'er been born!

Des. Alas! what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,
Made to write vice upon? What committed?
Committed?—O thou public commoner!^* I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty,
Did I but speak thy deeds.—What committed?
Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks:
The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
And will not hear it. What committed?

Impudent strumpet!^^^^^^^^^^^

Des. By heaven you do me wrong.

Oth. Are you not a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian.

If to preserve this vessel for my lord,
From any other foul, unlawful touch,
Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saved.

Iago. Speak within door.

Iago. O fie upon them! some such squire he was,
That turn'd his wit the seamie side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago!

What shall I do to win my lord again?

Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,
I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:
If e'er my will did trespass against his love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, mine any sense,
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will—though he do shake me off
To beggary divorcement.—love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;
And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say where;
It does abhor me now I speak the word;
To do the act that might the addition earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content; 't is but his humour:
The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.¹⁰

Des. If 't were no other,

Iago. 'T is but so, I warrant. [Music.

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!
The messengers of Venice stay the meat.
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia. Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo! Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou dost me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all convenience, that suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. 'T Faith, I have heard too much; for your words, and performances, are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means: the jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist; you have told me, she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance;²² but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well I go to; but cannot go to, man; nor 't is not very well; by this hand, I say, it is very scurry; and begin to find myself foibed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 't is not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intent of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and

To lash the rascals naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!
even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but, yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no! he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him unceaseable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him: he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear farther reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.]
SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home.
Quick, quick, for naught; I'll be at thy elbow.
It makes us, or it mars us: think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Roder. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand.

Roder. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons.—
'T is but a man gone: forth, my sword; he dies.

[Stands back.]

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my game: live Roderigo,
He calls to a rehearsal large
Of gold, and jewels, that I rubb'd from him,
As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly: and, besides, the Moor
May unfold to me him: there stand I in much peril.
No, he must die:—be't so; I hear him coming.

[Retiring.

Enter Cassio.

Roder. I know his gait: 'tis he.—Villain, thou diest.

[Rushing forward, and making a pass at Cassio.

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my coat is better than thou know'st it;
I will make proof of thee.

[Draws, and wounds Roderigo.

Cas. I am main'd for ever.—Light, 'ho! murder! murder!]

Rod. Enter Othello, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio.—Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am!

Oth. It is 'e'en so.

Or scant our former having in despite,
Why, we have galls; and, though we have some grace,
Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know,
Their wives have sense like them: they see, and smell,
And have their palates, both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have. What is it that they do,
When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think, it is; and doth affection breed it?
I think; it doth. Is't frailty, that thus ors?
It is so too: and have not we affections,
Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have?
Then, let them use us well; else, let them know,
The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good-night; good-night: heaven me such uses send,
Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend. [Exit.

ACT V.

Cas. O, help! 'ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth. 'Tis he. —O brave Iago! honest, and just,
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong;
Thou teachest me.—Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest fate hies:—strumpet, I come.

Rod. Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;
Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted.

[Exit Othello.

Enter Lodovico and Gratiano, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gra. 'T is some mischance; the cry is very direful.

Cas. O, help!

Lod. Hark!

Rod. O, wretched villain! Hark!

Lod. Two or three groan.—It is a heavy night.

These may be counterfeit: let's think 't unsafe
To come in to the cry without more help.

Rod. No body come? then, shall I bleed to death.

[Enter Iago, unready, with a Light.

Lod. Hark!

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this, that cries out murder thus?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here, that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? O! I am spoil'd; undone by villains:
Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this?

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains! —

What are you there? come in, and give some help.

[To Lodovico and Gratiano.

Rod. O, help me! here.

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!

[Iago stabs Roderigo.

SCENE II.

Enter Iago. Iago. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!—

Iago. Kill men? the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town!—Ho! murder! murder! What may you be? are you of good, or evil?

Iago. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

lod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio?

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!—Light, gentlemen! I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is 't that cry'd?

Iago. Who is 't that cry'd?

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!

O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet!—Cassio, may you suspect Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No.

Iago. I am sorry, to find you thus: I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter:—so.—O, for a chair, To bear him easily hence!—

Bian. Alas! he faints.—O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio! Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash To be a party in this injury.—

Patience a while, good Cassio.—Come, come.

Lend me a light.—Know we this face, or no?

[Looking at Rod.]

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!

Gra. Roderigo!

Iago. He, he, 'tis he.—O! that's well said;—the chair. — [A chair brought.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence; I'll fetch the general's surgeon. For you, mistress, [To Bianca.

Save you your labour.—He that lies slain here, Cassio, Was my dear friend. What malice was between you?—

Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.

Iago. What, look you pale?—O, bear him out o' the air. — [Cassio and Rod. are borne off.

Stay you, good gentlemen.—Look you pale, mistress? Do you perceive the gauntness of her eye?— Nay, an you stir,—we shall hear more anon.—

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her: Do you see, gentlemen?—nay, guiltiness will speak, Though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Alas! what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?—

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark By Roderigo, and fellows that are scap'd: He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead. —

Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio! Iago. This is the fruit of whoring.—Pr'ythee, Emilia, Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night.—

What! do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O! did he so? I charge you, go with me. Emil. O, fie upon thee, strumpet!

Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest, As you that thus abuse me. Emil. As I? fie upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd. —

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale. —

Emilia, run you to the citadel, And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd. —

Will you go on, I pray?—This is the night, That either makes me, or fordoes me quite. [Aside.]

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber.

Desdemona in Bed asleep. A Light burning.

Enter Othello;* looking the Door after him. Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,— Let me not name it to you. you chaste stars! — It is the cause.—Yet I'll not shed her blood; Nor seem that whiter skin of hers than snow, And smooth as monotanical tabuster. Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men. Put out the light, and then—put out the light? If I quench thee, thou flaming minister, I can again thy former light restore, Should I repent me; but once put out thy light, Thou cunning*^ pattern of excelling nature, I know not where is that Promethean heat, That can thy light returne. When I have pluck'd the rose, I cannot give it vital growth again, It needs must wither.—I'll smell it! on the tree.—

[Aside.]

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword!—One more, one more,— Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee, And love thee after.—One more, and this the last: So sweet was never so fatal. I must weep, But they are cruel tears: this sorrow's heavenly; It strikes, where it doth love.—She wake—

Des. Who's there? Othello? —

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?—

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?—

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime, Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace, Solicit for it straight. —

Des. Alas, my lord! what may you mean by that?—

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by: I would not kill thy unprepared spirit; No, heaven forfend, I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?—

Oth. Ay, I do. —

Des. Then, heaven

Have mercy on me!—

Oth. Amen, with all my heart.

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Humph! —

Des. And yet I fear you: for you are fatal then, When your eyes roll so. Why should I fear, I know not, Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. —

[Aside.]

They are loves I bear to you.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death’s unnatural, that kills for loving.—Alas! why gnaw you so your nether lip? Some bloody passion shakes your very frame; These are portents; but yet, I hope, I hope, They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so. What’s the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so lov’d, and gave thee, Thou gavest to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul! Send for the man, and ask him. Sweet soul, take heed, Take heed of perjury; thou’rt on thy death-bed.

Oth. Ay, but not yet to die.

Des. Yes; presently: Therefore, confess thee freely of thy sin; For to deny each article with oath, Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong conception, That I do groan withal. Thou art to die. Des. Then, Lord, have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did Offend you in my life; never lov’d Cassio, But with such general warranty of heaven As I might love: I never gave him token. Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in’s hand. O perjur’d woman! thou dost stone my heart, And mak’st me call, what I intend to do, A murder, which I thought a sacrifice. I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then; I never gave it him.—Send for him hither; Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess’d.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath,—us’d thee.²

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No; his mouth is stopp’d;

Honest Iago hath ta’en order for’t.

Des. My fear interprets them.—What! is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray’d, and I undone,

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep’st thou for him to my face?

Des. O! banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet! Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night.

Des. Nay, if you strive,—But half an hour.

Oth. Being done, There is no pause.³

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late.

Des. O Lord, Lord, Lord!⁴ [He smothers her. Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what ho! my lord, my lord! Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead! not yet quite dead? I, that am cruel, am yet merciful; I would not have thee linger in thy pain.—So, so.⁵ Emil. [Within.] What ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who’s there?
SCENE II.

Of one entire and perfect chrysoleye,
I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 't was he that told me! first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slimes
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iteration,* woman? I say, thy husband.

Emil. O mistress! villainy hath made mocks with My husband, say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman; I say, thy husband: dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart:
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha! [Threatening her.]

Emil. Do thy worst:
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace! you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm,
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dot!
As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee know,
Though I lost twenty lives,—Help! help, ho! help!
The Moor has kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter?—How now, general!

Emil. O! are you come, Iago? you have done well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man:
He says, thou told'st him that his wife was false.
I know, thou didst not, thou 'rt not such a villain.
Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more
Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie.—
She false with Cassio!—Did you say with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak.

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed. 6

All. O, heaven forbend!

Emil. And your reports have set the murderer on.

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters; it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'T is a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villainy! villainy! villainy!
I think upon 't,—I think, I smell 't:—O villainy!
I thought so then:—'T will kill myself for grief.—
O villainy! villainy! villainy!

Iago. What! are you mad? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:—
'T is proper I obey him, but not now.—

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Falling on the ground.]

Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar,
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,

Oth. That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O! she was foul— [Starting up.
I scarce did know you, uncle; there lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd.
I know, this act shows terrible* and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead.
Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yes, cut his better angel from his side,
And fall to repARATION. 4

Oth. 'T is pitiful; but yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed: Cassio confess'd it;
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognizance and pledge of love
Which I first gave her. I saw it in his hand;
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'T will out, 't will out.—I hold my peace,
sir, no;
No, I will speak as liberal as the wind. 9
Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home. [Drawing.]

Emil. I will not. [Iago offers to stab Emil.]

Gra. Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou spakest of,
I found by fortune, and did give my husband:
For often, with a solemn earnestness,
(More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle)
He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore! [They hold him.] 11

Emil. She gave it Cassio! no, alas! I found it,
And I did give 't my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest. [Stabs her, and exit instantly.]

Emil. By heaven, I do not; I do not, gentlemen.

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool
Do with so good a wife? 12

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven,
But what serve for the thunder?—Precious villain!

Gra. The woman falls: sure, he has kill'd his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay,—O, lay me by my mistress's side!

Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. 'T is a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,
Which I have here! recover'd from the Moor.

Come, guard the door without: let him not pass,
But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain,
For 't is a damned slave.

[Exeunt Montano and Gratiano.

Oth. I am not valiant neither,
But every puny whisper gets my sword.
But why should honour oultime honesty?
Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?

Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
And die in music:—Willow, willow, willow.—

Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel Moor;
So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;
So speaking as I think, I die,—[Dies.]

Oth. I see him another man in this chamber,
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper.—

O! here it is.—Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me, then, and speak to’er, or Naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter Gratiano.

Gra. What is the matter?—

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon;
A better never did itself sustain
Upon a soldier’s thigh: I have seen the day,
That, with this little arm, and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impediments
Than twenty times your stop.—But, O vain boast!
Who can control his fate? ’tis not so now.—
Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon’d;
Here is my journey’s end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost soil.
Do you go back dismay’d? ’tis a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello’s breast.
And he retires,—Where should Othello go?
Now Low one is the look now? O, O this arr’d wench!
Pale as thy shock! when we shall meet at comit,
This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl;
Even like thy chastity,—O, cursed slave!—
Whip me, ye devils, From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
O Desdemona! O Desdemona! dead? O! O! 4

Enter Lodovico and Cassio.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That’s he, that was Othello: here I am.

Lod. How came you to be so arr’d? bring the villain forth.

Enter Montano with Iago, bound, and Officers. 5

Oth. I look down towards his feet;—but that’s a fable;
If that thou bo’st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[Othello wounds Iago.]

Iago. Wrench his sword from him.

Lod. I bleed, sir; but not kill’d.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I’d have thee live;
For, in my sense, ’tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello! that wasr once so good,
Fall’n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, anything:
An honourable murderer, if you will;
For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess’d his villainy.
Did you and he consent in Cassio’s death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.
Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil,
Why he hath thus ensnarl’d my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know.

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What I not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall’n,
Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter,
Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo; 6 [Shewing it.
And here another: the one of them imports
The death of Cassio to be undertook
By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish, and most gross!

Lod. Now, here’s another discontented paper,

[Producing it.

Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain;
But that, belike, Iago in the interim. 7

Come in and satisfied him.

Oth. O, the pernicious caitiff!—
How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief,
That was my wife’s?

Cas. I found it in my chamber;
And he himself confess’d, but even now,
That there he dropp’d it, for a special purpose,
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo’s letter,
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him
Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake,
After long shalling dead,—Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forswear this room, and go with us:
Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest,
Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state.—Come; bring them away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you go.
I have done the state some service, and they know it;
No more of that.—I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then, must you speak
Of one that lov’d, not wisely, but too well.
Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplex’d in the extreme; of one, whose hand,
Like the base Indian, 8 threw a pearl away
Richer than all his tribe; of one, whose subdued eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal 9 gum. Set you down this;
And say, besides, that in Aleppo once,
When I a malignant and a turban’d Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduc’d the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus. 10

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that’s spoken is marr’d.

Oth. I kiss’d thee, ere I kill’d thee:—no way but this,
Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. 11

[Dies on the Bed.

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon,
For he was great of heart.

Lod. O Spartan dog!

More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea,
Look on the tragic loading 12 of this bed; 13 [To Iago.
This is my work: the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid—Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you.—To you, lord governor,
Remains the censure of this hellish villain;
The time, the place, the torture:—O, enforce it!
Myself will straight abound, and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate. [Exeunt.]
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

M. Antony, Octavius Caesar, Sextus Pompeius, Demetrius Enobarbus, Vindictus, Eros, Scarus, Dercetas, Demetrius, Philo, Mecenas, Agrippa, Dolabella, Proculeius, Thyrreus, Gallus, Friends of Antony. Friends to Caesar.

Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE, in several Parts of the Roman Empire.

ACT I.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phi. Nay, but this doting of our general's O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes, That o'er the files and musters of the war Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn The office and devotion of their view Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst The buckles on his breast, renown'd all temper, And is become the bellows, and the fan, To cool a gipsy's lust. Look, where they come.

Flourish. Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her. Take but good note, and you shall see in him The triple pillar of the world transform'd Into a strumpet's foot: behold and see. Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much. Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd. Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd. Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome. Ant. Graces me:—the sum. Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony: Fulvia, perchance, is angry; or, who knows If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent His powerful mandate to you, "Do this, or this; 1 Denies 2 damn: in f. 3 Know.

Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that; Perform 't, or else we doom thee."

Ant. How, my love! Cleo. Perchance,—nay, and most like,— You must not stay here longer; your discretion Is come from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony,— Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's, I would say?— Both?—

Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen, Thou burn'st, Antony, and that blood of thine Is Caesar's homager: else so thy check pays shame, When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds,—The messengers. Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide arch Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space. Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair, [Embracing. And such a twain can do't, in which I bind, On pain of punishment, the world to weet," We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?— I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony Will be himself. Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.— Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours, Let's not confound the time, with conference harsh: There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now. What sport to-night? Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Pie, wrangling queen! Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep; whose every fashion striveth to make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd.
No messenger; but thine, and all alone,
To-night we'Il wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it.—Speak not to us.

[Exeunt Antony and Cleopat with their Train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight?
Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem.
I am full sorry,
That he approves the common liar, who
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, most sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O!
that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands!
Alex. Soothsayer!
Sooth. Your will?
Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, sir, that know things?
Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.
Alex.
Show him your hand.

Enter Enobarbus.
Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough,
Cleopatra's health to drink.
Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.
Sooth. I make not, but foresee.
Char. Pray, then, foresee me one.
Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.
Char. He means, in flesh.
Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.
Char. Wrinkles forbid!
Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.
Char. Hush!
Sooth. You shall be more beloved, than belov'd.
Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.
Alex. Nay, hear him.
Char. Good now; some excellent fortune. Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage; find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.
Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.
Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.
Sooth. You have seen, and proved a fairer former fortune,
Than that which is to approach.
Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names. Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have?
Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fruitful? every wish, a million.
Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.
Alex. You think, none but your sheets are privy to your wish?
Char. Nay, come; tell Iras hers.
Eno. We'll know all our fortunes.
Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the o'erflowing Nilus presages famine.
Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.
Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognestigation, I cannot scratch mine ear.—Pr'ythee, tell her but a work-day fortune.
Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.
Sooth. I have said.
Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?
Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?
Iras. Not in my husband's nose.
Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend! Alexas,
—come, his fortune, his fortune.—O! let him marry
a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee:
and let her die too, and give him a worse; and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold. Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight, good Isis, I beseech thee!
Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people; for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uneckled: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!
Char. Amen.
Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do't.
Char.

Enter Cleopat.

Char. Not he, the queen.

Enter Cleopat.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?
Eno. No, lady.
Cleo. Was he not here?
Char. No, madam.
Cleo. He was disposed to mirth; but on the sudden,
A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobarbus! —
Eno. Madam.
Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas?
Char.

Enter Cleopat.

Cleo. Here, at your service.—My lord approaches.

Enter Antony, with a Messenger and Attendants.
Cleo. We will not look upon him: go with us.
[Exeunt Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Alexas, Iras,
Charmian, Soothsayer, and Attendants.
Mess. Fulvia, thy wife, first came into the field.
Ant. Against my brother Lucius?
Mess. Ay:
But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, meeting their force 'gainst Caesar;
Whose better issue in the war, from Italy
Upon the first encounter drave them.
Ant.
Well, what worst?
Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.
Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward.—On:
Things, that are past, are done, with me.—'T is thus:
Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as he flatt'rd.
Mess.
Labienus
(This is still news) hath with his Parthian force
His conquering banner shook from Syria
To Lydia, and to Ionis; whilst——
Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,—
Mess. O, my lord!
Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue;
Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome;
Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults.
With such full license, as both truth and malice
Have power to utter. O! then we bring forth weeds,
When our beds are still; and our ills told us,
Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit.
Ant. From Sicyon now the news? Speak there.
1 Att. The man from Sicyon!—Is there such an one?
2 Att. He stays upon your will.
Ant. Let him appear.—
These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,
Enter another Messenger.
Or lose myself in dotage.—What are you?
2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead. Ant. Where did she die?
2 Mess. In Sicyon:
Her length of sickness, with what else more serious
Importeth thee to know, this bears. [Giving a Letter. Ant. Forbear me.—
[Exit Messenger.
There's a great spirit gone. Thus did I desire it:
What our contempts do often hurl from us,
We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,
By repetition souring, does become
The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;
The hand would pluck her back, that shou'd her on.
I must from this enchanting queen break off;
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,
My idleness doth hatch.—How now! Enobarbus!
Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?
Ant. I must with haste from hence.
Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them: if they suffer our departure, death's the word.
Ant. I must be gone.
Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die:
it were pity to cast them away for nothing; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly: I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment. I do think, there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.
Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.
Eno. Alack, sir! no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report;
this cannot be eunuching in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.
Ant. Would I had never seen her!
Eno. O, sir! you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel.
Ant. Fulvia is dead.
Eno. Sir?
Ant. Fulvia is dead.
Eno. Fulvia!
Ant. Dead.
Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice.
When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the failures of the earth;
comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out,
there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation: your old smock brings forth a new petticoat; and, indeed, the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow.
Ant. The business she hath broached in the state
Cannot endure my absence.
Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you: especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.
Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers
Have notice what we purpose. I shall break
The cause of our experience to the queen,
And get her leave to part: for not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,
Do strongly speak to us, but the letters, too,
Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands
The empire of the sea: our slippery people (Whose love is never link'd to the deserver,
Till his deserts are past) begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his dignities,
Upon his son: who, high in name and power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands up
For the main soldier; whose quality, going on,
The sides o' the world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which, like the corses' hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I shall do it. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is he?
Char. I did not see him since.
Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:
I did not send you.—If you find him sad,
Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick: quick, and return. [Exeunt Alex.
Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?
Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.
Cleo. Thou teachest, like a fool, the way to lose him.
Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear:
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Antony.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.
Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose.—
Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall:
It cannot be thus long; the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—
Cleo. Pray you, stand farther from me.
Ant. What's the matter?
Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.
What says the married woman?—You may go:
Would, she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say, 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you; hers you are.
Ant. The gods best know.—
Cleo. O! never was there queen
So mightily betray'd; yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.

1 Ploughing our "quick winds" which dry the soil for the plough.
2 By revolution lowering: in f. o. 3 Dyce reads: Ho! 4 Expedition. 5 love: in folio. 6 An allusion to the ancient belief, that a woman's hair laid into water, turned into a snake.

53
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT I.

ANTONY. Courteous lord, one word, Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it: Sir, you and I have lov'd, but there's not it; That you know well: something it is I would,— O! my oblivion is a very Antony, And I am all forgotten.

CLEOPATRA. Most sweet queen,—

ANTONY. Why should I think, you can be mine, and true, Though you in swearing shake the throned gods, Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness, To be entangled with those month-made vows, Which break themselves in swearing!

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going, But bid farewell, and go: when you were staying, Then was the time for words; no going then: Eternity was in our lips, and eyes; Bliss our brows bent; none our parts so poor, But was a race of heaven: they are so still, Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world, Art turn'd the greatest liar.

ANTONY. How now, lady!

Cleo. I would, I had thy inches; thou shouldst know There were a heart in Egypt.

ANTONY. Hear me, queen.

The strong necessity of time commands Our services a while, but my full heart Remains in use with you. Our Italy Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius Makes his approaches to the port of Rome: Equality of two existing powers Breeds sorrows within. Thy hatred, grown to strength, Are newly grown to: the condemn'd Pompey, Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten; And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge By any desperate change. My more particular, And that which most with you should safe my going, Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom, It does from childishness.—Can Fulvia die?

ANTONY. She's dead, my queen. Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read The garboils she awak'd; at the last, best, See, when, and where she died.

Cleo. O, most false love! Where be the sacred vials you shouldst fill With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see, In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

ANTONY. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know The purposes I bear; which are, or cease, As you shall give the advice: by the fire That quickens Nilus' slime, I go hence from, Thy soldier, servant; making peace, or war, As thou shalt ask.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come.—But let it be,—I am quickly ill, and well, ANTONY. My precious queen, forbear; And give true credence to his love, which stands An honourable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me. I pr'ythee, turn aside, and weep for her; Then bid adieu to me, and say, the tears Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene Of excellent dissembling; and let it look Like perfect honour.

ANTONY. You'll heat my blood: no more.

Cleo. You can do better yet, but this is mostly.

ANTONY. Now, by my sword,—

CLEOPATRA. And target.—Still he mends; But this is not the best. Look, pr'ythee, Charmian, How this Heraclean Roman does become

SCENE V.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

And it appears, he is belov'd of those,
That only have fear'd Caesar: to the fleets!
The discontent's repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs.
I should have known no less.
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were:
And the ebb'd man ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth love,
Comes lov'd; by being lack'd. This common body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to, and back, and lacking* the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess.
Cesar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them; which they ear* and wound
With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt.
No vessel can peep forth, but tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more,
Than could his war resisted.

Cæs.
Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassels,* When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Paena, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintyly brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle,
Which beasts would cough at; thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou brows'dst: on the Alps
It is reported, thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: and all this
(It wounds thine honour, that I speak it now)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep.
'Tis pity of him.
Cæs.
Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome. 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i' the field; and, to that end,
Assemble we* immediate council: Pompey
Thrive's in our idleness.

Lep.
To-morrow, Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To front this present time.

Cæs.
Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep.
Farewell, my lord. What you shall know mean
time
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs.
Doubt not, sir; I knew it for my bond.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo.
Char.
Mardian—
Hai, hai!
Give me to drink mandragora.

Char.
Why, madam?
Cleo.
That I might sleep out this great gap of time,
My Antony is away.

Char.
You think of him too much.
Cleo. O, 'tis treason!

Char.
Madam, I trust, not so.
Cleo.
Thou, eunuch, Mardian—

Mar.
What's your highness' pleasure?
Cleo.
Not now to hear thee sing: I take no pleasure
In aught an eunuch has. 'Tis well for thee,
That, being eunuch, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar.
Yes, gracious may it.
Cleo.
Indeed?
Mar.
Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing,
But what in deed is honest to be done;
Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo.
O, Charmian!
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?
O, happy horse to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse, for woe'st thou whom thou mov'st!
The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet* of men.—He's speaking now,
Or murmuring, "Where's my serpent of old Nile?"
For so he calls me. Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison—think on me,
That am with Phæbus: amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Caesar,
When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch; and great Pompey
Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow:
There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas.

Alex.
Sovereign of Egypt, hail!
Cleo.
How much unlike art thou Mark Antony;
Yet, coming from him, that great medicome hath
With his with gilded thee.

How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

Alex.
Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,—
This orient pearl:—his speech sticks in my heart.
Cleo.
Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex.
Good friend, quoth he,
Say, "the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster: at whose foot,
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms: all the east,"
Say thou, "shall call her mistress." So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an arm-girl* steed,
Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke
Was basely* dumb'd by her.

Cleo.
What, was he sad, or merry?

Alex.
Like to the time o' the year between the extrem:es
Of hot and cold: he was nor sad, nor merry.
Cleo.
O well-divided disposition!—Note him,
Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him:
He was not sad; for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his: he was not merry,
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy: but between both:
O heavenly mingle!—Be'st thou sad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts?

Alex.
Ay, madam, twenty several messengers.
Why do you send so thick?

Cleo.
Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.

Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian,
SCENE I.—Messina. A Room in Pompey's House.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decades
The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms; which the wise powers
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope
Says, it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors: Caesar gets money, where
He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Men. Caesar and Lepidus
Are in the field: a mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false.

Men. From Silvius, sir.

Pom. He dreams: I know, they are in Rome together,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy warm' lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both:
Lay up the libertine in a flood of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks,
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite,
That sleep and feeding may prologue his honour,
Even till a Leth'ld dulness.—How now, Varrius!

Enter Varrius.

Var. This is most certain, that I shall deliver.
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected; since he went from Egypt, 'tis
A space for farther travel.

Pom. A better ear.—Menas, I did not think,
This amorous surfeiter would have don'd his helm
For such a petty war: his soldiership
Is twice the other twain. But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er lust-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope,
Caesar and Antony shall well greet together:
His wife that's dead did trespass to Caesar;
His brother warr'd upon him, although, I think,
Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,
Cas. I must be laugh'd at, If, or for nothing, or a little, I Should say myself offended; and with you Chiefly i' the world: more laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar, What was't to you? Cas. No more than my residing here at Rome Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd? Cas. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent, By what did here befal me. Your wife, and brother, Made wars upon me, and their contestation Was theme for you; you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake my business: my brother never Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it; And have my learning from some true reports, That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours; And make the more unlike against my stomach, Having alike your cause? Of this my letters Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel, No matter whole you have to make it with, It must not be with this.

Cas. You praise yourself By laying defects of judgment to me; but You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so; not so; I know you could not lack, I am certain on't, Very necessity of this thought, that I, Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought, Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife, I would you had her spirit in such another: The third o' the world is yours, which with a snaffle, You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurable, her garboils, Caesar, Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted Shrewdness of policy too) I grieving grant, Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must But say, I could not help it.

Cas. I wrote to you, When rioting in Alexandria; you Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts Did gib me my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir, He tell upon me, ere admitted: then Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want Of what I was i' the morning; but, next day, I told him of myself, which was as much As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow Be nothing of our strife; if we contend, Out of our question wipe him.

Cas. You have broken The article of your oath, which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with. And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may, I'll play the penitent to you; but mine honesty Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia, To have me out of Egypt, made wars here; For which myself, the ignorant motive, do So far ask pardon, as befits mine honour To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis nobly spoken.

Ant. If it might please you, to enforce no farther The griefs between ye: to forget them quite, Were to remember that the present need Speaks to atone' you.

Lep. Worthily spoken, Mecenas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only: speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore, speak no more.

Eno. Go to then; you considerate stone.

Cas. I do not much dislike the matter, but The manner of his speech; for it cannot be, We shall remain in friendship, our conditions So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us staunch, from edge to edge

Of the world I would pursue it.

Agr. Give me leave, Caesar,—

Cas. Speak, Agrippa.

Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side, Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony Is now a widower.

Cas. Say not so, Agrippa: If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof Were well deserv'd for rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear Agrippa farther speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity, To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts With an unslipping knot, take Antony Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims No worse a husband than the best of men, Whose virtue and whose general graces speak That which none else can utter. By this marriage, All little jealousies, which now seem great, And all great fears, which now import their dangers, Would then be nothing: truths would be tales, Where now half tales be truths: her love to both, Would, each to other, and all loves to both, Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke, For 'tis a studied, not a present thought, My duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Caesar speak?

Cas. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa, If I would say, "Agrippa, be it so," To make this good?

Cas. The power of Caesar, and His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never To this good purpose, that so fairly shows, Dream of impediment!—Let me have thy hand: Further this act of grace, and from this hour, The hearts of brothers govern in our loves,
And sway our great designs.

Cas. There is my hand.

A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother [Ant. takes it.] Did ever love so dearly: let her live. To join our kingdoms, and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword against Pompey; For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great. Of late upon me: I must thank him, only Lost my remembrance suffer ill report; At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us: Of us must Pompey presently be sought, Or else he seeks us out.

Ant. Where lies he?

Cas. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What’s his strength By land?

Cas. Great, and increasing; but by sea He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame. Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it; Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despaw the Business we have talk’d of.

Cas. And invite you to my sister’s view; Whither straight I’ll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus, Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony, Not sickness should detain me.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Mecenas! — my honourable friend, Agrippa! —

Agr. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested. You stay’d well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and make the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild bears roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She’s a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed, or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you. The king she sat in, like a burnish’d throne, Burn’d on the water: the poop was beaten gold; Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that The winds were love-sick with them: the oars were silver; Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made The water, which they beat, to follow faster, As amorous of their strokes. For her own person, It beggar’d all description: she did lie In her pavilion, (cloth of gold and tissue)

O’er-picturing that Venus, where we see, The fancy out-work nature: on each side her, Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids, With diverse-colour’d fans, whose wind did seem To blow the delicate checks which they did cool

And what they undid, did.

Agr. O, rare for Antony!

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides, So many mermaids, tended her: the eyes, And made their bands adornings: at the helm A seeming mermaid steer’d; the silken tackle Smell’d with the touches of these flower-soft hands, That yarely frame the office. From the barge A strange invisible perfume hits the sense Of the adjacent wharfs: The city cast Her people out upon her; and Antony, Enthron’d i’ the market-place, did sit alone, Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy, Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too, And made a gap in nature.

Agr. Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her lauding Antony sent to her, Invited her to supper; she replied, It should be better he became her guest, Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony, Whom ne’er the word of a ‘No’ woman heard speak, Being barber’d ten times o’er, goes to the feast; And for his ordinary pays his heart. For what his eyes eat only.

Agr. Royal wench! She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed; He plough’d her, and she crop’d.

Eno. I saw her once Hop forty paces through the public street; And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted, That she did make defect perfection, And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not. Age cannot wither him, nor custom stale Her infinite variety: other women clow The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry; Where most she satisfies; for vilest things Become themselves in her, that the holy priests Bless her when she is rixgish.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle The heart of Antony? Octavia is A blessed lottery to him.

Agr. Let us go.— Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest, Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in Caesar’s House

Enter Caesar, Antony, Octavia between them; Attendants.

Ant. The world, and my great office, will sometimes Divide me from your bosom.

Oct. All which time, Before the gods my knee shall bow with prayers To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir.— My Octavia, Read not my blemishes in the world’s report: I have not kept my square, but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.— Good night, sir.

Cas. Good night. [Exeunt Caesar and Octavia

Enter a Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah: you do wish yourself in Egypt. Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. See it in my motion, have it not in my tongue: but yet bie you to Egypt again.
SCENE V.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 839

ANT. Say to me, whose fortune shall rise higher, Caesar's, or mine?

SOOTH. Caesar's.

Therefore, O Antony! stay not by his side: Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, Where Caesar's is not; but near him thy angel Becomes apparel'd; therefore, therefore, Make space enough between you.

ANT. Speak this no more.

SOOTH. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose: and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds; thy lustre thickens,
When he shines by. I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him,
But, he away, 'tis noble.

ANT. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him.—

[Exit Soothsayer.]

He shall to Parthia. — Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;
And in our sports my better cunning faints
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds:
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
Beat mine, in hoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
Enter Ventidius.
I? the east my pleasure lies.—O! come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia: your commission's ready;
Follow me, and receive it.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MECENAS, and AGrippa.

LEP. Trouble yourselves no farther: pray you, hasten Your generals after.

AGR. Sir, Mark Antony
Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

LEP. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

MEC. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at Mount!
Before you, Lepidus.

LEP. Your way is shorter: My purposes do draw me much about:
You will win two days upon me.

MEC. AGR. Sir, good success!

LEP. Farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXANDER.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, muddy food
Of us that trade in love.

ATTEND. The music, ho!

Enter MARIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards: come, Charmian.

CHAR. My arm is sore, best play with Marian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd,
As with a woman.—Come, you'll play with me, sir?

MAR. As well as I can, madam. — [too short, Cleo.
And when good will is show'd, though 't come
The actor may plead pardon. 'I'll none now.
Give me mine angle, we'll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws, and as I draw them up,
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, Ah, ha! you're caught.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT II.

Smarting in lingering pickle.

Gracious madam, I, that do bring the news, made not the match.

Re-enter Enr. and Mess., at one side, with Drum and Trumpet: at another, Caesar, Lepidus, Antony, Enobarbus, Mecenas, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine; and we shall talk before we fight.

Cas. That first we come to words; and therefore have we our written purposes before we sent; Which, if thou hast considered, let us know If 't will lie up thy discontented sword, and carry back to Sicily as much as youth, That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three, The senators alone of this great world, Chief factors for the gods.—I do not know, Wherefore my father should revenges want, Having a son, and friends; since Julius Caesar, Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted, There saw you labouring for him. What was it, That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what Made the all-honour'd, honest, Roman Brutus, With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom, To march the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but once? And that is it Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant To scourge th' ingratitude that despiteful Rome Cast on my noble father.

Cas. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails; We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed, Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house: But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself, Remain in 't as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us, (For this is from the present) how you take The offers we have sent you.

Cas. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh What it is worth embrac'd.

Cas. And what may follow, To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome: this 'gread upon, To part with unha'ck'd edges, and bear back Targets un dinted.

Cas. Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then, I came before you here, a man prepar'd To take this offer; but Mark Antony Put me to some impatience.—Though I lose The praise of it by telling, you must know, When Caesar and your brother were at blows, Your mother came to Sicily, and did find Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey; And am well studied for a liberal thanks, Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

[They take Hands.*

Antony. The beds i' the east are soft; and thanks to you, That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither, For I have gain'd by it.

Cæsar. Since I saw you last, There is a change upon you.

Pompey. Well, I know not what counts harsh fortune casts upon my face, But in my bosom shall she never come, To make my heart her vassal.

Lepidus. Well met here.

Pompey. I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agree'd. I crave, our composition may be written, And seal'd between us.

Cæsar. That's the next to do.

Pompey. We'll feast each other, ere we part; and let us draw lots who begin.

Antony. That will I, Pompey.

Pompey. No, Antony, take the lot; but, first
Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Caesar
Grew fat with feasting there.

Antony. You have heard much.

Pompey. And fair words to them.

Antony. Then, so much have I heard:
And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that:—he did so.

Pompey. What, I pray you?

Eno. A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress.

Pompey. I know thee now: how far'st thou, soldier?

Eno. Well;

And we all am like to do; I perceive,
Four feasts are toward:

Pompey. Let me shake thy hand: I never hated thee. I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir, I never lov'd you much; but I have praise'd you, When you have well deserve'd ten times as much
As I have said you did.

Pompey. Enjoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee.—
Aboard my galley I invite you all: Will you lead, lords?—

Cæsar. Antony. Lepidus. Show us the way, sir.

Pompey. [Exeunt Pompey, Cæsar, Antony, Lepidus, Soldiers and Attendants.]

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—[Aside.]—You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes; something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand. Men: if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatso'ever their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsar's sister is called Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caïus Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno. 'T is true.

Men. Then is Cæsar, and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think, the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too: but you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very stranger of their amity. Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he, that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then, shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is: he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our threats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—On Board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter Two or Three Servants, with a Banquet.

[1 Servant. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' the world will blow them down.

[2 Servant. Lepidus is high-coloured.

[1 Servant. They have made him drink alms-drink.

[2 Servant. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, "No more;' reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

[1 Servant. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

[2 Servant. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partizan I could not have.

[1 Servant. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in 't; are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A Sennet sounded. Enter Cæsar, Antony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrrippa, Mecenas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other Captains.]

Antony. Thus do they, sir. [To Cæsar.] They take the flow o' the Nile
By certain scales i' the pyramid: they know,
By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth,
Or foison2 follow. The higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsmen
Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lepidus. You have strange serpents there.

Antony. Ay, Lepidus.

Lepidus. Your serpent of Egypt is bred, now, of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

1 Trumpet blast. 2 Plenty.
This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore.—I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eho. Here's to thee, Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill, till the cup be hid.

Eho. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off LEPIDUS.

Men. Why?

Eho. He bears the third part of the world, man: see'st not?

Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would it were all, That it might go on wheels!

Eho. Drink thou; increase the reeds.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike the vessels, ho! Here is to Cæsar.

Cas. I could well forbear it.

It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain, And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Cas. Profess it, I'll make answer; but I had rather fast From all four days, than drink so much in one.

Eho. Ha, my brave emperor!

[To ANTONY. Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals, And celebrate our drink?

Ant. Let's have a good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all shake hands,

Tell that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense In soft and delicate Luten.

Eho. All take hands.

Make battery to our ears with the loud music; The while I'll place you: thou, the boy shall sing; The holding every man shall bear, as loud As his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand.

SONG, by the Boy.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,

Plump'y Bacchus, with pink eyne:

In thy cups our cares be drowned:

With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd;

Cup us, till the world go round;]

The burden.

Cup us, till the world go round!

Cas. What would you more?—Pompey, good night.

—Good brother, Let me request you off: our graver business

Frowns at this levity.—Gentle lords, let's part; You see, we have burnt our cheeks. Strong Enobarbus Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir, Give's your hand.

Pom. O, Antony! You have my father's house.—But what? we are friends. Come down into the boat.

Eho. Take heed you fall not.

[Exeunt POMPEY, Cæsar, ANTONY, and Attendants.

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin.—

These drums!—these trumpets, flutes! what!—

Let Neptune hear, we bid a loud farewell.

To these great fellows: sound, and be hallow'd sound out! [A Flourish.

Eho. Ho, says I.—There's my cap.

Men. Ho!—noble captain! come. [Exeunt.
ACT III.

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!
Eno. Would you praise Caesar, say,—Caesar;—go no farther.
Agr. Indeed, he ply'd them both with excellent praises.
Eno. But he loves Caesar best;—yet he loves Antony. Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bars, posts cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho! His love to Antony. But as for Caesar, Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves.
Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle.
So,—[Trumpets
This is to horse. —Adieu, noble Agrippa.
Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.
Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.
Ant. No farther, sir.
Cas. You take from me a great part of myself; Use me well in 't. —Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee; and as my farthest band Shall pass on thy approbation. —Most noble Antony, Let not the piece of virtue, which is set Betwixt us as the cement of our love, To keep it builted, be the rain to batter The fortress of it; for better might we Have loved without this mean, if on both parts This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.
Cas. I have said.
Ant. You shall not find,
Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear. So, the gods keep you, And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends. We will here part.
Cas. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well The elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.
Oct. My noble brother! —
Ant. The April's in her eyes; it is love's spring, And these the showers to bring it on. —Be cheerful.
Oct. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—
Cas. What, Octavia?
Oct. I'll tell you in your ear.
Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can Her heart inform her tongue; the swain's down feather, That stands upon the swell at the full of tide, And neither way inclines.
Eno. Will Caesar weep? —Aside to Agrippa.
Agr. He has a cloud in his face.
Eno. He was the worse for that, were he a horse; So is he, being a man.
Agr. Why, Enobarbus, When Antony found Julius Caesar dead, He cried almost to roaring; and he wept, When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.
Eno. That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum; What willingly he did confound, he wait'd Believe 't, till I weep too.

Ant. No, sweet Octavia, You shall hear from me still; the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you.

Eno. I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:

1 Scaly wings.
Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.

Cleo. Adieu; be happy.

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way!

Cleo. Farewell, farewell. [Kisses Octavia.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?
Alex. Half apace to come.
Cleo. Go to, go to.—Come hither, sir.
[Enter Eliz, the Messenger.
Alex. Good majesty,
Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you,
But when you are well pleas’d.

Cleo. That Herod’s head
I’ll have: but how, when Antony is gone,
Through whom I might command it—Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty,—
Cleo. Didst thou behold
Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.
Cleo. Where?
Mess. Madam, in Rome.

I look’d her in the face; and saw her led
Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrill-tongued, or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak: she is low-voic’d.

Cleo. That’s not so good: he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her? O Isis! ‘tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!—

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
If e’er thou look’dst on majesty.

Mess. Her creeps;
Her motion and her station are as one:
She shows a body rather than a life;
A stature, than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.
Char. Three in Egypt
Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He’s very knowing,
I do perceive ‘t.—There’s nothing in her yet.—
The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Guess at her years, I pray thee.

Mess. Madam, she was a widow.

Cleo. Widow?—Charmian, hark.

Mess. And I do think, she’s thirty.

Cleo. Bear’st thou her face in mind? is’t long, or round?

Mess. Round, even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.—

Her hair, what colour?

Mess. Brown, madam; and her forehead
As low as you could wish it.

Cleo. There’s gold for thee:
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.
I will employ thee back again: I find thee
Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready;
Our letters are prepar’d. [Exit Messenger.

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I meant me much,
That I so hurry’d him. Why, methinks, by him,
This creature’s no such thing.

Char. Nothing, madam.

Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.
Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,
And serving you so long!

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good
Charmian:
But ‘tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me
Where I will write. All may be well enough.
Char. I will warrant you, madam. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Athens. A Room in Antony’s House.

Enter Antony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,—
That were excusable, that, and thousands more
Of semblable import.—but he hath wagg’d
New wars ’gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it
To public ear,
Spoke seantly of me: when perforce he could not
But pay me terms of honour, coldly and sickly
He vented them; most narrow measure lent me.
When the best hint was given him, he but look’d,
Or did it from his teeth.

Oct. O, my good lord!
Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady
If this division chance, ne’er stood between,
Praying for both parts:
The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray, “O, bless my lord and husband!”
Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
“O, bless my brother!” Husband win, win brother,
Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
‘Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentile Octavia,
Let your best love draw to that point, which seeks Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honour,
I lose myself; better I were not yours,
Than your sole wants, and faults.
And if you requested,
Yourself shall go between us: the mean time, lady,
I’ll raise the preparation of a war
Shall stay your brother. Make your soonest haste:
So, your desires are yours.

Oct. Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler! Wars ‘twixt you twain would be,
As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults
Can never be so equal, that your love
Can equally so wave with them. Provide your going;
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eros. How now, friend Eros?
Eros. There is strange news come, sir.

Eno. What, man?

Eros. Cesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.

Eno. This is old: what is the success?

Eros. Cesar, having made use of him in the wars against Pompey, presently denied him rivalry, would not let him partake in the glory of the action; and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him; so the poor third is up till death enlarges his confines.

Eno. Then, world,1 thou hast a pair of chaps, no more.
And throw between them all the food thou hast, They'll grind each other. Where is Antony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spurns
The rush that lies before him; cries, "Fool, Lepidus!" And threats the throat of his officer, That murder'd Pompey.
Eno. Our great navy's rigg'd.
Eros. For Italy, and Caesar. More, Domitius; My lord desires you presently: my news I might have told hereafter.
Eno. 'T will be naught;
But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.
Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Room in Cæsar's House.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, and Mecenas.

Cas. Contemning Rome, he has done all this, and In Alexandria: here's the manner of it. [more, I' the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd, Cælepatra and himself in chairs of gold Were publicly enthron'd: at their feet sat Cæsarion, whom they call my father's son, And all the unlawful issue, that their lust Since then hath made between them. Unto her He gave the 'establishment of Egypt; made her Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye?
Cas. I' the common show-place, where they exercise. His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings: Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia.
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia. She In the habiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience, As 'tis reported, so.

Mec. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Agr. Who, squeasy with his insolence Already, will their good thoughts call from him.
Cas. The people know it; and have now receiv'd His accusations.

Agr. Whom does he accuse? Cas. Caesar; and that, having in Sicily Sexæus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him His part of the isle: then does he say, he lent me Some shipping unrestor'd: lastly, he fre'ts, That Lepidus of the triumvirate Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain All his revenue.

Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd.
Cas. 'T is done already, and a messenger gone.
I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel; That he his high authority abus'd, And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd, I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia, And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.
Cas. Nor must not, then, be yielded to in this.
Enter Octavia, with her Train.

Oct. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord hail, most dear Cæsar! Cas. That ever I should call thee cast-away!
Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause Cas. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not Like Cæsar's sister: the wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and The neighs of horse to tell of her approach, Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way, Should have borne men, and expectation fain'd, Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rais'd by your populous troops. But you are come A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented The ostentation of our love, which, left unshown, Is often held' unlov'd: we should have met you By sea and land, supplying every stage With an augmented greeting.

Oct. Good my lord, To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it Of my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted My griev'd ear withal; whereon, I beg'd His pardon for return.

Cas. Which soon he granted, Being an obstruct' 'tween his lust and him.
Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Cas. I have eyes upon him, And his affairs come to me on the wind. Where is he now?

Cas. No, my most wronged sister; Cælepatra Hath nodd'd him to her: he hath given his empire Up to a whore: they are now levyng The kings of the earth for war. He hath assembled Bœceus, the king of Lybia; Archelaus, Of Cappadocia; Philæphos, king Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas; King Malchas of Arabia; king of Pont; Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king Of Comagene: Polemon and Amintas, The kings of Mede, and Lyconia, With a more larger list of sçptres.

Oct. Ah me, most wretched, That have my heart pasted betwixt two friends, That do afflict each other!

Cas. Welcome hither. Your letters did withhold our breaking forth, Till we perceiv'd, both how you were wrong'd, And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart: Be you not troubled with the time, which drives O'er your content these strong necessities; But let determin'd things to destiny Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome; Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd Beyond the mark of thought; and the high gods, To do you justice, make his ministers Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort; And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady.
Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Oct. Each heart in Rome does love and pity you: Only the adulterous Antony, most large In his abominations, turns you off; And gives his potent regiment to a trull, That noises it against us.

Cas. Is it so, sir?

1 would: in folio. Johnson made the change. 2 hither: in folio. Warburton made the change. 3 left: in f. e. 4 abstract: in folio. Stevens made the change.
SCENE VII.—Antony's Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

_Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus._

_Cleo._ I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

_Eno._ But why, why, why?

_Cleo._ Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars, and say' st, it is not fit.

_Eno._ Well, is it, is it?

_Cleo._ If not denounc'd against us, why should not we be there in person?

_Eno._ [Aside.] Well, 't could reply:—

If we should serve with horse and mares together, the horse were merely lost; the mares would bear a soldier, and his horse.

_Cleo._ What is 't you say?

_Eno._ Your presence needs must puzzle Antony; take from his heart, take from his brain, from's time, what should not then be spar'd. He is already traitur'd for levity; and heis said in Rome, That Photinus an eunuch, and your maid's, manage this war.

_Cleo._ Sink Rome; and their tongues rot, that speak against us! A charge we bear if the war; and as the president of my kingdom will appear there for a man. Speak not against it; I will not stay behind.

_Eno._ Nay, I have done. Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Cædidius.

_Ant._ Is't not strange, Cædidius, that from Tarentum, and Brundusium, he could so quickly cut the Tonian sea, and take in* Toryne—? You have heard on't, sweet? Cæl. Celerity is never more admir'd, than by the negligent.

_Ant._ A good rebuke, which might have well become the best of men, to taunt at slackness.—Cædidius, we will fight with him by sea.

_Cleo._ By sea! what else?

_Can._ Why will my lord do so?

_Ant._ For that he dares us to't.

_Eno._ So hath my lord dare't him to single fight.

_Can._ Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, where Cæsar fought with Pompey; but these offers, which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off, and so should you.

_Eno._ Your ships are not well mann'd; your mariners are mutliers, reapers, people ingress'd by swift impress; in Cæsar's fleet are those, that often have'gainst Pompey fought. Their ships are yare, yours, heavy; no disgrace shall fall you for refusing him at sea, being prepar'd for land.

_Ant._ By sea, by sea.

_Eno._ Most worthy sir, you therein throw away the absolute soldieryship you have by land; distract your army, which doth most consist of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted your own renowned knowledge; quite forego the way which promises assurance, and give up yourself merely to chance and hazard, from firm security.

_Ant._ I'll fight at sea.

_Cleo._ I have sixty sails. Cæsar none better.

_Ant._ Our overplus of shipping will we burn, and' with the rest, full-mann'd, from the head of

Beat th' approaching Cæsar: but if we fail,

Enter a Messenger.

We then can do't at land.—Thy business?

_Mess._ The news is true, my lord; he is descried; Cæsar has taken Toryne.

_Ant._ Can he be there in person? 't is impossible; strange, that his power should be.—Cædidius, our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land, and our twelve thousand horse: we'll to our ship.

Enter a Soldier.

_Away, my Thetis!—How now, worthy soldier! Sold. O, noble emperor! do not fight by sea:

Trust not to rotten planks. Do you misdoubt this sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians, and the Phoenicians, go a ducking; we have used to conquer standing on the earth, and fighting foot to foot.

_Ant._ Well, well.—Away!

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

_Sold._ By Hercules, I think, I am i' the right.

_Can._ Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows not in the power on't: so our leader's led, and we are women's men.

_Sold._ You keep by land. The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

_Can._ Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius, Publicilus, and Callius, are for sea; but we keep whole by land. This speed of Cæsar's carries beyond belief.

_Sold._ While he was yet in Rome, his power went out in such distractions, as Beguile'd all spies.

_Can._ Who's his lieutenant, hear you?

_Sold._ They say, one Taurus.

_Can._ Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

_Mess._ The emperor calls Cædidius.

_Can._ With news the 'time's with labour; and thrown forth each minute some.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

_Enter Cæsar, Taurus, Officers, and others._

_Cæsar._ Taurus!

_Taurus._ My lord.

_Cæsar._ Strike not by land; keep whole; provoke not battle, till we have done at sea. Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll; [Giving it.]

Our fortune lies upon this jump. [Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

_Ant._ Set we our squadrons yond side o' the hill, in eye of Cæsar's battle; from which place we may the number of the ships behold, and so proceed accordingly.

[Exeunt Cædidius, marching with his land Army one way over the stage; and Taurus, the lieutenant of Cæsar, the other way. After their going in is heard the Noise of a Sea-Fight.

_Alarum. Re-enter Enobarbus._

_Eno._ Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.

The Antonian, the Egyptian admiral, with all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder; to see 't, mine eyes are bloudy.

Enter Scarus.

_Scar._ Gods, and goddesses, all the while synod of them?

_Eno._ What's thy passion? Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost.
SCENE X.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

With very ignorance; we have kiss’d away
Kingsdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?
Scar. On our side like the token’d pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yond’ ribald nag of Egypt,
Whom leprosy o’ertake! it the midst of the fight—
When vantage, like a pair of twins, appear’d
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder:—
The bride upon her like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.

Eno. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did sicken at the sight; and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof’d,
The noble ruin of her magic. Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting mallard,
Leaving the light in height, flies after her.
I never saw an action of such shame:
Experience, manhood, honour, ne’er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANDIDUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O! he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why then, good night.

Enter Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled,
Scar. ’Tis easy to; and there I will attend
What farther comes.

Can. To Cesar will I render
My legions, and my horse: six kings already
Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. I’ll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, and Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon it;
It is ashamed to bear me.—Friends, come hither,
I am so set in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever.—I have a ship
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Cesar.

Att. Fly! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards
To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends, be gone;
I have myself resolved upon a course,
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure’s in the harbour, take it.—O!
I follow’d that I blush to look upon;
My very hair do mutiny; for the white
Reprieve the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doing.—Friends, be gone: you shall Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself: to the seashore straightway:
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little; ’pray you now:
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore, I pray you. I’ll see you by and by.

[Exeunt.

Enter EROS, and CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMID, and IRAS.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him; comfort him.

Iras. Do, most dear queen.
Char. Do! Why, what else?

Cleo. Let me sit down.—O Juno!

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, sir?

Ant. O fie, fie, fie!

Char. Madam,—

Iras. Madam: O good empress!—

Eros. Sir, sir,—

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes.—He, at Philippi, kept
His sword e’en like a dancer, while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and ’twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenancy, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war; yet now—No matter.

Cleo. Ah! I stand by.

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.

Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him:
He is unqualified with very shame.

Cleo. Well then,—sustain me:—O!

Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches
Her head’s declin’d, and death will seize her; but
Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation
By most unnoble swerving.

Enter EROS.

Eros. Sir, the queen.

Ant. O! whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes,
By looking back what I have left behind
Strew’d in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
I forgive my fearful sails; I little thought,
You would have follow’d.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew’st too well.
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after: o’er my spirit
Thy full supremacy thou knew’st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods
Command me.

Cleo. O, my pardon!

Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dudge
And palter in the shifts of lowness, who
With half the bulk o’ the world play’d as I pleas’d;
Making, and marring fortunes. You did know,
How much you were my conqueror; and that
My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all causes.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon!

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates
All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me.—We sent our schoolmaster;
Is he come back?—Love, I am full of lead.—
Some wine, within there, and our viands!—Fortune knows,
We scorn her most when most she offers blows. [Exeunt.

SCENE X.—Cæsar’s Camp in Egypt.

Enter Cæsar, DOLOBELLA, THYREUS, and others.

Ces. Let him appear that’s come from Antony.—
Know you him?

DoL. Cæsar, ’tis his schoolmaster: An argument that he is pleased, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers,
Not many moons gone by:

Enter EUPHRONIUS.

Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

_Caes._ Be it so. Declare thine office.

_Eup._ Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,
He lessens his requests, and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him.

Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness,
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

_Caes._ For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience, nor desire, shall fail; so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there: this if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both,

_Eup._ Fortune pursue thee!

_Caes._ Bring him through the bands.

[Exit EUPHRONIUS.]

To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time: despatch.

From Antony win Cleopatra: promise, [To THYREUS.]
And in our name, what she requires, add more,
From thine invention, offers. Women are not
In their best fortunes strong, but want will perjure
The ne'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus;
Make thine own edict for thine pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

_Thyr._ Caesar, I go.

_Caes._ Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

_Thyr._ Caesar, I shall. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

_Enter CLEOPATRA, EOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IBAS._

_Cleo._ What shall we do, Eobarbús?

_Eno._ Think, and die.

_Cleo._ Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

_Eno._ Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What though you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other, why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship: at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The mooted question, 'T was a shame, no less
Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.

_Cleo._ _Enter Antony, with EUPHRONIUS._

_Ant._ Is that his answer?

_Eup._ Ay, my lord.

_Ant._ The queen shall then have courtesy, so she
Will yield us up.

_Eup._ He says so.

_Ant._ Let her know it.—

To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

_Cleo._ That head, my lord?

_Ant._ To him again. Tell him, he wears the rose
Of youth upon him, from which the world should note
Something particular: his coin, ships, legions,
May be a coward's: whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child, as soon

As i' the command of Caesar: I dare him, therefore,
To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declin'd; sword against sword,
Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.

[Exeunt Antony and EUPHRONIUS.]

_Eno._ Yes, like enough, high-battled Caesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd t' the show
Against a sworder.—I see, men's judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward qualities* after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all miseries, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness!—Caesar, thou hast sub'd
His judgment too.

_Enter an Attendant._

_Ant._ A messenger from Caesar.

_Cleo._ What, no more ceremony?—See, my woman!—
Against the rose-brown rose may they stop their nose,
That kneel'd unto the bud.—Admit him, sir.

_Eno._ Mine honesty and I begin to square.* [Aside.

The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith more fully: yet he, that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer;
And earns a place T the story.

_Enter THYREUS._

_Cleo._ Caesar's will?

_Thyr._ Hear it, apart.

_Cleo._ None but friends: say boldly.

_Thyr._ So, haply, are they friends to Antony,

_Eno._ He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has,
Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend: for us, you know,
Whose he is, we are, and that's Caesar's.

_Thyr._ So.—

Thus then, thou most renowned: Caesar entreats,
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Farther then he is Caesar.

_Cleo._ Go on: right royal.

_Thyr._ He knows, that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you feared him.

_Cleo._ O!

_Thyr._ The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserved.

_Cleo._ He is a god, and knows
What is most right. Mine honour was not yielded,
But conquer'd merely.

_Eno._ [Aside.] To be sure of that,

I will ask Antony.—Sir, sir, thou 'rt so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee.

[Exit EOBARBUS.

_Thyr._ Shall I say to Caesar
What you require of him? for he partly bars
To be desire'd to give. It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon; but it would warm his spirits,
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud, who is the Universal landlord.

_Cleo._ What's your name?

_Thyr._ My name is Thyreus.

_Cleo._ Most kind messenger,

Say to great Caesar, that in deposition
I kiss his conqu'ring hand: tell him, I am prompt
To lay my crown at 's feet, and there to kneel:
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

1 mered: in f. e. 2 quality: in f. e. 3 measures: in f. e. 4 Quarrel. 5 The words "*who is:" are not in f. e. 6 this: in f. e. 7 dispute: in f. e.
Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Caesar's father oft,
When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses. [Thyr. kisses her Hand.]

Re-enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!—
What art thou, follow ?

Thyr. One, that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.

End. You will be whipp'd.
Ant. Approach, there.—Ah, you kite!—Now gods and devils!
Authority melts from me: of late, when I cry'd, "ho!"
Like boys unto a mus,' kings would start forth,
And cry, "Your will?" Have you no ears? I am

End. Enter Attendants.

Antony yet. Take hence this Jack, and whip him.

Ant. Moon and stars! Whip him.—Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries
That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of—she here, what's her name,
Since she was Cleopatra?—Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face,
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Tug him away: being whipp'd,
Bring him again.—The Jack of Caesar shall Bear us an crann to him.—

[Exeunt Attend. with THYREUS.

You were half blastèd ere I knew you: ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gen. of women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a bogger ever:—
But when in our viciousness grow hard,
(O misery on 't!) the wise gods sceal our eyes,
In our self filth drop our clear judgments; make us
Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. O! is it come to this?
Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold upon
Dead Caesar's trencher: nay, you were a fragment
Of Cneius Ponpey's; besides what hotter hours,
Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd out; for, I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?
Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards,
And say, "God quit you!" be familiar with
My playfellow, your hand; that kingly seal,
And plighter of high hearts!—O! that I were
Upon the hill of Basan, to out roar
The horned herd, for I have savage cause;
And to proclaim it civilly were like
A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank
For being yaro about him.—

Re-enter Attendants, with THYREUS.

Is he whipp'd?

1 Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cry'd he? and begg'd he pardon?

1 Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry
To follow Caesar in his triumph, since
Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: henceforth,
The white hand of a lady fever thee;
Shake but to look on 't. Get thee back to Caesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look, thou say,
He makes me angry with him; for he seems
Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time most easy 'tis to do 't.
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abyss of hell. If he mislike
My speech, and what is done, tell him, he has Hipparchus, my enfranchisèd bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quell me. Urge it thou:
Hence, with thy stripes! begone! [Exit THYREUS.
Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack! our terrene moon
Is now eclips'd, and it portends alone
The fall of Antony.

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?—

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah, dear! if it be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source, and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines, so
Dissolve my life! The next Caesarian smite,
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discrediting of this pellets storm,
Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!—

Ant. I am satisfied.

Cesar sits down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy, too,
Have knit again, a fleet threat'ning most sea-like.
Where hast thou been, my heart?—Dost thou hear, lady?
If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I and my sword will earn our chronicle:
There's hope in 't yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord!

Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me or jests; but now I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come;
Let's have one other gaudy night.—Call to me
All my sad captains: fill our bowls; once more
Let 'a mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birthday:
I had thought to have held it poor; but since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night I'll force [queen;
The wine peep through their sears.—Come on, my
There's sap in 't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me, for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Attendants.]

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious,
Is to be frightened out of fear; and in that mood,
The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart. When valour preyed on reason,
It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him.

[Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Caesar's Camp at Alexandria.

Enter Caesar, reading a Letter; Agrippa, Mecenas, and others.

Caesar. He calls me boy, and chides, as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger
He hath whip'd with rods, daces me to personal combat,
Caesar to Antony: let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die; mean time,
Laugh at his challenge.

Mecenas. Caesar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath; but now
Make boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Caesar. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight. Within our files there are,
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done;
And feast the army: we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste.—Poor Antony!

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Eros, Harrius, Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and others.

Antony. He will not fight with me, Domitius?

Eno. No.

Antony. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Antony. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woes thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike; and cry, "Take all!"

Antony. Well said; come on.—
Call forth my household servants: let's to-night

Enter Servants.

Be bounteous at our meal.—Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest; so hast thou—
Thou, and thou, and thou:—you have serv'd me
And kings have been your fellows. [Well.

Cleopatra. What means this?

Eno. 'T is one of those odd tricks, which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Antony. And thou art honest too.
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapp'd up together in
An Antony, that I might do you service,
So good as you have done.

Servant. The gods forbid!

Antony. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night;
Scant not my cups, and make as much of me,
As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd my command.

Eno. What does he mean?

Cleopatra. To make his followers weep.

Antony. Tend me to-night;
May be, it is the period of your duty:
Haply, you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow: perchance, to-morrow
You'll serve another master. I look on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,
I turn you not away; but, like a master
Married to your good service, stay till death.
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't!

Eno. What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep;
And I, an ass, am onion-eyed:—for shame,
Transform us not to women.

Antony. Ho, ho, ho! Now, the witch take me, if I meant it thus.
Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends,
You take me in too dolorous a sense,
For I spoke to you for your comfort; did desire you
To burn this night with torches. Know, my hearts, I
Hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you,
Where rather I'll expect victorious life,
Than death and honour. Let's to supper: come,
And drown consideration.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter Two Soldiers, to their Guard.

1 Soldier. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.
2 Soldier. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Eno. Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Soldier. Nothing. What news?
2 Soldier. Belike, it is but a rumour. Good night to you.
1 Soldier. Well, sir, good night.

Enter Two other Soldiers.

2 Soldier. Soldiers, have careful watch.
3 Soldier. And you. Good night, good night.

[The first Two place themselves at their Posts.]

4 Soldier. Here we! [They take their Posts.] and if to-morrow
Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.

3 Soldier. 'T is a brave army,
And full of purpose.

[Music of Hautboys under the Stage.]

4 Soldier. Peace! what noise?
1 Soldier. List, list!
2 Soldier. Hark!
1 Soldier. Music 'tis the air.
3 Soldier. Under the earth.
4 Soldier. It signs well, does it not?
3 Soldier. No.

1 Soldier. Peace! I say. What should this mean?
2 Soldier. 'T is the god Hercules, who Antony lov'd,
Now leaves him.

1 Soldier. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do. [They advance to another Post.]

End of the play.
SCENE VI.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

2 Sold.  How now, masters!
Omnes.  How now!
How now! do you hear this?
1 Sold.  Ay: Is it not strange?
3 Sold.  Do you hear, masters? do you hear?
1 Sold.  Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;
Let’s see how it will give off.
Omnes.  Content: ’tis strange.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same.  A Room in the Palace.
Enter Antony, and Cleopatra;  ChARMAN, and others, attending.
Ant.  Eros! mine armour, Eros!
Cle.  Sleep a little.
Ant.  No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!
Enter Eros, with Armour.
Came, good fellow, put mine iron on:—
If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her.—Come.
Cle.  Nay, I'll help too.
What’s this for?
Ant.  Ah, let be, let be! thou art
The armourer of my heart:—false, false; this, this.
Cle.  Sooth, Ia! I'll help.
Ant.  Thus it must be. Well, well;
We shall thrive now.—Seest thou, my good fellow?
Go, put on thy defences.
Eros.  Briefly, sir.
Cle.  Is not this buckled well?
Ant.  Rarely, rarely.
He that unbucks this, till we do please
To doff’t for our repose, shall bear a storm.—
Thou fumilbest, Eros; and my queen’s a square
More tight at this, than thou. Despatch.—O, love!
That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew’st
The royal occupation! thou shouldst see
Enter an armed Soldier.
A workman in’t.—Good morrow to thee; welcome:
Thou look’st like him that knows a warlike charge.
To business that we love we rise betime,
And go to with delight.
Sold.  A thousand, sir,
Early though’t be, have on their great arm’trim,
And at the port expect you.
[Shout. Trumpets flourish.
Enter Captains, and Soldiers.
Capt.  The morn is fair.—Good morrow, general.
All.  Good morrow, general.
Ant.  ’Tis well blown, lads.
This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.—
So so: come, give me that: this way; well said.
Fare thee well, damne: what’er becomes of me,
This is a soldier’s kiss.  [Rebukable.
And worthy shameful check it were, to stand
On more mechanic compliment: I’ll leave thee
Now, like a man of steel. —You, that will fight,
Follow me close; I’ll bring you to’t.—Adieu.
[Exeunt Antony, Eros, Officers, and Soldiers.
Char.  Please you, retire to your chamber.
Cle.  Lead me.
He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might Determine this great war in single fight!
Then, Antony,—but now,—well, on.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antony’s Camp near Alexandria.
Trumpets sound.  Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.
Sold.  The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant.  Would thou, and those thy scars, had once
Preval’d
To make me fight at land!
Sold.  Hadst thou done so,
The kings that have revolted, and the soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow’d thy heels.
Ant.  Who’s gone this morning?
Sold.  One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus,
He shall not hear thee: or from Caesar’s camp
Say, “I am none of thine.”
Ant.  What say’st thou?
Sold.  He is with Caesar.
Eros.  Sir, his chests and treasure
He has not with him.
Ant.  Is he gone?
Sold.  Most certain.
Ant.  Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it:
Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to him
(I will subscribe) gentle adieu, and greetings:
Say, that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master.—O! my fortunes have Corrupted honest men:—despatch.—Enobarbus!
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Caesar’s Camp before Alexandria.
Flourish.  Enter Caesar, with Agrrippa, Enobarbus, and others.
Ces.  Go forth, Agrrippa, and begin the fight.
Our will is, Antony be took alive;
Make it so known.
Ces.  The time of universal peace is near:
Prove this a prosperous day, the three-look’d world
Shall bear the olive freely.
Enter a Messenger.
Mess.  Antony
Is come into the field.
Ces.  Go; charge Agrrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the van,
That Antony may seem to spend his forces
Upon himself.  [Exeunt all but Enobarbus.
Eno.  Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry on Affairs of Antony; there did persuade
Great Herod to incline himself to Caesar,
And leave his master Antony: for this pains
Caesar hath hang’d him. Canidius, and the rest
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable trust. I have done ill,
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely,
That I will joy no more.
Enter a Soldier of Caesar’s.
Sold.  Enobarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus: the messenger
Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now
Unloading of his mules.
Eno.  I give it you.
Sold.  Mock not, Enobarbus,
I tell you true: best you safe’d the bringer
Out of the host; I must attend mine office,
Or would have done it myself; Your emperor
Continues still a Jove.  [Exit Soldier.
Eno.  I am alone the villain of the earth,
And feel I am so most.—O Antony!
Thou mine of bounty; how wouldst thou have paid
SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and Trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA, and others

Agr. Retire; we have engaged ourselves too far. Caesar himself has work, and our oppression Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.

Agr. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed! Had we done so at first, we had driven them home With clouts about their heads. [Shouts afar off.]

Ant. Thou blest'ast apease.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T; But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em in bench-holes. I have yet Room for six scotches more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us scoor their backs, And match 'em up, as we take hares, behind: 'T is sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee

Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, marching; SCARUS, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run one before, And let the queen-know of our gists. To-morrow, Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood That has to-day escape'd. I thank you all, For doughty-handed are you; and have fought Not as you serv'd the cause, but as it had been Each man's, like mine: you have shown all Hectors. Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends, Tell them your feasts; whilst they with joyful tears Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss The honour'd gashes whole.—Give me thy hand: Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts, Make her thanks bless thee.—O, thou day of the world! Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attend and all, Through proof of harness to my heart, and there Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords! O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling From the world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl! though grey Do something mingle with our younger brown; yet have we A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man; [Pointing to SCARUS? Kiss it, my warrior:—he hath fought to-day, As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

1 Not in f. e. 2 Deeds: guests: in f. e. 3 Not in f. e. 4 Place of mustering the guard. 5 Not in f. e. 6 for: in f. e. 7 Reached.
SCENE XII.  ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us (order for sea is given,
They have put forth the haven)
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour.  [Exeunt.

Enter Caesar, and his Forces, marching.

Cæs.  But! being charg'd, we will be still by land,
Which, as I take 't, we shall; for his force is Forth to man his galleys.  To the vales,
And hold our best advantage!  [Exeunt.

Re-enter Antony and Scarsus.

Ant.  Yet they are not join'd.  Where yond pine does
I shall discover all; I'll bring thee word [stand.
Straight, how 't is like to go.  [Exit.

Scars.  Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers³
Say, they know not,—they cannot tell:—look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge.  Antony
Is valiant, and rejected; and by starts
His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,
Of what he has, and has not.

Alarum afar off, as at a Sea-Fight.

Re-enter Antony.

Ant.  All is lost!
This foul Egyptian hath betray'd me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost.—Triple-turn'd whore! 't is thou
Hast sold me to this novice, and my heart
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all.—Bid them all fly; be gone.

[Exit Scarsus.

Enter Cleopatra.

Ant.  Thou spell! Ay, thou!  Awaunt!

Cleo.  Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?

Ant.  Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving.
And blemish Caesar's triumph.  Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poort'st diminutives, for doits;² and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails.

'T is well thou 'rt gone,
If it be well to live; but better 't were
Thou fell'st under my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho! —
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach me,
Ailedes, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns of the moon;
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self.  The witch shall die:
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot; she dies for 't.—Eros, ho!  [Exit.

SCENE XII.—Alexandria.  A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iris, and Mardian.

Cleo.  Help me, my women!  O! he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.²

Char.  To the monument!
These lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.
The soul and body rive it more in parting,
Than greatness going off.

Mard.  To the monument!
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say, that the last I spoke was, Antony,
And word it, pr'ythee, piteously.  Hence, Mardian,
And bring me how he takes my death. —
To the Monument.  [Exeunt.

SCENE XII.—The Same.  Another Room.

Enter Antony and Eros.

Ant.  Eros, thou yet behold'st me.

Eros.  Ay, noble lord.

Ant.  Sometime, we see a cloud that's a dragonish,
A vapour, sometime, like a bear, or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon 't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs;
They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros.  Ay, my lord.

Ant.  That, which is now a horse, even with a thought,
The rack distins, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.

Eros.  It does, my lord.

Ant.  My good knave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony,
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
I made these wars for Egypt, and the queen,
Whose heart, I thought, I had, for she had mine,
Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto 't
A million more, now lost: she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar's, and false play'd my glory
Unto an enemy's triumph.—
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.—O, thy vile lady!  [Exit Mardian.

She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar.  No, Antony:
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.

Ant.  Hence, saxe'en cunning: peace!
She hath betray'd me; and shall die the death.

Mar.  Death of one person can be paid but once,
And that she has discharge'd.  What thou wouldst do,
Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake
Was, Antony! most noble Antony!
Then, in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips.  She render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant.  Dead, then?  —Dead.

Ant.  Unarm me, Eros: the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep.—That thou depart'st hence safe,
Does pay thy labour richly; go.—[Exit Mardian.

Off, pluck off:—
The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart.  O, cleave, my sides!

1 Unless.  ² auguries: in folio.  ³ rammed: in folio.  Hammer made the change.  ⁴ soul: in f. e.  ⁵ grave: in f. e.  ⁶ a game, now called "pricking in the gardens."  ⁷ in vogue with gypsies.  ⁸ dols: in folio.  ⁹ Foaming at the mouth.
Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,
Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros, apace.
No more a soldier:—bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne.—From me a while.
[Exit Eros.
I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and
Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture: since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stray no farther. Now all labour
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength: seal then, and all is done.
Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay for me:
Where souls do conch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:
Dido and her Aeneas shall want troops;
And all the haunts of ours. —Come, Eros! Eros! Re-enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died
I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword
Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back
With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack
The courage of a woman; less noble minded
Than she, which by her death our Caesar tells,
"I am conqueror of myself." Thou art sworn, Eros,
That when the exigent should come, (which now
Is come indeed) when I should see behind me
The terrible prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that on my command
Thou then wouldst kill me: do' t; the time is come,
Thou strik'st not me, 't is Caesar thou defeatest.
Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim, and could not?

Ant. Eros,
Wouldst then be window'd in great Rome, and see
Thy master thus with pleas'd' d arms, bending down
His corrigible neck, his face subdued
To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensued?

Eros. I would not see 't.

Ant. Come, then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.
Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir! pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then
To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents un purpos'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me, then, that noble countenance,
Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee! [Turning his face from him.

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then, let it do at once
The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master,
My captain, and my emperor, let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'T is said, man; and farewell.

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then. [Falls on his Sword.

Thus do I escape the sorrow
Of Antony's death.

Thrice nobler than myself!

[Dies.

Ant. What's the noise?

Ant. I have done my work ill, friends: O! make an end
Of what I have begun.

2 Guard. The star is fallen.

1 Guard. And time is at his period.

All. Alas, and woe!

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead:

1 Guard. Not I.

2 Guard. Nor I.

3 Guard. Nor any one. [Exit Guard.

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly,
This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Where's Antony?

Der. There, Diomed; there.

Dio. Lives he?

Wilt thou not answer, man? [Exit Diomed.

Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword,
And give me

Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute lord,
My mistress, Cleopatra, sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesi

Of what hath come to pass; for when she saw
(Which never shall be found) you did suspect
She had compos'd herself with Caesar, and that your rage
Would not be purged, she sent you word she was dead,
But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent
Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard, I pr'ythee.

Dio. What, ho! the emperor's guard! The guard,

What, ho!

Come; your lord calls.

Enter some of the Guard.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra hides;
'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

1 Guard. Wee, wee are we, sir, you may not live to wear
All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it,
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up;
I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. [Exit, bearing Antony.

Scene XIII.—The same. A Monument.

Enter, above, Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. O Charmian! I will never go from hence.
Char. Be comforted, dear madam.
Cleo. No, I will not.

All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise: our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great

Enter, below, Diomedes.

As that which makes it. — How now! is he dead?

Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead.

Look out 't the other side your monument,
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, Antony, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun,

Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in! — darkling stand,
Thou varying shore o' th' world. O Antony, Antony,
Antony!

Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help: help, friends Below; let's draw him thither.

Ant. Peace!

Not Caesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's triumph'd on its self.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony
Should conquer Antony; but woe's it so is!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt; dying; only
I here importune death a while, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips. —

Cleo. I dare not, dear,
(Dear my lord, pardon) I dare not,
Lest I be taken: not the imperious show
Of the full-fort'n'd Caesar ever shall
Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe.

Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,
And still condition, shall acquire no honour
Denuming upon me. — But come, come, Antony,
Help me, my women, — we must draw thee up. —
Assist, good friends.

Ant. O! quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's port, indeed! — How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness,
That makes the weight: had I great Juno's power,
The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little; —
Wishers were ever fools. — O! come, come, come;

And welcome, welcome! die, where thou hast liv'd! —
Quicken with kissing; had my lips that power,
Thou would I wear them out. —

A heavy sight.

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying.

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,
That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,
Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen.

Of Caesar seek your honour with your safety. — O!

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me.

None about Caesar trust, but Proculius.

Cleo. My resolution, and my hands, I'll trust;
None about Caesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end
Lament nor sorrow at, but please your thoughts,
In feeding them with those I my former fortunes,
Wherein I liv'd the greatest prince o' the world,
The noblest: and do now not basely die,
Nor cowardly put off my helmet to
My countryman, a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now, my spirit is going;
I can no more.

[Dies. Cleo. Noblest of men, woot die?
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is
No better than a styre? — O! see, my women,
The crown o' the earth doth melt. — My lord! —
O! wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen; young boys, and girls,
Are level now with men; the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon.

Char. O, quietness, lady!
Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.
Char. Lady! —
Iras. Madam! —
Char. O madam, madam, madam! —
Iras. Royal Egypt!

Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iras!
Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman; and commanded
By such poor passion as the maid that milks,
And does the meanest churls. — It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them, that this world did equal theirs,
Till they had stolen our jewel. — All's but naught;
Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad: then is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us? — How do you, women?
What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian?
My noble girls! — Ah, women, women! look,
Our lamp is spent, it's out. — Good airs, take heart:

[To the Guard below.

We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's noble,
Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away:
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.

[Exeunt; those above bearing off Antony's Body.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Caesar's Camp before Alexandria.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mecenas, Gallus, Proculius, and others.

Caes. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him, that he mocks
The pauses that he makes. —

1. The: in f. e. 2. conclusion: in f. e. 3. sport: in f. e. 4. when: in folio. Pope made the change. 5. Chores. 6. in f. e. — Tell him
He mocks us by the pauses, &c.
Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up, and spoke,
He was my master, and I wore his life,
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is 't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Caesar! Antony is dead.

Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make
A greater crack: the round world should have shook
Lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony
Is not a single drop: in the name lay
A society of the world.

Der. He is dead, Caesar;
Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Split that self noble heart. This is his sword;
I robb'd his wound of it: behold it, stain'd
With his most noble blood.

Cæs. Look you sad, friends?
The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Mac. His taints and honours
Weigh'd equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity; but you gods will give us
Some faults to make us men. Caesar is touch'd.

Mac. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Cæs. O Antony!
Have I follow'd thee to this?—but we do lance
Diseases in our bodies. I must perforce
Have shown to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine: we could not stail together
In the whole world. But yet let me lament,
With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts,
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle, that our stars,
Unreconcileable should divide
Our equalness to this.—Hear me, good friends,—
But I will tell you at some meeter season:

Enter a Messenger.

The business of 'this man looks out of him;
We'll hear him what he says.—Whence are you?

Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistres,CONFIN'D in all she has for her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forced to.

Cæs. Bid her have good heart:
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we
Determine for her; for Cæsar cannot live
To be ungentle.

Mess. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit.

Cæs. Come hither, Proculeius. Go, and say,
We purpose her no shame: give what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require,
Lost in her greatness by some mortal stroke
She do defeat; for her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph. Go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.

Cæs. Gallus, go you along.—Where's Dolabella,
To second Proculeius? [Exit Gallus.

All. Dolabella!

Cæs. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he 's employed: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent, where you shall see
How hardy I was drawn into this war,
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings. Go with me, and see
What I can show in this. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Monument.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, and Ira.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'T is paltry to be Caesar:
Not being fortunate, 's but fortune's knave,
A minister of her will: and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,
The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.

Enter, to the Gates of the Monument, Proculeius,
Gallus, and Soldiers.

Proc. Caesar sends greeting to the queen of Egypt;
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Proc. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Antony
did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but
I do not greatly care to be deceive'd,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks. [Exit.

Proc. Be of good cheer:
You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing.
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependancy, and you shall find
A conqueror, that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to. [Exit.

Cleo. Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look in it; the face. [Exit.

Proc. This I'll report, dear lady.
Have comfort; for, I know, your plight is pitied
Of him that caus'd it.

Gall. You see how easily she may be surpris'd.

[Proculeius, and two of the Guard, ascend the Monument by a Ladder, and come behind
Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the Gates.

Guard her till Caesar come.

[To Proculeius and the Guard. Exit Gallus.

Ira. Royal queen!

Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!—

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands. [Draws a Dagger.

Proc. Hold, worthy lady, hold! [Disarms her.
SCENE II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.
Cleo. What, of death, too,
That rides our dogs of languish?

Do not abuse my master's bounty, by
Th' undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come, come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;
If idle talk will once be necessary,¹
I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Caesar what he can.⁶ Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court,
Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And show me to the shouting variety
Of censoring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark naked, and let the water flies
Blow me into abhorring! rather make
My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!

Cleo. You do extend
These thoughts of horror farther, than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Cleo. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.—
To Caesar I will speak what you shall please,

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.

[Exeunt PROCULEIUS, and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?
Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.
Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.
You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams;
Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.
Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony:
O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,—
Cleo. His face was as the heavens: and therein stuck
A sun, and moon, which kept their course, and lighted
The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature.
Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his ear'd arm,
Crested the world: his voice was propitious
As all the tund'ring spheres; and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in 't: an autumn 'twas,
That grew the more by reaping: his delights
Were dolphin-like: they shew'd his back above
The element they liv'd in: in his livery
Walk'd crowns, and crownets; realms and islands were
As plates² dropp'd from his pocket.

Cleo. Think you, there was, or might be, such a man
As this I dream'd of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.
Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods:
But, if there be, or ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming: nature wants stuff
To vie³ strange forms with fancy: yet, to imagine
An Antony, were nature's piece⁴ against fancy,
Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam,
Your loss is as yourself, great; and you hear it
As answering to the weight: would I might never O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites⁵
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.
Know you, what Caesar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.
Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable,—
Cleo. He'll lead me then, then, in triumph?

Dol. Madam, he will; I know 't.

Cleo. Within. Make way there!—Caesar!

Enter CAESAR, GALIUS, PROCULEIUS, MECENAS,
SELEUCUS, and Attendants.

Caes. Which is the queen of Egypt?

Dol. It is the emperor, madam. [CLEOPATRA kneels.
Caes. Arise, you shall not kneel.
I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods
Will have it thus: my master and my lord
I must obey.

Caes. Take to you no hard thoughts:
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our deed, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir of the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well
To make it clear: but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often sham'd our sex.

Caes. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:
If you apply yourself to our intents,
(Which towards you are most gentle) you shall find
A benefit in this change: but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking
Antony's course, you shall pacify yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may through all the world: 'tis yours;
and we
Your scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord,
Caes. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.
Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,
I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued;

[Showing a Paper.⁶
Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus?
Sel. Here, madam.
Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak, my lord,
Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing.—Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam,
I had rather seal my lips, than to my peril
Speak that which is not.
Cleo. What have I kept back? Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known. Cae. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve Your wisdom in the deed. Cleo. See, Caesar! O, behold, How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours, And should we shift estates, yours would be mine. The ingratitude of this Seleucus does Even make me wild.—O slave, of no more trust Than love that's hir'd!—What! goest thou back? thou shalt Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes, Though they had wings. Slave, soul-less villain, dog! O, rarest base! Cae. Good queen, let us entreat you. Cleo. O Caesar! what a wounding shame is this! That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me, Doing the honour of thy lordliness To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Caesar, That I some lady trifles have reserv'd, Immotent toys, things of such dignity As we greet modern's friends withal; and say, Some nobler token have I kept apart For Livia, and Octavia, to induce Their mediation, must I be unbold With one that I have bred? Ye' gods! it smites me Beneath the fall I have. Pr'ythee, go hence; Or I shall show the cinders of my spirit Through th' ashes of mischance.—Wert thou a man, Thou wouldest have mercy on me. Cae. Forbear, Seleucus. [Exit Seleucus. Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are mis-thought For things that others do; and when we fall, We answer others' merits in our name, And therefore to be pitied. Cleo.
Cleopatra, Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd, Put we i' the roll of conquest: still be it yours, Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe, Caesar's no merchant, to make prize with you Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be chear'd; Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen; For we intend not to dispose you, as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep: Our care and pity is so much upon you, That we remain your friend; and so, adieu. Cleo. My master, and my lord! Cae. Not so. Adieu. Cleo. [Flourish. Exeunt Caesar, and his Train. Cleo. He words me girls, he words me, that I should not Be noble to myself: but bate thee, Charman. [Whispers Charman. Iras. Finisht, good lady; the bright day is done, And we are for the dark. Cleo. He thee again: I have spoken already, and it is provided; Go, put it to the haste. Char. Madam, I will. [Re-enter Dolabella. Dol. Where is the queen? Char. Behold, sir. [Exit Charman. Cleo. Dolabella? Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command, Which my love makes religion to obey, I tell you this: Caesar through Syria Intends his journey, and within three days You with your children will he send before. Make your best use of this; I have perform'd Your pleasure, and my promise. Cleo. Dolabella, I shall remain your debtor. Dol. I your servant. Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar. Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dol. Now, Iras, what think'st thou? Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown In Rome, as well as l: mechanic slaves With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers; shall Uphold you to the view: in their thick breaths, Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclosed, And forc'd to drink their vapour. Iras. The gods forbid! Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain. Iras. Stance lictors Will catch at us, like strumpets; and scald rhymer Ballad us out o' tune: the quick comedians Extempore will stage us, and present Our Alexandrian revels: Antony Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness I' the posture of a whore. Iras. O, the good gods! Cleo. Nay, that is certain. Iras. I'll never see it; for, I am sure, my nails Are stronger than mine eyes. Cleo. Why, that's the way To foil their preparation, and to conquer Their most assur'd intents. [Re-enter Charman. Show me, my women, like a queen:—go fetch My best attire,—I am again for Cydnus, To meet Mark Antony.—Sirrah, Iras, go.— Now, noble Charman, we 'll despatch indeed; And, when thou hast done this chare, I' ll give thee leave To play till dooms-day.——Bring our crown and all, Wherefore's this noise? [Exit Iras. A noise within. Enter one of the Guard. Guard. Here is a rural fellow, That will not be denied your highness' presence: He brings you figs. Cleo. Let him come in.——How poor an instrument [Exit Guard. May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty. My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing Of woman in me: now from head to foot I am marble-constant; now the fleeting moon No planet is of mine. Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing in a Basket. Guard. This is the man. Cleo. Avoid, and leave him.——[Exit Guard. Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there, That kills and pains not? Clown. Truly I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal: those that do die of it do seldom or never recover. Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died on 't? Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty, how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt.—Truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm; but lie that
SCENE II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

A laes unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close;
And golden Phoebus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
I'll mend it, and then play—

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly; wake her not.

1 Guard. Caesar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger. [Applies the Asp.
O! came; apiece; despatch: I partly feel thee.

1 Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Caesar's beguil'd.

2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Caesar: call him.

1 Guard. What work is here?—Charmian, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess
Descended of so many royal kings.

Ah, soldier! [Dies.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?

2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: thyself art coming
To see perform'd the dreadful act, which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

Within. A way there! a way for Caesar!

Enter Caesar, and all his Train.

Dol. O, sir! you are too sure an augurer:
That you did fear, is done.

Cas. Bravest at the last:
She level'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths?
I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

1 Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs:
This was his basket.

Cas. Poison'd, then.

1 Guard. O Caesar!

This Charmian lived but now; she stood, and spake,
I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress: tremblingly she stood,
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cas. O noble weakness!—
If they had swallow'd poison, 't would appear
By external swelling; but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown:
The Life is on her arm.

1 Guard. This is an aspick's trail; and these fig-leaves
Have slime upon them, such as the aspick leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Cas. Most probable,
That so she died; for her physician tells me,
She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed,
And bear her women from the monument.
She shall be buried by her Antony;
No grave upon the earth shall clips in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is
No less in pity, than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall,
In solemn show, attend this funeral,
And then to Rome.—Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity.

[Exeunt.

1 What: in f. e. 2 Stevens reads: wild (the old form of vile). 3 away: in folio. Pope made the change.
CYMBELINE.

Dramatis Personae.

CYMBELINE, King of Britain.
CLOUTEN, Son to the Queen by a former Husband.
LEONARIUS POSTHUMUS, Husband to Imogen.
BELARIUS, a banished Lord, disguised under the name of Morgan.
GUIDERIUS, Arviragus, {Sons to Cymbeline, disguised under the names of Polydore and Cadwal, supposed Sons to Belarius.}
PHILARIO, Friend to Posthumus, {Italians.}
IACHIMO, Friend to Philario,
A French Gentleman, Friend to Philario.

Lords, Ladies, Roman Senators, Tribunes, Apparitions, a Soothsayer, a Dutch Gentleman, a Spanish Gentleman, Musicians, Officers, Captains, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

Scene, sometimes in Britain, sometimes in Italy.

Act I.

Scene I.—Britain. The Garden of Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man, but frowns: our bloods
No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers
Still seem as does the king.

2 Gent. But what's the matter?
1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom
He purpos'd to his wife's sole son, (a widow
That late he married) hath refer'd herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded;
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all
Is outward sorrow, though, I think, the king
Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king?
1 Gent. He that hath lost her, too: so is the queen,
That most desir'd the match; but not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?
1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing
Too bad for bad report; and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her,) alack, good man!—
And therefore banish'd is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far.
1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself;
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.

1 of: in f. e. 2 Made them fast.
IMOGEN ENTERING THE CAVE.

Cymbeline, Act III. Scene 6.
2 Gent. How long is this ago?
1 Gent. Some twenty years.
2 Gent. Strange a king's children should be so con-

ved.
So slackly guarded, and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!
1 Gent. Howsoever 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.
2 Gent. I do well believe you.
1 Gent. We must forbear. Here comes the gentleman, the queen, and princess. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me, daughter,
After the slander of most step-mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you: you are my prisoner, but
Your jailor shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
So soon as I can win th' offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him; and 't were good,
You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.
Queen. You know the peril.
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of bard affections, though the king
Hath charg'd you should not speak together.

[Exit Queen.

Imo. O dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband,
I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing
(Always reserv'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes; not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world,
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O, lady! weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man. I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth;
My residence in Rome at one Philario's;
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter. Thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send;
Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
If the king come, I shall incur I know not
How much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet I'll move
To walk this way. I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries to be friends,
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself,
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love:
This diamond was my mother's; take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another thing!—
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And bear up my embracements from a next
With bonds of death!—Remain, remain thou here

[Putting on the Ring.

While sense can keep it on. And sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles
I still win of you: for my sake, wear this:
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a Bracelet on her Arm.

Imo. O, the gods!
When shall we see again?

[Enter Cymbeline and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king!
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!
If after this command thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away!
Thou 'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you,
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone.

[Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing!
That shouldst repair my youth, thou heapest
A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation;
I am senseless of your wrath: a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience?

Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen.

Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a pottock.¹

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar would² have made my throne
A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus.
You bred him as my play-fellow; and he is
A man worth any woman; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What! art thou mad?

Imo. Almost, sir: heaven restore me!—Would I were
A heather's daughter, and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter Queen.

Cym. Thou foolish thing!—
They were again together: you have done! To the Queen.
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience.—Peace!
Dear lady daughter, peace!—Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort
Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly.

[Exit.

Enter Pisanio.

Queen. Fie!—You must give way:
Here is your servant.—How now, sir! What news?

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Ha!

No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis. There might have been,

But that my master rather play'd than fought,

And had no help of anger: they were parted

By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.

To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!—

I would they were in Afric both together,

Myself by with a needle, that I might prick

The goer back.—Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command. He would not suffer me

To bring him to the haven: left these notes

Of what commands I should be subject to,

When 't please'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been

Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour,

He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.

Queen. Pray, walk a while.

Imo. About some half hour hence,

Pray you, speak with me. You shall, at least,

Go see my lord aboard: for this time, leave me.[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Public Place.

Enter CLOTEN, and Two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt: the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it—Have I hurt him?

2 Lord. [Aside.] No, faith; not so much as his patience.

1 Lord. Hurt him? his body's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, to ward your face.

1 Lord. Stano you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you something.

2 Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans.

—Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

2 Lord. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You 'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord.[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter ImoGEN and PisANO.

Imo. I would thou grow'st unto the shores of the haven,

And question'dst every sail: if he should write,

And I not have it, 't were a paper lost

As offer'd mercy is. What was the last

That he spakes to thee?

Pis. It was, his queen, his queen!

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen, happier therein than I!—

And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; for so long

As he could make me with this eye or ear

Distinguish him from others, he did keep

The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,

Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind

Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,

How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him

As little as a crow, or less, ere left

To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but

To look upon him, till the diminution

Of space had point'd him sharp as my needle;

Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from

The smallness of a gnat to air; and then

Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisano,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,

With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had

Most pretty things to say: ere I could toll him,

How I would think on him, at certain hours,

Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray

Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,

To encounter me with orisons, for then

I am in heaven for him: or ere I could

Give him that parting kiss, which I had set

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,

And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,

Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

The queen, madam,

Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them despatch'd.—

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall.[Exeunt.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Jack. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain:

he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of;

but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabulated by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished, than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And, then, his banishment.—

Iach. Ay, and the approbations1 of those that weep this lamentable divorce and her colours,2 are wondrous wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life.—

Enter Posthumus.

Here comes the Briton. Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits with gentlemen of your knowing to a stranger of his quality.—I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when have I been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atomic my countryman and you: it had been pity, you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if I not offend to say it is mended) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'T was a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her fore out of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outshines many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her; so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours; but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen, too; so, of your brace of unbenadigable beads, there is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if in the holding or loss of that you term her frail. I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress; make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something, but I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you'll sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A report; though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more—a punishment too.

Phil. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came in too suddenly: let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate, and my neighbour's, on the approbation3 of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand duets to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers, which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger: it is part of it.

Iach. You are afraid,4 and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue: you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between us. My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of 1 approbation: in f. e. 2 under her colours: in f. e. 3 This word is not in f. e. 4 is in f. e. 9 Reconcile. 4 Not in folio. 7 not believe: in folio. Malone made the change. 9 Overcome. 9 Proof. 10 a friend: in f. e.
your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match.
Here's my ring.

Prel. I will have it no lay.

Jach. By the gods, it is one.—If I bring you no sufficient testimony, that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours.—provided, I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us.—Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make good your vauntage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no farther your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, (you not making it appear otherwise) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Jach. Your hand: a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve. I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Execut Posthumus and Iachimo.

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and CornELiUS.

Queen. Whilest yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers:
Make haste. Who has the note of them?
1 Lady. Queen. Despatch.—

Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?
Cor. Please your highness, ay: here they are, madam:

[Presenting a small box.

But I beseech your grace, without offence, (My conscience bids me ask) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds, Which are the movers of a languishing death; But though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor, Thou ask' st me such a question: have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so, That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded, (Unless thou think'st me devilish) is 't not meet That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, (but none human) To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their act; and by them gather Their several virtues, and effects.

Cor. Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O! content thee.—

Enter Pisanio.

[Aside.] Here comes a flattering rascal: upon him Will I first work: he's for his master, And enemy to my son.—[How now, Pisanio!—

Doctor, your service for this time is ended:
Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam;
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. Hark thee, a word.—

[She talks apart to Pisanio.]

Cor. I do not like her. She doth think, she has Strangeingerious poisons: I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damned nature. Those she has Will stupify and dull the sense awhile;
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats, and dogs, Then afterward up higher; but there is No danger in what show of death it makes More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect; and I the truer, So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor, Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think, in time She will not quench, and let instruction enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son, I'll tell thee on the instant thou art, then, As great as is thy master: greater; for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name Is at last gasp: return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being, Is to exchange one misery with another, And every day that comes comes to decay A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect, To be dependant on a thing that leaves? Who cannot be now-built; nor has no friends, [The Queen drops the box: Pisanio takes it up and presents it.

So much as but to prop him.—Thou tak'st up Thou know'st not what: but take it for thy labour. It is a thing I made, which hath the king Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know What is more cordial:—nay, I pr'ythee, take it; It is an earnest of a farther good That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how The case stands with her: do't as from thyself. Think what a chance thou chancest on; but think Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot, my son, Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the king To any shape of thy preferment, such As thou 'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly, That set thee on to this desert, am bound To load thy merit richly. Call my women:

Think on my words. [Exit Ps.]—A sly and constant knave, Not to be shak'd: the agent for his master, And the remembrancer of her, to hold The hand fast to her lord.—I have given him that, Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her Of lieges for her suite; and which she after, Except she bend her humour, shall be assured

Re-enter Pisanio, and Ladies.

To taste of too soon.—So, madam, we are well done. The violets, cowslips, and the primroses, Bear to my closet.—Pare thee well, Pisanio; Think on my words. [Exeunt Queen and Ladies.]

Ps. And shall do;

But when to my good lord I prove untrue, I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you. [Exit.
SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish sutor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd.—O, that husband!
My supreme crown of grief; and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: blessed be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be? Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis, Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam?

The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly. [Gives a Letter.

Imo. Thanks, good sir:
You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich!

[Aside.

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness, be my friend:
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot,
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.] "He is one of the noblest note,
Whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect Upon him accordingly, as you value your trust—

"Leonatus."

So far I read aloud;
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.—
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.—
What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich cope
O'er sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above, and the twin'd stones
Upon th' unnumber'd beach; and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious
'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be 't he eye; for apes and monkeys, 'Twixt two such she's, would chatter this way, and,
Contemn with mows the other: nor 't he judgment:
For idiots, in this case of favour, would
Be wisely definite: nor 't he appetite;
Sluttery, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit to emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, tow?

Iach. The cloven will,
(That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
That tub both fill'd and running) ravening first
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, madam, well.—Beseech you, sir, desire

[To Pisano.

My man's abode where I did leave him: be
Is strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir. [Exit Pisano.

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, 'beseech you?

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he disposed to mirth? I hope, he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none, a stranger there,
So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one,
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton
(Your lord, I mean) laughs from 's free lungs, cries, "O!
Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yet, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish
For assurance bondage?"

Imo. Will my lord say so?

Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter
It is a recreation to be by,
And hear him mock the Frenchman; but, heavens know
Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope.

Iach. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might
Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 't is much;
In you,—which I account beyond all talents,—
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?

Iach. You look on me: what riek discern in me,
Deserves your pity?

Imo. Lamentable! What!

Iach. To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I the dungeon by a snuff?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—but
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me: pray you,
(Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more)
Than to be sure they do; for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born) discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this check
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here; should I (darn'd then)
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join grips with hands
Made hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood
With labour), the base of jesting in an eye,
Base and illustrious: as the smoky light,
That's fed with stinking tallow, it were fit,
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—Court before Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Cloten, and Two Lords, as from the Bowling-alley.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack upon an up-cast, to be hit away!

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with the bowl.

I had a hundred pound on’t; and then a whoreson jackamapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

4 1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with the bowl.

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with the bowl.

Were deeply rooted: and shall make your lord,
That whom he is, new o’er: and he is one
The truest manner’d; such a holy witch,
That he enchains societies unto him:
Half all men’s hearts are his.

I. He sits amongst men, like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur’d
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour’d with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which, you know, cannot err. The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaste. Pray, your pardon.

I. All’s well, sir. Take my power i’ the court
For yours.

I. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

I. Pray, what is’t?

I. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,
The best feather of our wing) have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: ’tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form. Their value’s great,
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage: may it please you
To take them in protection?

I. Willingly,
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

I. They are in a trunk;
Attended by my men; I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night,
I must absent to-morrow.

I. O! no, no.

I. Yes. I beseech; or I shall short my word,
By lengthening my return. From Gallia
I cross’d the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

I. I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow.

I. O! I must, madam.
Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do’t to-night:
I have outstay’d my time, which is material
To the tender of our present.

I. I will write.
Send your trunk to me: It shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You’re very welcome.

[Exeunt.]
2 Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oath, ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; [Aside.] nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction? Would he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool.

Clo. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth.

—A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother. Every jack-slave hath his bully full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that no body can match.

2 Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou?

2 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger! and I not know on't? 2 Lord. [Aside.] He's a strange fellow himself; and knows it not.

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and 't is thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no danger in 't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool granted; therefore, your issues being foolish do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian. What have I lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt Cloten and first Lord.]

That such a crafty devil as is his mother Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And leave eighteen. 'Alas, poor princes! Thou divine Imogen, what thou endurest, Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd; A mother hourly crying plots; a wooer, More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st stand To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land! [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Bed-Chamber; in one part of it, a great Trunk.

Imogen reading in her Bed; Helen attending.

Lady. Who's there? my woman, Helen?

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours, then. Mine eyes are weak; Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed.

1 The covering of floors. 2 Not in f. e. 4 bare: in f. e.
Enter Musicus.

Come on; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain: but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good concieved thing: after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus' gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs,
On chalyb'd flowers that lies;
And winding Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes;
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise;
Arise, arise!

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a fault in her ears, which horse-hairs, and calves' guts, nor the voice of an unpay'd cunnoch to boot, can never amend.

[Exeunt Musicians.

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty; and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter? Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she wonch saffes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new; She hath not yet forgot him: some more time Must wear the print of his remembrance out, And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king; Who lets go by no vantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself To orderly solicit, and be friended With aptness of the season: make denials; Increase your services: so seem, as if You were sent to do these duties which You tender to her; that you in all obey her, Save when command to your dispensation tend, And therein you are senseless.

[Enter Clo.

Clo. Senseless? not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome: The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his: we must receive him According to the honour of his sender; And towards himself, his goodness forspend on us, We must in tend our duty. Our dear son, When you have given good morning to your mistress, Attend the queen, and us: we shall have need To employ you towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.

[Exeunt Cym. Queen, Lords, and Mess.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not, Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave, ho!— I know her women are about her; what [Calls. If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold Which buys admittance; off it doth; and makes Diana's rangers, false themselves, yield up Their deer to the stand o' the stealer; and 'tis gold Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief; Nay, sometime, hangs both thief and true man: what Can it not do, and undo? I will make One of her women lawyer to me; for Yet not understand the ease myself. By your leave. [Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours, Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person; is she ready?—Ay, To keep her chamber.

Lady. There's gold for you; sell me your good report. Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you What I shall think is good?—the princess—

Enter Imogen.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest; sister, your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give, Is telling you that I am poor of thanks, And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear, I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 't were as deep with me: If you swear still, your recompense is still That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent, I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith, I shall unfold equal discourtesy To your best kindness. One of your great knowing Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness? 't were my sin: I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad; That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir; You put me to forget a lady's manners, By being so verbal; and learn now, for all, That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce, By the very truth of it, I care not for you; And am so near the lack of charity, (To accuse myself) I hate you; which I had rather You felt than make 't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For The contract you pretend with that base wretch, (One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes, With scrips o' the court) it is no contract, none: And though it be allow'd in meaner parties, (Yet who than he more mean?) to knit their souls On whom there is no more dependency But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot, Yet you are cur'd from that enlargement by The consequence o' the crown, and must not oil? The precious note of it with a base slave, A hilding* for a livery, a squire's cloth, A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more But what thou art besides, thou wert too base To be his groom; thou wert dignified enough, Even to the point of envy, if 't were made Clearly for your virtues, to be sturd The under hangman of his kingdom, and hated

---

Cymbeline.

Enter Cymbeline.

Cymb. The south-wind rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischiefs, than come

To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,

That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer

In my respect than all the hairs above thee,

Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisania!

Enter Pisania.

Cymb. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently.—

Cymb. His garment?

Imo. I am spirited with a foot;

Frighted, and anger'd worse.—Go, bid my woman

Search for a jewel, that too casually

Hath left mine arm: it was thy master's; 'twas threw me,

If I would lose it for a revenue.

Of any king's in Europe. I do think, I

Saw this morning: confident I am,

Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it.

I hope, it be not gone to tell my lord

That I knew aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so: go, and search. [Exit Pis.

Cymb. You have abus'd me.—

His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, sir.

If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't,

Cymb. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:

She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,

But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,

To the worst of discontent. [Exit.

Cymb. I'll be reveng'd.—

His meanest garment?—Well. [Exit.

Enter Posthumus and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would, I were so sure

To win the king, as I am bold, her honour

Will remain hers.

Phil. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any; but aside the change of time;

Quake in the present winter's state, and wish

That warmer days would come. In these fear'd hopes,

I barely gratify your love: they failing,

I must die much your debtor.

Phil. Your very goodness, and your company,

O'capays all I can do. By this, your king

Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius

Will do's commission throughly; and, I think,

He'll grant the tribute, send the arracages,

Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance

Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,

(Statist though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear

The legion, now in Gallia, sooner landed

In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings

Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen

Are men more order'd, than when Julius Cæsar

Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at: their discipline

(Now mingled with their courages) will make known

To their approvers, they are people, such

That mend upon the world.

Enter Iachimo.

Phil. See! Iachimo?

Post. The swiftest harts have pested you by land,

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,

To make your vessel nimble.

Phil. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer made

The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady

Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And, therewithal, the best; or let her beauty

Look through a casement to allure false hearts,

And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenor good, I trust.

Iach. Phil. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,

When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,

But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet,—

Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not

Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I had lost, I

Should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far, t' enjoy

A second night of such sweet shortness, which

Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,

Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,

Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,

If you keep covenant. Had I not brought

The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant

We were to question farther; but I now

Profess myself the winner of her honour,

Together with your ring; and not the wronger

Of her, or you, having proceeded but

By both your wills.

Post. If you can make 't apparent

That you have tasted her in bed, my hand

And ring are yours: if not, the foul opinion

You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,

Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both

To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,

Being so near the truth, as I will make them,

Must first induce you to believe: whose strength

I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,

You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find

You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber,

(Where, I confess, I slept not, but, profess,

Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd

With tapestry of silk and silver; the story,

Proud Cleopatra. when she met her Roman,

And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for

The press of boats, or pride: a piece of work

So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive

In workmanship, and value; which, I wonder'd,

Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,

Since the true life on 't was. 1

Post. This is most true;

And this you might have heard of here, by me,

Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars

Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian, bathing; never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted: her andirons
(I had forgot them) were two winged' Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour.—
Let it be granted, you have seen all this, (and praise
Be given to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can,
Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; see!—

[Producing the Bracelet]

And now 'tis up again: it must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, (I thank her) that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too. She gave it me,
And said, she priz'd it once,

To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?
Post. O! no; no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this too;

[Giving the Ring]

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on 't. —Let there be no honour,
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance; love,
Where there's another man: the vows of women
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing.—
O, above measure false!

Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or,
Who knows, if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stolen it from her?

Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by't.—Back my ring.—
Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this, for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.

't is true:—nay, keep the ring—'tis true. I am sure,
She would not lose it: her attendants are
All sworn, and honourable:—they induc'd to steal it!
And by a stranger!—No, he hath enjoy'd her:
The cognizance of her incontinency
Is this:—she hath bought the name of where thus dearly—
There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient.
This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuad'd well of.

Post. Never talk on't;
She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek
For farther satisfying, under her breast
(Worthy the press'ing) lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging: by my life,
I kiss'd it, and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm
Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?

Post. Spare your arithmetic: never count the turns;
Once, and a million!

Iach. I'll be sworn,—

Post. No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
Thou 'st made me cuckold.

Iach. I will deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal!
I will go there, and do 't; 't is the court; before
Her father. — I'll do something.

[Exit.]

Phi. Quite besides
The government of patience! — You have won;
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Exit.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women
Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;
And that most venerable man, which I
Did call my father, was I know not where
When I was stamped; some coiner with his tools
Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seemed
The Dian of that time; so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this. — O vengeance, vengeance!
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with
A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her
As chaste as unsum'd snow: — O, all the devils! —
This yellow lachino, in an hour, — wasn't not?—
Or less,—at first: perchance he spoke not, but,
Like a full-acorda' boar, a foaming' one,
Cry'd "oh!" and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenge, hers;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longings, slander, mutability,
All faults that may be nam'd; nay, that hell knows,
Why, hers, in part, or all: but, rather, all;
For even to vice
They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
Deceit them, curse them. — Yet 'tis greater skill,
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better.

[Exit.]
ACT

SCENE I.—Britain. A Room of State in Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords, at one Door; at another, Caius Lucius, and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us?
Luc. When Julius Caesar (whose remembrance yet Lives in men’s eyes, and will to ears, and tongues, Be theme, and hearing ever) was in this Britain, And conquer’d it, Cassibelan, thine uncle, (Famous in Caesar’s praises, no whit less Than in his feats desiring it) for him And his succession, granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee lately Is left unrender’d.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel, Shall be so ever.
Clo. There be many Caesars, Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself; and we will nothing pay, For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity, Which then they had to take from us, to resume We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege, The kings your ancestors, together with The natural bravery of your isle; which stands As Neptune’s park, ribbed and paled in With rocks unscaleable, and roaring waters: With sand, that will not bear your enemies’ boats, but suck them up to the top-most. A kind of conquest Caesar made here: but made not here his brag Of “came,” and “gave,” and “overcame,” with shame (The first that ever touch’d him) he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping, (Poor ignorant baboons!) on our terrible seas, Like egg-shells mov’d upon their surges, crack’d As easily ’gainst our rocks. For joy whereof The fam’d Cassibelan, who was once at point (O, gigot fortune!) to master Caesar’s sword, Made Llud’s town with rejoicing fires bright, And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there’s no more tribute to be paid. Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Caesars: other of them may have crooked noses; but, to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say, I am one; but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar’s ambition, (Which swell’d so much, that it did almost stretch The sides of the world) against all colour, here Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off, Become a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be.

Clo. We do.

Cym. Say, then, to Caesar,

I II.

Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which Ordain’d our laws; whose gave the sword of Caesar Hath too much mangled; whose, repair, and franchise, Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws, Who was the first of Britain which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call’d Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar (Caesar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers) thine enemy. Receive it from me, then.—War, and confusion, In Caesar’s name pronounce I against thee: look For fury not to be resisted.—Thus defied, I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius. Thy Caesar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather’d honour; Which he, to seek of me again, perforce, Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect, That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for Their liberties, are now in arms; a precedent Which not to read would show the Britons cold: So Caesar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer: if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours. If you fall in the adventure, our cows shall fare the better for you; and there’s an end.

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master’s pleasure, and he mine: All the remain is, welcome.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Pisario.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not What monsters here accuse?—Leonatus! O, master! what a strange infection Is fallen into thy ear! What false Italian (As poisonous tongueed, as handed) hath prevail’d On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal? No: She’s punish’d for her truth; and undergoes, More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults As would take in some virtue,—O, my master! Thy mind to her is now as low, as were Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her? Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I Have made to thy command?—I, her?—her blood? If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I, That I should seem to lack humanity, So much as this fact comes to? “Do’t. The letter [Reading.

That I have sent her, by her own command Shall give thee opportunity.”—O, damn’d paper! Black as the ink that’s on thee. Senseless baulk, Art thou a scoldery* for this act, and look’st So virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes.

[Enter Imogen.]

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Ino. How now, Pisanio!

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Ino. Who? thy lord? that is my lord: Leonatus.

O! learn'd indeed were that astronomer,

That knew the stars, as I his characters;

He'll lay the future open. — You good gods,

Let what is here contain'd relish of love,

Of my lord's health, of his content, — yet not,

That we with tire and wonder — that great him:

Some griefs are medicible; that is one of them,

For it doth physic love — of his content,

All but in that! — Good wax, thy leave. — Bless'd be,

You bees, that make these locks of counsel! Lovers,

And men in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:

Though forfeitors you cast in prison, yet

You clasp young Cupid's tables. — Good news, gods!

[Reads.]

"Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you; O

the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice, that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven: what your own love will out of this advice you follow. So he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in love,

"Leonatus Posthumus."

O, for a horse with wings! — Hear'st thou, Pisanio?

He is at Milford-Haven: read, and tell me

How far't is thither. If one of mean affairs

May m'd it in a week, why may not I

Glide thither in a day? — Then, true Pisanio,

(Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—
O, let me 'bate! — but not like me; — yet long'st,—
But in a fainer kind: — O! not like me,
For mine 's beyond beyond) say, and speak thick,

(Love's counsellor should fill the bosoms of hearing;
To the smoothing of the sense) how far it is

To this same blessed Milford; and, by the way,

Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
T' inherit such a haven: but, first of all,
How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuse: — but first, how get hence.
Why should excuse be born, or e'er begot?
We 'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,

How many score of miles may we well ride
Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,

Madam, 's enough for you, and too much, too.

Ino. Why, one that rob't to 's execution, man,

Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagers
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run i' the clocks by half. — But this is foolery. —
Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She 'll home to her father; and provide me, presently,

A riding suit, no costlier than would fit

A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you 're best consider.

Ino. I see before me, man: nor here, nor here,

Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'ythee;
Do as I bid thee. There 's no more to say;

Accessible is none but Milford way.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Wales. A mountaneous Country, with a Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such

Whose roof's as low as ours. Stoop, boys: this gate

Instructs you how 't adore the heavens, and bows you
To a morning's holy office: the gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high, that giants may get' through
And keep their impious turbards on, without
Good-morrow to the sun. — Hail! thou fair heaven!
We house 't the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouter livers do.

Guil. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Bel. Now, for our mountain sport. Up to yond' hill:

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me a crow,

That it is place which lessens and sets off;
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:

That service is not service, so being done,

But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus,

Draws us a profit from all things we see;

And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The shaded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the radiant eagle. — Of this life
Is nobler, than attending for a check;
Richer, than doing nothing for a bob;

Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk.

Such gain the cap of him, that makes him fine,
Yet keeps his book uncorrect'd.

No life to ours.

Guil. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor un-

fledged,

Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor know not

What air's from home. Haply this life is best,

If quiet life be best; sweeter to you,

That have a sharper known, well corresponding
With your stiff' age; but unto us it is

A cell of ignorance, travelling abed,
A prison for a debtor, that not daries
To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of,

When we are old as you? when we shall hear

The rain and wind beat dark December, how

In this our pinching cave shall we discourse

The freezing hours away? — We have seen nothing:
We are beastly: subtle as the fox for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat:

Our valour is to chase what flies; our coge

We make a quire, as doth the prisoner's bird,

And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!

Did you but know the city's usuries,

And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court,

As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
If the name of fame, and honour; which dies i' the search,

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph,

As record of fair act: nay, many times,
Deth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Most court'sy at the censure. — O, boys! this story
The world may read in me: my body's at market
With Romans and Celts, and my report was once
First with the best of note. Cymbeline lov'd me;
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off; then, was I as a tree,

Whose boughs did bend with fruit; but, in one night,

ACT III.

BEL.
SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand. — Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now. Pisano! Man! Where Is Posthumus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From th' inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: put thyself
Into a honour of less fear, ere wilfulness Vanquish my staidler senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with

Pis. offers a Letter.

A look untender? If it be summer news,
Smile to 't before; if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still. — My husband's hand! That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craft'd him, And he's at some hard point. — Speak, man: thy

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read; [Giving it. 6 And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] "Thy mistress, Pisano, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisano, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven; she hath my letter for the purpose: where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal. 7" Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper Hath cut her throat already. — No; 't is slander,
Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states, Maidens, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave This viperous slander enters. — What cheer, madam? Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him? To weep 'twixt clock and clock; if sleep charge nature, To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed, Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady! Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness. — Iachimo,
Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks,
Thy favour's good enough. Some jay of Italy, Who smothereth her with painting, 8 hath betray'd him; Poor I am state, a garment out of fashion; And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls, I must be ripp'd: — to pieces with me! — O! Men's vows are women's traitors. All good seeming; By thy revolt, O husband! shall be thought Put on for villainy; not born where 't grows,
But worn a hat for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas, Were in his time thought false; and Sinon's weeping Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity From most true wretchedness: so thou, Posthumus, Wilt lay the heaven on all proper men: Goodly, and gallant, shall be false, and perjur'd, From thy great fall. — Come, fellow, be thou honest: Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou seeest him, A little witness my obedience: look! I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit The innocent mansion of my love, my heart. Fear not; 't is empty of all things; but grief: Thy master is not there, who was, indeed, The riches of it. Do his bidding: strike. Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause, But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!

Thou shalt not damn my hand.

1 where on the bow: in folio. 2 Warburton made the change. 3 4 Not in f. 6 Whose mother was her painting: in f. 7
Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine,
That craves my weak hand. Come, here's my heart:
Something's afore't. Soft, soft! we'll no defence;
Obdient as the scabbard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more.
Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools
Believe false teachers: though these that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up
My disobedience against the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely followers, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be disdèd by her
That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pangs. Pr'ythee, despatch;
The lamb entreats the butcher: where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady!
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.
Imo. Do 't, and to bed, then.
Pis. I'll crack mine eye-balls first.*
Imo. And, wherefore, then,
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretece? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For what? no purpose. Whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be uncraft, when thou hast taken thy stand,
Th' elected dear before thee?

Pis. But to win time,
To lose so bad employment; in the which
I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.
Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak;
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.
Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.
Imo. Bringing me here to kill me.
Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abus'd:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.
Imo. Some Roman courtiez.
Pis. No, on my life.
Imo. I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.
Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where hide? how live?
Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Ino. Amen. I thank thee. [Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cymb. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master’s enemy.

Cymb. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourselves,
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you
A conduct over land to Milford-Haven.—
Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you!

Cymb. My lords, you are appointed for that office;
The due of honour in no point omit.
So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time forth
I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Cymb. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,
Till he have cross’d the Severn.—Happiness!

[Exeunt Lucius and Lords.

Queen. He goes hence frowning; but it honours us,
That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'T is all the better:
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cymb. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us, therefore, ripely,
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His war for Britain.

Queen. 'T is not sleepy business,
But must be look’d to speedily, and strongly.

Cymb. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear’d
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender’d
The duty of the day. She looks us like
A thing more made of malice, than of duty:
We have noted it.—Call her before us, for
We have been too slight in sufferance. [Exit an Attendant.

Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir’d
Hath her life been; the cure wherof, my lord,
’T is time must do. Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her: she’s a lady
So tender of rebuke, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

[Re-enter an Attendant.

Cymb. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer’d?

Attcn. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock’d; and there’s no answer
That will be given to the loud’st noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray’d me to excuse her keeping close;
Whereunto constraint’d by her infirmity,
She shew’d that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to perform: this
She wish’d me to make known, but our great court
Made me to blame in memory.

Cymb. Her doors lock’d?
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I Fear prove false! [Exit.

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,
I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.—[Exit Cloten.

Pisanio, thou that stand’st so for Posthumus,
He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence
Procured by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply, desir’d hath she’d her;
Or, wing’d with fervour of her love, she’s flown
To her desir’d Posthumus. Gone she is
To death, or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either: she being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

[Re-enter Cloten.

How now, my son!

Clo. 'T is certain, she is fled.
Go in, and cheer the king: he rages; none
Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: may
This my forlorn and forestal him of the coming day! [Exit Queen.

Clo. I love, and hate her, for she’s fair and royal;
And that she hath all courtly parts, more excellent
Than lady, ladies, woman: from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded,
Outsells them all. I love her therefore; but,
Disdaining me, and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus, flanders her judgment,
That what’s else rare she chok’d; and in that point
I will conclude to hate her: nay, indeed,
To be reveng’d upon her: for, when fools shall—

[Enter Pisanio.

Who is here?—What! are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither. Ah, you precious pandar! Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straightforward with the flends.

Pis. O, my good lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter—
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I’ll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord!

How can she be with him? When was she miss’d?
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;
No farther halting: satisfy me home
What is become of her?

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain! Discover where thy mistress is, at once,
At the next word.—No more of worthy lord,—
Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a Letter

Clo. Let’s see 't. I will pursue her
Even to Augustus’ throne.

Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish.
She’s far enough; and what he learns by this,
May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Humph!
Cymbeline.

Act III.

Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead. 0 Imogen,
Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again! 0
Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?
Pis. Sir, as I think.
Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know 'tis. Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villain so'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I will think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.
Pis. Well, my good lord.
Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?
Pis. Sir, I will.
Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?
Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.
Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.
Pis. I shall, my lord.
Clo. Meet thee at Millford-Haven. I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember 't anon. Even there thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would, these garments were come. She said upon a time (the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes;
there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body.—and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised) to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again.
She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter Pisania, with the Clothes.

Be those the garments?
Pis. Ay, my noble lord.
Clo. How long is't since she went to Millford-Haven?
Pis. She can scarce be there yet.
Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee; the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design.
Be but dutiful, and true preferrment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Millford: I would had wings to follow it. —Come, and be true. [Exit.
Pis. Thou bid'st me to thy less: for true to thee
Wore to prove false, which I will never be
To him that is most true.—To Millford go,
And find not her whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow,
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed
Be cross'd with slowness: labour be his need! [Exit.

Scene VI. — Before the Cave of Belarius.

Enter Imogen, attired like a Boy.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one:
I have 'tired 1 myself, and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed: I should be sick;
But that my resolution helps me. — Millford,
When from the mountain-top Pisania show'd thee,

— thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think
Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean,
Where they should be relieve'd. Two beggars told me
I could not miss my way: will poor folks lie,
That have affections on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true: to lapse in fulness
Is sorier, than to lie for need; and falsehood
Is worse in kings, than beggars.—My dear lord!
Thou art one of the false ones: now I think on thee,
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for food. — But what is this?

[Seeing the Cave.] Here is a path to it: it is some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call; yet famine,
Ere clean it o'errhrow nature, makes it valiant.
Plenty, and peace, breed cowards; hardness ever
Of hardiness is mother. — Ho! Who's here?
If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take, or lend. — Ho!—No answer? then, I'll enter.
Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on 't.
Such a foe, good heavens! [Exit into the Cave.]

Enter Belarius, Gudericus, and Arviragus.

Bel. You see we'd best woodman, and
Are master of the feast: Cadwal, and I,
Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry, and die.
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs
Will make what's homely, savoury: weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth
Finds the down pillow hard. — Now, peace be here,
Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui. I am thoroughly weary.
Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.
Gui. There is cold meat; 2 the cave: we'll browse on that,
Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.
Bel. Stay; come not in. [Looking in.]
Bel. But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.
Gui. What's the matter, sir?
Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthy paragon! — Behold divineness
No elder than a boy! [Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took. Good troth,
I have stolen nought; nor would not, though I had found.
Gold show'd 2 the floor. Here's money for my meat:
I would have left it on the board, so soon
As I had made my meal, and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth? 3
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt;
As 'tis no better reck'n'd, of those
Who worship dirty gods.
Imo. I see, you are angry.
Bel. Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died, had I not made it.

Imo. To Millford-Haven.

Bel. Whither bound?
Imo. To Italy: he embark'd at Millford;
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fallen in this offence.

1 tired: in f. e. 2 Not in f. e. 3 Rusty.
Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth,
Think as no chirurs, nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd,
'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer.
Ere you depart; and thanks, to stay and eat it. —
Boys, bid him welcome.
Gui. Were you a woman, youth, I should woo hard, but be your gown.—In honesty,
I do obey, for as I do buy.
Arv. I'll make't my comfort,
He is a man: I'll love him as my brother;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him.
After long absence, such is yours.—Most welcome.
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.
Imo. 'Mongst friends!
If brothers? — Aside. Would it had been so, that they Had been my father's sons; then, had my prize
Been less: and so much equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.
Bel. He wrings at some distress.
Gui. Would I could free 't!
Arv. Or I; what'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!
Bel. Hark, boys. [Whispering.
Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue
Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by
That nothing gift of differing' multitudes)
Could not out-peel these twain. Pardon me, gods!
I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter Cloten.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet,
If Pisanius have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor; not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 't is said, a woman's fitness comes by fits. The more I count the man
I dare speak it to myself, (for it is vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber) I mean, the lines of my body are as well-drawn as his; no less young, more strong; not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions:
yet this perverse errant thine thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spurn her him to her father, who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage, but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: out, sword, and to a sore fortune. Put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place, and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.

Bel. It shall be so.
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come in:
Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd,
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.
Gui. Pray, draw near.
Arv. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark, less welcome.
Imo. Thanks, sir.
Arv. I pray, draw near.
[Exeunt, into the Cave.

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter Two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ:
That since the common men are now in action
Against the Pannonians and Dalmatians;
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons, that we do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius pro-consul; and to you, the tribunes,
For this immediate levy he commends
His absolute commission. Long live Caesar!
Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?
2 Sen. Ay.
Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?
1 Sen. With those legions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be suppliant: the words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their despatch.
Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt.
I love this youth; and I have heard you say,
Love's reason without reason: the birr at door,
And a demand who is 't shall die, I'd say,
My father, not this youth.

Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:
Nature hath meal and bran: contempt and grace.
I am not their father; yet who this should be
Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.—
'T is the ninth hour of the morn.

Arv. Brother, farewell.
Imo. I wish yo sport.
Arv. You health.—So please you, sir.

[Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!
Our courtiers say, all's savage but at court:
Experience, O! thou disproov'rt report.
Th' imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish,
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still; heart-sick.—Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drudg.

Gui. I could not stir him:
He said, he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.

Arv. Thus did he answer me; yet said, hereafter
I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field!—
We'll leave you for this time; go in, and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our house-wife.

Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And shall be ever. [Exit Imogen.
This youth, how'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings. [characters;
Gui. But his neat cookery: he cut our roots in
And sauc'd our broth, as Juno had been sick,
And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs' together.

Arv. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking elder, grief, unwine
His perishing root with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning. Come: away!—Who's there?

[Enter Cloten.]

Clo. I cannot find those runagates: that villain
Hath mock'd me.—I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates
Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis
Cloten, the son of the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he.—We are held as outlaws: hence!

Gui. He is but one. You and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exit Belarius and Arviragus.]

Clo. Soft! what are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?

I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Gui. What more slavish did I ne'er, than answering
A slave without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To whom? to thee? What art thou? Have An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
[not I
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say, thou art, Who
Why I should yield to thee.

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothing.

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at: were it toad, or adder, spider,
'T would move me sooner.

Clo. To thy farther fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.

Gui. I am sorry for 't, not seeing
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afeard?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear, the wise:
At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Die the death.

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads.
Yield, rustie, mountaineers.

[Exit Belarius and Arviragus.]

Bel. No company's abroad.

Arv. None in the world. You did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blur'd those lines of favour
Which then he wore: the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute
'T was very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scare made up,
I mean to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for 't effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear. But see, thy brother.

Re-enter Guiderius, with Cloten's Head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse,
There was no money in 't. Not Hereules
Could have knock'd out his brains; for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head
Son to the queen after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they grow;
And set them on Lud's town.

1 them: in folio. 2 Projecting roots. 3 Not in f. e. 4 for defect: in folio. The bold made the change.
Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose, But that he swore to take, our lives? The law Protects not us; then, why should we be tender, To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us; Play no more, judge, all himself, For we do fear the law? What company

Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason He must have some attendants. Though his humour, Was nothing but mutation; ay, and that From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness, could so far have rav'd, To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps, It may be heard at court, that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outrlaws, and in time May make some stronger head; the which he hearing, (As it is like him) might break out, and swear He'd fetch us in, yet is't not probable To come alone, either he so undertaking, Or they so suffering: then, on good ground we fear, If we do fear this body hath a tall More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoever, My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword, Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en His head from him: I'll throw 't in the creek Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten: That's all I reek. [Exit.]

Bel. I fear, 't will be reveng'd.
Would, Polydore, thou hast not done 't, though valour Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. 'Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursued me.—Polydore, I love thee brotherly; but envy much,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenges, That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
And hasten up to our answer.

Bel. Well, 't is done.
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger Where there's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock: You and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Cloten's blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.]

Bel. O thou goddesses, Thou divine Nature, how'st thou thyself thou blazon'st In these two princely boys! They are as gentle As zephyrs and wing bowers, the violet, Not waging his sweet head; and yet as rough, Their royal blood enchain'd, as the rudd'st wind, That by the top doth take the mountain pine, And make him stoop to the vale. 'T is wonder, That an invisible instigant should frame them To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught, Civility not seen from other, valour

That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop

As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange, What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDENS.

Gui. Where's my brother?

I have sent Cloten's elopement down the stream
In embassy to his mother: his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn Music.]

Bel. My ingenious instrument!

Hark, Polydore, it sounds; but what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing; and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys.

Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing in his Arms IMOGEN, as dead.

Bel. Look! here he comes, And brings the dire occasion in his arms.

Of what we blame him for.

Arv. The bird is dead,
That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so well, He saw thee when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O, melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find The coze, to show what coast thy sluggish care? Might easiest harbour in?—Thou bless'd thing! Jove knows what man thou mightst have made; but I, Thou diest a most rare boy, of melancholy.—

How found you him?

Arv. Stark, as you see;
Thus smilling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?

Arv. O' the floor;
His arms thus leagued: I thought he slept, and put My clouted brogues* from off my feet, whose rudeness Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps;
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed:
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not lack The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose; nor The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor The leafy eglantine: whom not to slander, Of sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock* would, With charitable bill (O bill, sore-shaming These rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie Without a monument!) bring thee all this;
Yes, and fur'd moss besides, when flowers are none, To winter-guard' thy corse.

Gui. Pr'ythee, have done;
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
Come on, away; apart upon our knees.
The ground that gave them first has them again:
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exeunt Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Ino. [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?—
I thank you.—By yond' bush?—Pray, how far thither?
'Ods pitikins!—can it be six miles yet?—
I have gone all night:—faith, I'll lie down and sleep.
But, soft! no bedfellow.—O, gods and goddesses!

[Seeing the Body.
These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
That bloody man, the care on't.—I think I dream, For lo! I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures, but 't is not so:
'T was but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eyes
Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,
I tremble still with fear; but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it.
The dream's here still: even when I wake, it
Is without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man!—The garment of Posthumus!
I know the shape of 's leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercury; his Martial thing,
The brawns of Hannibal: but his jovial face
Murther in heaven!—How?—'T is gone.—Pisanio,
All curses madded Hebeua gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irreligious devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord.—To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous!—Darn'd Pisanio!
Hath with his forged letters, damn'd Pisanio—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top!—O, Posthumus! alas!
Where is thy head? where's that? Ah me! where's that?
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left thy head on.—How should this be? Pisanio!
'T is he, and Cloten: madness and lure in them
Have laid this woe here.  O! 't is pregnant, pregnant.
The drug he gave me, which, he said, was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it
Murders to the senses?—That confirms it home:
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's:  O!—
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those
Which chance to find us.  O, my lord, my lord!

Enter Lucius, a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cress'd the sea; attending
You, here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:
They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?
Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits,
That promise noble service, and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,
Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?
Cap. With the next benefit of the wind.

Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present numbers
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to!—Now, sir,
What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision,
(I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence) thus:—
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd

1 to our: in f. e.  2 and girls all must: in f. e.  3 Not in f. e.  4 so: in f. e.  5 Like Spei.
The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me: her son gone,
So needful for this present: it strikes me past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will; but, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purpures to return. Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.

1 Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here:
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome
We'll slip you for a season; but with jealousy
[To Pisano]
You yet depend.

1 Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen by the senate sent.
Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!—
I am amaz'd with matter.

1 Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can afford no less
Than what you hear of: come more, for more you 'r0 ready.
The want is, but to put these powers in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw,
And meet the time, as it seeks us: we fear not
What can from Italy annoy us, but
We grieve at chances here.—Away!
[Exeunt.

Pis. I had no letter from my master, since
I wrote him Imogen was slain. 'Tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; neither know I
What is betid to Cloten, but remain
Perplex'd in all: the heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false, I am honest; not true, to be true:
These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts by time let them be cleared;
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd.[Exit.

SCENE IV.—Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolt
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not mustered)
Among the bands) may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd; and so extort 's that
Which we have done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on with torture.

From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,
(Unless my sins abuse my divination)
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is here,
Without its top? The ruin speaks, that sometime
It was a worthy building.—How? a page!
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead rather;
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face:
He is alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—Young one,
Inform us of thy fortunes: for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded. Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he,
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be worse. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton, and a good one,
That here by mountaineers lies slain.—Alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Tis lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than
Thy master in bleeding. Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ [Aside.] If I do lie, and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon.—Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:
Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner,
Than thou with worth, prefer thee: go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig: and when
With wild-wood leaves and weeds I have straw'd his grave,
And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep, and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—My friends,
The boy hath taught us many duties: let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and pickaxes
A grave: come, arm him.—Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us, and he shall be interv'ed,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisano.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her.
A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life's in danger.—Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
Guil. This is, sir, a doubt, in such a time nothing becoming you, nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely, that when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes, and ears so cloy'd importantly as now, That they will waste their time upon our note, To know from whence we are.

Bel. O! I am known

Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not worn
From my remembrance: and, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves,
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life: aye, hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so,
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines, I'll thither. What thing is't, that I never Died see man die? scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison?
Never bestrid a horse, save one that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel,
Nor, iron, on his heel? I am ashamed to look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go.

If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans.

Arv. So say I. Amen. Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys.
If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead! The time seems long; their blood thins scorn,
Till it fly out, and show them princes born. [Exeunt.]

---

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody Handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd of thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones, if each of you should take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves, For wrying but a little?—O, Flsano! Every good servant does not all commands; No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv'd to put on this: so had you saved The noble Imogen to repent, and struck Me, wretched, more worth your vengeance. But, alack! You must some hence for little faults; that's love,
To have them fall no more: you some permit To second ills with ills, each later worse, And make men dread it, to the doer's thrift.

But Imogen is your own: do your best wills, And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought hither Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'tis enough That, Britons, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace! I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens, Hear patiently my purpose. I'll disrobe me Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my life Is, every breath, a death: and thus unknown, Pited or hated, to the face of peril Myself I'll dedicate, let me make men know More valour in me, than my habits show.

Gods, put the strength of the Leonati in me! To shame the guise of the world, I will begin The fashion, less without, and more within. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Trumpets and Drums. Enter at one Side, Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army; at the other Side, the British Army: Leonatus Posthumus following like a poor Soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again in skirmish, Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him. Alarums on both sides.

Jach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady, The princess of this country, and the air on't Revengingly enfeebles me; or could this ear, A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne! As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn. If that thy gentry, Britain, go before This stout, as he exceeds our lords, the eeds Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit. Alarums. The Battle continues: the British fly; Cymbeline is taken: then enter, to his rescue, Belarius, Guiderius, and Arringans.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the lane is guarded: nothing rests us, but The villainy of our fears.

Gui. Arv. Stand, stand, and fight! Alarums. Enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britons; they rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt: then, enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself; For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such As war were hoodwink'd.

Jach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes Let's re-enforce, or fly. [Exeunt.
SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a Briton Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did;

Though you, it seems, come from the fires.

Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,

But that the heavens fought. The king himself

Of his wings destitute, the army broken,

And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying

Through a strait lane: the enemy full-hearted,

Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work

More plentiful than tools to do 't, struck down

Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling

Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damm'd,

With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living

To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,

An honest one. I warrant; who deserv'd to

So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,

In doing this for 's country: athwart the lane,

He, with two stripings, (lads more like to run

The country base,)* than to commit such slaughter;

With faces fit for masks, or, rather, fairer

Than a fair (preservation of d', or slaves)

Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,

"Our Britain's bards die flying, not our men:

To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards! Stand;

Or we are Romans, and will give you that

Like beasts, which you shun beastly, and may save,

But to look back in frown? stand stand!"—

These three, three thousand confident, in act as many,

(For three performers are the file, when all

The rest do nothing) with this word, "stand, stand!"

Accommodated by the place, more charming

With their own nobleness (which could have turn'd

A distaff to a lance) gilded pale looks,

Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd

But by example (O, a sin in war,

Damm'd in the first beginners!) 'gan to look

The way that they did, and to grin like lions

Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began

A stop the chaser, a retire; anon,

A rout, confusion thick: forthwith they fly,

Chickens, the way which they stop'd eagles; slaves,

The strides they victors made. And now our cowards

(Like fragments in hard voyages) became

The life o' the need: having found the back-door open

Of the unguarded hearts, Heaven! how they wound!—

Some slain before; some dying; some, their friends,

O'er-born if the former wave: ten chas'd by one,

Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:

Those that would die or ere resist are grown

The mortal bugs* o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:

A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys?

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made

Rather to wonder at the things you hear

Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon 't,

And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:

"Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,

Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane."

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. "Lack! to what end?"

1 The rustic game of prison base, or bars, consisting of a race.
2 Terrors.
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement: that’s not my desire,
For Imogen’s dear life, take mine; and though
’Tis not so dear, yet ’tis a life; you coin’d it:
’Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp,
Though light, take pieces for the figure’s sake:
You rather mine, being yours; and so, great powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life.
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I’ll speak to thee in silence.

[He sleeps]

Solemn Music. Enter, as an Apparition, Sicilius Leonatus, Father to Posthumus, an old Man attired like a Warrior; leading in his Hand an ancient Matron, his Wife and Mother to Posthumus, with Music before them: then, after other Music, follow the two Young Leonati, Brothers to Posthumus, with Wounds as they died in the Wars. They circle Posthumus round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fell out, with Juno chide;
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well?
Whose face I never saw;
I died, whilst in the womb he stay’d
Attending nature’s law.

Whose father, then, (as men report,
Thou orphans’ father art)
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vesting smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying ‘mongst his foes,
A thing of pity.

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserve’d the praise of the world,
As great Sicilus’ heir.

1 Bro. When once he was master for man,
In Britain where was he,
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be.

In eyes of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock’d,
To be exil’d, and thrown
From Leonati’s seat, and cast
From her he dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the glee’ and scorn
Of the other’s villainy?

2 Bro. For this from stiller seats we came;
Our parents, and we twin,
That striking in our country’s cause
Fell bravely, and were slain;
Our fealty, and Teanantius’ right,
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like harteinest Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform’d:
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn’d

The graces for his merit due,
Being all to doours turn’d?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out:
No longer exercise,
Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off’ his miseries.

Sici. PEEP through thy marble mansion; help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry,
To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

Jupiter descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an Eagle: he throws a Thunderbolt; the Ghosts fall on their Knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of regions low,
Offend our hearing: hush!—How dare you ghosts
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know;
Sky-planted, haters all, rolling the earth?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence;

Upon your reverent withering banks of flowers:
Be not with mortal accidents opprest;
No care of yours it is; you know, ’tis ours.
Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay’d, delighted. Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift;
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign’d at his birth, and in
Our temple was he married.—Rise, and fade!—
He shall be lord of lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affection turned.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;
And so, away: no farther with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine—

Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder: his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
Stoop’d, as to foot us: his ascension is
More sweet than our bless’d fields. His royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak,
As when his god is pleas’d.

All. Thanks, Jupiter.

Sici. The marble pavement close; he is enter’d
His radiant seat.—Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest. [Ghosts vanish
Post. [Waking] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot
A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother, and two brothers. But (O scorn!)
Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born, And so I am awake.—Poor wretches, that depend
On greatness’ favour, dream as I have done;
Wake, and find nothing:—But, alas, I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are swept in favours; so am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not why.

[Finding the Tablet.

What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O, rare one!
Be not, as in our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

[Reads.] When as a lion’s whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopp'd branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen Tongue, and brain not; either both, or nothing: Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such As sense cannot utter. Be what it is, The action of my life is like it, which I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Jailors.
Jail. Come, sir, are you ready for death?
Post. Over-roasted, rather; ready long ago.
Jail. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.
Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.
Jail. A heavy reckoning for you, sir; but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments; fear no more tavern bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; some that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty: the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness. 'O! of this contradiction you shall now be quit.—O, the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge.—Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquittance follows.
Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.
Jail. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache; but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, he would change places with his officer; for, look, sir, you know not which way you shall go.
Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.
Jail. Your death has eyes in 's head, then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after-inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think; you'll never return to tell one.
Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink, and will not use them.
Jail. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure, hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles: bring your prisoner to the king.
Post. Thou bring'st good news. I am called to be made free.
Jail. I'll be hang'd, then.
Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a jailor; no bolts for the dead. [Exeunt Posthumus and Messenger.

Jail. Unless a man would marry a gallowes, and get young giblets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too, that die against their wills: so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good: O, there were desolation of jailors, and gallowes! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preference in't. [Exeunt.
(When she had fitted you with her craft) to work
Her son into th' adoption of the crown:
But failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effect'd; so,
Despairing died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
Lady. We did so, please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious,
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou may'st say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!
Enter LUCIUS, IACHINO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman
Prisoners, guarded; POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.
Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute: that
The Britons have rans' d out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit,
That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter
Of you their captives, which ourself have granted.
So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day
With yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficest,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer.
Augustus lives to think on't; and so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat: my boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like. Let his virtue join
With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness
Cannot deny: he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have serv'd a Roman. Save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:
His favour is familiar to me.—Boy,
Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own.—I know not why, nor wherefore,
To say, live, boy: ne'er thank thy master; live,
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it:
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad,
And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no; alack!
There's other work in hand.—I see a thing
Bitter to me as death.—Your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me: briefly die their joys;
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.—
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy? I love thee more and more: think more and more What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on?

Imo. Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Cym. He is a Roman; no more kin to me,
Than I to your highness, who, being born your vassal,
A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for: besides, that hook of wiving,
Fairness, which strikes the eye:-----
Cym. I stand on fire.

Come to the matter. Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly.—This Posthumus,
(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover) took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom we prais'd, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began
His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description
Provd' us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.
Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.
He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: whereat, I, wretch,
Made scruple of his praise; and wager'd with him
Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attend
In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By hers and mine adversity. He, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phæbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of his car.
Away to Britain
Post in this design: well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gan in your duller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice prevails'd,
That I return'd with similar proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,
(O cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,
Methinks, I see him now,—

Post. Ay, so thou dost,
[Coming forward.

Italian fiend!—Ah me! most eredulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That duce to all the villains past, in being,
To come!—O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justice! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I
That all the abhorred things of the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter—villain-like, I lie;
That cans'd a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do't.—The temple
Of virtue was she;—yea, and she herself
Spit, and throw stones, cast mine upon me; set
The dogs o' the street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus, and
Be villainy less than 't was!—O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord! hear, hear!—
Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.
Pis. O, gentlemen! help Mine, and your mistress.—O, my lord Posthumus!
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now.—Help, help!—
Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?
Post. How come these staggerers on me?
Pis. Wake, my mistress! Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.
Pis. How fares my mistress?
Imo. O! get thee from my sight:
Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen!
Pis. Lady,
The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing: I had it from the queen.
Cym. New matter still?

Car. It poison'd me.

Imo. I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must apprize thee honest: if Pisanio
Have said she, given his mistress that confession
Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Car. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life; but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions. Have you ta'en of it?
Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. There was our error.

Gui. This is, sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?
Think, that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again. [Embracing Posthumus.

Pis. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym. How now! my flesh, my child?
What! mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. Your blessing, sir. [Kneeling.

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
You had a motive for't. [To Guiderius and ArbACES.

Cym. My tears that fall,
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord.

Cym. O! she was naught; and long of her it was,
That we meet here so strangely: but her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord, Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and swore,
If I discovered not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish’d:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer’d
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes
(For such, and so they are) these twenty years
Have I train’d up; those arts they have, as I Could put into them: my breeding was, sir, as
Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov’d her to’t;
Having receiv’d the punishment before,
For that which I did then: beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason. Their dear loss,
The more of you I was felt, the more it shap’d
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweetest companions in the world.—
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.
Cym. Thou weep’st, and speak’st.
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tellst. I lost my children:
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.
Bel. Be pleas’d a while.—
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours is true Guiderius:
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son: he, sir, was lapp’d
In a most princely mantle wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for my probation,
I can with ease produce.
Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star:
It was a mark of wonder.
Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp,
It was wise nature’s end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.
Cym. O! what am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne’er mother
Rejoice’d deliverance more.—Bless’d pray you, I
That after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now.—O Imogen!
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.
Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by ‘t.—O, my gentle brothers!
Have we thus met? O! never say hereafter,
But I am truest speaker: you call’d me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.
Cym. Did you e’er meet?
Arv. Ay, my good lord.
Gui. And at first meeting lov’d;
Continued so, until we thought to be
Cor. By the queen’s dram she swallowed.
Cym. O rare instinct
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment
Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where? how liv’d you?
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met them?
Why fled you from the court, and whither? These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded,
And all the other by-dependencies,
From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor place,
Will serve our long inter’gatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting
Each object with a joy: the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let’s quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—
Thou art my brother: so we’ll hold thee ever.

Imo. You are my father, too; and did relieve me,
To see this gracious season.
Cym. All o’erjoy’d,
Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.
Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.
Luc. Happy be you!
Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well become this place, and grac’d
The thankings of a king.
Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeing: ’t was a fitment for
The purpose I then follow’d.—That I was he,
Speak, Iachino: I had you down, and might
Have made you finish.
Iach. I am down again; [Kneeling.
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you,
Which I so often owe; but your ring first,
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.
Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
And deal with others better.
Cym. We’ll learn our freeness of a son-in-law:
Pardon’s the word to all.
Arr. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy’d are we, that you are.
Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, me thought,
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back’d,
Appeard to me, with other spirtually shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak’d, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it: let him show
His skill in the construction.
Luc. Philarmonus!
Sooth. Here, my good lord. [Coming forward.
Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.
Sooth. [Reads.] “When as a lion’s whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which being dead many years shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freely grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.”

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion’s whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

[To Cymbeline.
Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp’d about
With this most tender air.
Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee; and thy lofty branches point
Thy sons forth; who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv’d,
To the majestic cedar join’d, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.
Cym. Well, My peace we will begin.—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and hers
Have laid most heavy hand.
Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision,
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish’d; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen’d herself, and in the beams o’ the sun
So vanish’d: which foreshow’d our princely eagle,
Th’ imperial Cæsar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.
Cym. [Exeunt.

Laud we the gods;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our bless’d altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward. Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Læt’s town march,
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we’ll ratify; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there!—Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash’d, with such a peace.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Antiochus, King of Antioch.
Pericles, Prince of Tyre.
Helicanus, a two Lords of Tyre.
Simonides, King of Pentapolis.
Cleon, Governor of Tharsus.
Lydimachus, Governor of Miylene.
Cerimon, a Lord of Ephesus.
Thaliraud, a Lord of Antioch.
Philemon, Servant to Cerimon.
Leonine, Servant to Dionyza.

Lords, Ladies, Knights, Gentlemen, Sailors, Pirates, Fishermen, Messengers, &c.

SCENE, dispersedly in various Countries.

ACT I.

Enter Gower.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come;
Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear, and please your eyes.

It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eyes, and holy ales,\(^1\)
And lords and ladies in their lives

Have read it for restoratives:
The purpose\(^2\) is to make men glorious;

Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.

If you, born in these latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
And that to hear an old man sing,
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might
Waste it for you, like taper-light.—

This Antioch: then: Antiochus the great
Built up this city for his chiefest seat,
The finest in all Syria:

I tell you what my authors say:
This king unto him took a feere,\(^3\)
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace;

With whom the father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke.

Bad child, worse father, to entice his own
To evil, should be done by none.

By\(^4\) custom what they did begin
Was with long use account no sin.

The beauty of this sinful dame
Made many princes thither frame,

To seek her as a bed-follow,

In marriage pleasures play-fellow:

Which to prevent he made a law,

To keep her still and men in awe,
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:

So, for her many a wight did die,
As yond' grim looks\(^5\) do testify.

What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.

SCENE I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antiochus, Pericles, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and with a soul
Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard in this enterprise. [Music.

Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
For the embracements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, (till Lucina reign'd)
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See, where she comes, apparel'd like the spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men!
Her face, the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever rase,\(^6\) and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.

Ye gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflam'd desire in my breast,
To taste the fruit of your celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless\(^7\) happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch’d;
For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
Yond’ sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee with speechless tongues, and semblance pale,
That, without covering, save yond’ field of stars,
They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid’s war;
And with dead cheeks advise like to desist,
For going on death’s net, whom none resist.

'Tis but a Riddle, I think thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must:
For death remember’d should be like a mirror,
Who tells us, life’s but breath; to trust it, error.
I’ll make my will, then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,
Gripe at earthly joys, as erst they did:
So, I bequeath a happy peace to you,
And all good men, as every prince should do:
My riches to the earth from whence they came,
But my unspotted fire of love to you.

Therefore, ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow.

Ant. Scorning advice, read the conclusion then;
Which read and not expounded, ’t is decreed,
As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.

Dought. Of all, ’say’d yet, may’st thou prove prosperous!
Of all, ’say’d yet, I wish thee happiness.

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness, and courage.

The Riddle.

I am no viper, yet I fled.
On mother’s flesh, which did me breed;
I sought a husband, in which labour,
I found that kindness in a father:
He’s father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physic is the last: but, O! you powers,
That give heaven countless eyes to view men’s acts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?
Fair glass of light, I lov’d you, and could still,
Were not this glorious casket stor’d with ill;
But I must tell you,—now, my thoughts revolt,
For he’s no man on whom perfections wait,
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You’re a fair viol, and your sense the strings,
Who, finger’d to make man his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down and all the gods to hearken:
But being play’d upon before your time,
Hell only danceth to so harsh a chime.

Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,
For that’s an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time’s expir’d:
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,
For love to hear the sins they love to act;
’T would bribe yourself too near for me to tell it.

Ant. Has a book of all that monarchs do,
He’s more secure to keep it shut, than shown;
For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Bows dust in others’ eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear:
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts
Copp’d hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is throng’d
By man’s oppression; and the poor worm doth die for ’t.
Kings are earth’s gods; in vice their law’s their will,
And if Jove strav, who dares say Jove doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit,
What being more known grows worse, to smother it,
All love, and give them their first shape,
Then, give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. [Aside.] Heaven, that I had thy head! he has found the meaning;
But I will gloze with him. [To him.] Young prince of Tyre,
Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of your days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise
Forty days longer we do respite you;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows, we’ll joy in such a son:
And until then your entertainment shall be,
As doth befit our honour, and your worth.

[Exeunt Antiochus, his Daughter, and Attendants.
Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight.
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain, you were not so bad,
As with foul inexact to abuse your soul;
Where now you’re both a father and a son,
By your untimely clasings with your child,
(Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father)
And she an eater of her mother’s flesh,
By the defiling of her parent’s bed,
And both like serpents are, who though they feed
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the light:
One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
Murder’s as near to lust, as flame to smoke.
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
And the targets, to put off the shame:
Then, lest my life be cropp’d to keep you clear,
By flight I’ll shun the danger which I fear. [Exit.

Re-enter Antiochus.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for the which we
To have his head.
He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Nor tell the world, Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner:
And therefore instantly this prince must die;
For by his fall my honour must keep high
Who attends us there?

Enter Thal.ard.

Thal. Doth your highness call?

Ant. Thal.ard,
You’re of our chamber, and our mind partakes
Her private actions to your secrecy;
And for your faithfulness we will advance you,
Thal.ard, behold, here’s poison, and here’s gold;
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT I.

We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him:
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?
Thal. My lord, 'Tis done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough.—
Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.
Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled.
[Exit Messenger.

Ant. Wilt live, fly after: and, as an arrow, shot
From a well-experienced archer; hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so ne'er return,
Unless thou say Prince Pericles is dead.
Thal. My lord, if I
Can get him once within my piston's length,
I'll make him sure: so, farewell to your highness. [Exit.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu.—Till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Tyre. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Pericles, Helicanus, and other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us: why should this change of thoughts?
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
By me so us'd a guest is, not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or pleasant night,
The touch of care should sleep, can breed me quiet.
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them,
And danger, which I fear'd, is, at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here;
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then, it is thus: that passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done:
And so with me:—the great Antiochus
('Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make a mark in his act)
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence:
Nor boots it me to say, I honour,
If he suspect I may disdain him:
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known.
With hostile forces he'll o'er-spread the land,
And with the ostentation of war will look so huge;
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself,
(Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
Which for the spring of the birds grow by and defend them.
Makes both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And punish that before, that he would punish.
1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast.
2 Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,
Peaceful and comfortable.
Hel. Peace, peace! and give experience tongue.
They do abuse the king, that flatter him:
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that blast^ gives heat^ and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err:

When signior Booth, here, does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Princes, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.
Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'er-look
What shipping, and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords.] Helicanus, thou
Hast moved us: what seest thou in our looks?
Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.
Per. If there be such a dart in prince's frown,
How burn'st thou tongue move anger to our face?
Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence
They have their nourishment?
Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.
Hel. I have ground the axe myself;
Do you but strike the blow.
Per. Rise, pr'ythee rise.
Sit down: thou art no flatterer:
I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid,
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid.
Fit counsellor, and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?
Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.
Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,
That ministers a potion unto me.
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself,
Attend me, then: I went to Antioch,
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of death
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Are arms to princes, and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest (hark in thine ear) as black as incest:
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father
Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: but thou know'st this,
'Tis time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grow in me, I hither fled.
Under the covering of a fast night,
Who seem'd my good protector; and being here,
Betheought me what was past, what might succeed.
I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years.
And should he doubt it, (as no doubt he doth)
That I should open to the listening air,
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed,
To keep his bed of blackness unlay'd ope,
To stop that doubt he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him;
When all, for mine, if I may call it, offence,
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:
Which love to all, of whom thyself art one,
Who now reproach me for it—

Hel. Alas, sir!
Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,
Musing into my mind, a thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest ere it came;
And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.
Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak;
Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,
Who either by public war, or private treason,
Will take away your life.
Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any; if to me,
Day serves not more faithful than I'll be.
Per. Do I not doubt thy faith?
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?
Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth.
From whence we had our being and our birth.
Per. Tyre, I now look from thee, then; and to Tharsus
I intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee,
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
The care I had, and have, of subjects' good,
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;
Who shuns not to break one, will sure break both.
But in our orbs we live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince;
Thou show'st a subject's shine, I a true prince.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Tyre. An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the court. Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do not, I am sure to be hang'd at home: 'tis dangerous.—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do I see he had some reason for it; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.

Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter Helianus, Escanes, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
Farther to question me of your king's departure:
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. [Aside.] How! the king gone?
Hel. If farther yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.

Being at Antioch—

Thal. [Aside.] What from Antioch?
Hel. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know not)
Took some displeasure at him: at least, he judg'd so;
And doubting lest that he had err'd or sin'd,
To show his sorrow he'd correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. [Aside.] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
But since he's gone, the king's seas must please:
He 'scape'st the land, to perish at the sea.——

Thal. I'll present myself.—[To them.] Peace to the lords of Tyre.

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come,
With message unto princely Pericles:
But since my landing I have understood,
Your lord hath betray'd himself to unknown travels,
My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to us:
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,
As friends to Antioch we may feast in Tyre. [Exeunt.]

---

SCENE IV.—Tharsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Cleon, Dionyza, and Attendants.

* Cle.* My Dionyza, shall we rest us here;
And by relating tales of other's griefs,
See if 't will teach us to forget our own?

* Dio.* That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;
For who digs hills because they do aspire,
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.
O my distressed lord! even such our griefs;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes,
But like to groves, being top'd, they higher rise.

* Cle.* O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger, till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder;
That if heaven slumber, while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And, wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

* Dio.* I'll do my best, sir.

* Cle.* This Tharsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city, on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets,
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kiss'd the clouds,
And strangers ne'er beheld, but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by;
Their tables were sordid full to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

* Dio.* O! 't is too true.

* Cle.* But see what heaven can do! By this our change,
These mouths, whom but of late, earth, sea, and air,
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are deal'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise:
Those palates, who not yet two summers younger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who to nourish up their babes
Thought nought so curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots, who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall,
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

* Dio.* Our checks and hollow eyes do witness it.

* Cle.* O! let these cities, that o' plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears:
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

* Lord.* Where's the lord governor?

* Cle.* Here.

Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in haste,
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

* Lord.* We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore,
A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

* Cle.* I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes, but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours. Some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speakest like him's untutored to repeat;
Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.

But bring they what they will, and what they can,
What need we fear?

The ground's the lowest, and we are half way there.

Go, tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,
And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter Pericles, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be, like a beacon fire'd, to amaze your eyes.

ACT II.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to inest bring;
A better prince, and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.

Be quiet, then; as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.

I'll show you those in trouble's reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.

The good in conversation
(To whom I give my benizone)
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can:
And to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb show.

Enter at one door Pericles, talking with Cleon; all
The Train with them. Enter at another door, a Gentleman, with a Letter to Pericles: Pericles shows the Letter to Cleon; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt Pericles, Cleon, &c. severally.

Gow. Good Helicane hath stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone,
From others' labours; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive;
And, to fulfill his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin,
And hid intent, to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He knowing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease,
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above, and deeps below,
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets;
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load:
And these our ships you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse, was stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are store'd with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.
All. The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, arise:
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
Till when, (the which, I hope, shall ne'er be seen)
Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a while,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile. [Exeunt.

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter Pericles, wit.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me breath
Nothing to think on, but ensuing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers,
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having throwen him from your watery grave,
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho! Fitch.
2 Fish. Ho! come, and bring away the nets.
1 Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say!
3 Fish. What say you, master?
1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now. Come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wannah.
3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men, that were cast away before us even now.
1 Fish. Alas, poor souls! it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when,
well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.
3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounced and tumbled? they say, they are half fish, half flesh: a plague on them! they ne'er come, but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why as men do a-land: the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; a' plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallowed the whoot parish, church, steeple, bells and all.

Per. A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, man?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind—

Per. Simonides?

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that the whole of her honor.

Per. How from the 'funny' subject of the sea

These fishes tell the inroads of men;
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve, or men detect!—
Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2 Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? if it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and no body look after it.

Per. Ye may see, the sea hath cast me upon your coast—

2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea, to cast thee in our way.

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,
In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball
For them to play upon, entreats you play him;
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What have I been I have forgot to know,
But what I am wont teaches me to think on;
A man thron'd up with cold: my veins are chill,
And have no more of life, than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth-a? Now, gods forbid it! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moro'er puddings and flap-jacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave? Then I'll turn crave too, and so I shall escape whippinge.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped, then?

2 Fish. O! not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exeunt Two of the Fishermen.

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

1 Fish. Hark you, sir; do you know where you are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, sir, and he deserves to be so called, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey: and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to joust and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O, sir! things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for. His wife's soul—

Re-enter the Two Fishermen, drawing up a Net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 't will hardly come out. Ha! bots on t' ; it is come at last, and 't is turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it. Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all crosses Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself:
And though it was mine own, part of mine heritage,
Which my dear father did bequeath to me,
With this strict charge (even as he left his life)
Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield
"Wixt me and death," (2) and pointed to this brace
"For that it sav'd me, keep it; in like necessity,
The which the gods protect thee from, it may defend thee."
It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it,
Till the rough seas, that spare not any man,
Took it in rage, though calm'd, have given 't again.
I thank thee for 't: my shipwreck now's no ill,
Since I have here my father's gift in 's will.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,
For it was sometime target to a king;
I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly,
And for his sake I wish the having of it:
And that you'll guide me to your sovereign's court,
Where with it I may appear a gentleman:
And that ever my low fortunes better,
I'll pay your bounties; till then, rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why, will thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1 Fish. Why, do ye take it; and the gods give thee good on't!

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 't was we that made up this garment through the rough seas of the waters: there are certain conolemens, certain vails, I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe it, I will.

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel;
And spite of all the rupture of the sea,
This jewel holds his biding on my arm:
Unto thy value will I mount myself
Upon a course, whose delightful steps

1 funny: in old copies. Stevens made the change. 2 Pancakes, or fritters. 3 rupiture: in old copies. 4 building: in old copies. 5 Copy by hand.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT II.

Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread—
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases:"

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair, and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will!
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Platform leading to the Lines. A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Ladies, Lords, &c.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?
1 Lord. They are, my liege;
And stay your coming to present themselves.
Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at. [Exit a Lord.

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit 's less.
Sim. 'T is fit it should be so; for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renown, if not respected.
'T is now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight in his device.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight: he passes over the Stage, and his Squire presents his Shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop, reaching at the sun;
The word, Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you. [The Second Knight passes over.

Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight, that's conquer'd by a lady:
The motto thus, in Spanish, Pin per dulsura que per fierza.

The third Knight passes over.

Sim. And what the third?

Thai. The third of Antioch;
And his device, a wreath of chivalry:
The word, Me pompe provexit apex.

The fourth Knight passes over.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch, that's turned upside down;
The word, Quod me alt, me extinguat.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,
Which can as well inflame, as it can kill.

The fifth Knight passes over.

Thai. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds,
Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried;
The motto thus, Stic spectanda fila.

The sixth Knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself
With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is
A wither'd branch, that's only green at top:
The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral:
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better, than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For by his rusty outside he appears
To have pub'lt d'more the whipstock; 2 than the lance.

2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes
To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw
Into the gallery. [Exit.

[Great Shouts, and all cry. The mean knight!

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Ladies, Lords, Knights, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights,
To say you are welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than 's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes, and my guests.

Thai. But you, [To Per.] my knight and guest; To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'T is more by fortune, lady, than my merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours:
And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o' the feast,
(For, daughter, so you are) here take your place:
Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.

Sim. Your presence glads our days: honour we love,
For who hates honour hates the gods above,

Per. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, sir; we are gentlemen, That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes,
Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sit, sit,
By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,
These cates resist me, he not thought upon.

Thai. By Juno, that is queen
Of marriage, all the viands that I eat
Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat.
Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman;
He has done no more than other knights have done,
He has broken a staff, or so; so, let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. Yond' king's to me like to my father's picture, Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence.
None that beheld him, but like lesser lights
Did vail their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son, like a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.
Sim. What! are you merry, knights?
1 Knight. Who can be other, in this royal presence?
Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim.
(As he do love, fill to your mistress' lips)
We drink this health to you.
Knights. We thank your grace.
Sim. Yet pause a while;
Yond' knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court,
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?
Thai. What is it
To me, my father?
Sim. O! attend, my daughter!
Princes, in this, should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them; and princes, not doing so,
Are like to gnats, which make a sound, but kill'd
Are wonder'd at. Therefore,
To make his entrance more sweet, here say,
We drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.
Thai. Alas, my father! it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold:
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.
Sim. How! Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.
Thai. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.
Sim. And farther tell him, we desire to know,
Of whence he is, his name, and parentage.
Thai. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.
Per. I thank him.
Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.
Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.
Thai. And, farther, he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.
Per. A gentleman of Tyre [my name, Pericles,
My education been in arts and arms]—
Who looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reel'd of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.
Thai. He thanks your grace; names himself Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas
Bereft of old and men, cast on the shore.
Sim. Now by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time which looks for other revels.
Even in your armours, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse, with saying, this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,
Since they love men in arms, as well as beds.

[The Knights dance.]

So, this was well ask'd, 't was so well perform'd.
Come, sir; here's a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip,
And that their measures are as excellent.
Per. In those that practise them, they are, my lord.
Sim. O! that's as much, as you would be denied
[The Knights and Ladies dance.]

Of your fair courtesy—Uncles, uncles:
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well, [duet
But you the best. [To Pericles.] Pages and lights, to con-

These knights unto their several lodgings!—Yours, sir,
We have given order to be next our own.
Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.
Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I gave you to value at:
Therefore, each one be like to his best;
To-morrow all for speed in doing their best. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter Helicanus and Escanes.

Hel. No, Escanes; know this of me,
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free:
For which the most high gods, not minding longer
To withhold the vengeance, that they had in store,
Due to this infamous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated, and his daughter with him,
In a chariot of inestimable value,
A fire from heaven came, and shrivell'd up
Those bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,
That all those eyes ador'd them, ere they fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.
Esca. 'T was very strange.
Hel. And yet but just; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.
Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter Three Lords.

1 Lord. See! not a man, in private conference
Or council, has respect with him but he.
2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.
3 Lord. And even he, who will not second it.
1 Lord. Follow me, then.—Lord Helianes, a word.
Hel. With me? and welcome.—Happy day, my lords.
1 Lord. Know, that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.
Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince
you love,
1 Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helicane;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolved, he lives to govern us,
Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves to us our free election.
2 Lord. Whose death's, indeed, the strongest in our consue:
And knowing this kingdom is without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a roof,
Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,
That best knows how to rule, and how to reign,
We thus submit unto, our sovereign.
All. Live, noble Helicane!
Hel. Try honour's cause; forbear your suffrages:
If that you love prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.
A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expir'd he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles; like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous worth;
Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.
1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield:
And since lord Helicane enjoineth us,
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT III.

And cricket sings at the oven's mouth,
Are the briers for their drouth,
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded.—Be attend,
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly echo;
What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speech.

[Enter Gow.]

Gow. Now sleep yslaked hath the rout;
No din but mores the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage feast.
The cat with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;

[To him.] O! seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman.
That never aimed so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.
Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art
A villain.
Per. By the gods, I have not,
Never did thought of mine levy offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might gain her love, or your displeasure.
Sim. Traitor, thou liest.
Per. Traitor!
Sim. Ay, traitor,
Per. Even in his throat, unless it be the king;
That calls me traitor, I return the lie.
Sim. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.
Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.
Sim. No!—
Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.
[Enter Thaisa.]
Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you?
That. Why, sir, if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad?
Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?—
[Aside.] I am glad on't with all my heart.
To her. I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections
Upon a stranger? [Aside.] Who, for aught I know,
May be, (nor can I think the contrary)
As great in blood as I myself.
[To her.] Therefore, hear you, mistress; either frame
Your will to mine; and you, sir, hear you,
Either be rul'd by me, or I will make you—
Man and wife.—Nay, come; your hands,
And lips must seal it too;
And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;
And for farther grief,—God give you joy!—
What, are you both pleas'd?
Thai.
Yes, if you love me, sir.
Per. Even as my life, my blood that fosters it.
Sim. What! are you both agreed?
Both. Yes, if I please your majesty.
Sim. It pleaseth me so well, I'll see you wed;
Then, with what haste you can, get you to bed.
[Exeunt.]

ACT III.
Enter Pericles and Simonides at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a Letter: Pericles shows it to Simonides; the Lords kneel to Pericles. Then, enter Thaisa with child, and Lychorida: Simonides shows his Daughter the Letter; she rejoices: she and Pericles take leave of her Father, and all depart.

Gost. By many a dorn and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing coignes,
Which the world together joins,
Is made, with all due diligence.
That horse, and sail, and high expence,
Can stand the quest. At last from Tyr.
(Fame answering the most strange inquire.)

To the court of king Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenour these:—
Antiochus and his daughter dead;
The men of Tyrus on the head
Of Helicanus would set
The crown of Tyrus, but he will none:
The mutiny he there hastes 'v oppress;
Says to them, if king Pericles
Come not hborne in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Yarvished the regions round,
And every one with claps 'gan sound,
"Our heir apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?"
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyr:
His queen, with child, makes her desire
(Which who shall cross?) along to go.
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Then, vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Hath their keel cut; but fortune's mood
Varies again: the grizzly north
Disgorges such a tempest forth.
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and well-a-near,
Does fall in travail with her fear:
And what ensues in this self storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey,
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The seas-lost Pericles appears to speak. [Exit.

SCENE I.

Enter Pericles, on shipboard.

Per. Thou God of this great vast, rebuke these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou, that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep. O! still
Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; duly1 quench
Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes!—O! how, Lychorida,
How does my queen?—Thou storm, venomously
Wilt thou spit all thyself?—The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard.—Lychorida!—Lucina, O!

Divinest patroness and midwife, gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travail!—Now, Lychorida—
And, Enter! Lychorida, with a new infant.

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die as I
Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How! how, Lychorida!

Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen,
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goody gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We, here below,
Recall not what we give, and therein may
Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life;
For a more blust'rous birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy condition;
For thou'rt the rudest welcome to this world,
That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows!
Thou hast as chiding a nativity,
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb: even at the first,
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here.—Now the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon it!

Enter Two Sailors.

1 Sail. What, courage, sir! God save you.

Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the flaw;
It hath done to me the worst: yet, for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh new sea-farer,
I would it would be quiet.

1 Sail. Slack the bowlines there; thou wilt not,
with thou?—Blow, and split thyself.

2 Sail. But sea-room, an thee burn and cloudy illow kiss the moon, I care not.

1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard; the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleaned of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in earnest.2 Therefore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet.—Most wretched queen!

Lyc. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear;
No light, no fire; the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze;
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And ayre-remaining lamps, the belching whale,
And humming wave must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells.—O Lychorida!
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander
Bring me the satin coffer3: lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

[Exit Lychorida.

2 Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitumen ready.

[Exit.
Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this?

2 Gent. We are near Tharsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner, Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

2 Gent. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O! make for Tharsus.—There will I visit Cleon, for the babe Cannot hold out to Tyre: there I'll leave it At careful nursing.—Go thy ways, good mariner: I'll bring the body presently!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Epheesus. A Room in Cerimon's House.

Enter Cerimon, a Servant, and some Persons who have been Shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho! Enter Philemon.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men.

Phil. I have been in many; but such a night as this, Till now I ne'er endur'd.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return: There's nothing can be minister'd to nature, That can redeem these. Give this to the sempstress; And tell me how it works. [To PHILEMON.]

[Exeunt PHILEMON, SERVANT, and the rest. Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good morrow, sir.

2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Why do you stir so early?

1 Gent. Sir, Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea, Shook, as the earth did quake; The very principals did seem to rend; And all to topple; Pure surprise and fear Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. This is the cause we trouble you so early;
'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O! I say well.

1 Gent. But I must marvel that your lordship, having Rich tire about you, should at these early hours Shake off the golden slumber of repose,
'Tis most strange; Nature should be so conversant with pain, Being thereto not compell'd!

Cer. I hold it ever, Virtue and cunning' were endowments greater Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs May the two latter darken and expel; But immortality attends the former. Making a man a god: 'Tis known; I ever Have studied physic, through which secret art, By turning o'er authorities, I have (Together with my practice) made familiar To me and to my aid, the best infusions That dwell in vegetables, in metals, stones; And can speak of the disturbances that nature Works, and of her curses; which doth give me A more content, in course of true delight, Than to be thirsty after tottering honours; Or tie my treasure up in silken bags To please the fool and death.

2 Gent. Your Excellency has through Ephesus pour'd forth Your charity, and hundreds call themselves Your creatures, who by you have been restore'd: And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even Your pure, still open, hath built lord Cerimon

Such strong renown as time shall never—

Enter Two Servants with a Chest.

Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

Serv. Sir, even now Did the sea toss upon our shores this chest: 'T is of some wreck.

Cer. Set it down; let's look upon it.

2 Gent. 'T is like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be, 'T is wondrous heavy. Wrench it with straight hands: If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold, 'T is a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'T is so, my lord.

Cer. How close 't is caulk'd and bitum'd, Did the sea cast it up?

Serv. I never saw so huge a bilow, sir, As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Soft, soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it.

O, you most potent gods! what's here? a corse?

1 Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; bald'rd and en-

With full bags of spices! A passport too:
Apollo, perfect me the characters! [Unfolds a Scroll. A Here I give to understand. [Reads.

(If er' this coffin drive a land) I, king Pericles, have lost
This queen, worth all our mundane cost. Who finds her, give her burning; She was the daughter of a king: Besides this treasure for a fee. The gods requite his charity!

If thou live'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart This chanced to-night.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night; For look, how fresh she looks.—They were too rough, That threw her in the sea. Make fire within: Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet, Death may usurp on nature many hours, And yet the fire of life kindle again The overpressed spirits. I heard Of an Egyptian, that had nine hours life dead, Who was by good appliance recovered. Enter a Servant, with Boxes, Napkins, and Fire. Well said, well said; the fire and the clothes.—
The rough and woful music that we have, Cause it to sound, 'be loud you. The vial once more — how thou stir'st, thou block! —
The music there!—I pray you, give her air.

Gentlemen, This queen will live; nature awakes a warm Breath out of her; she hath not been entrancc'd Above five hours. See, how she 'gins to blow Into life's flower again!

1 Gent. The heavens Through you increase our wonder, and set up Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive! behold, Her eyelids: cases to those heavenly jewels Which Pericles hath lost; — cases can Begin to part their fringes of bright gold: The diamonds of a most praised water, Do appear to make the world twice rich. Live, And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
Rare as you seem to be! [She moves.]

That. O dear Diana! Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?

2 Gent. Is not this strange? Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours! Load me your hands; to the next chamber bear her. Get linen; now this matter must be look'd to, For her release is mortal. Come, come; And Escolapius guide us.

[Exeunt, carrying Thyais out.]

SCENE III.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter Pericles, Cleon, Dionysius, Lychoris, and Marina.

Per. Most honoured Cleon, I must needs be gone: My twelve months are expired, and Tyros stands In a litigious peace. You, and your lady, Take from my heart all thankfulness; the gods Make up the rest upon you!

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you Yet glances full wanderingly on us. [mortally.]

Dion. O, your sweet queen! That the strict fates had pleas'd you, had brought her To have bless'd mine eyes! [hither.

Per. We cannot but obey The powers above us. Could I rage and roar As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end Must be as 't is. My gentle babe Marina (whom, For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so here) I charge your charity withal, and leave her The infant of your care; beseeching you To give her princely training, that she may Be manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think Your grace, that fed my country with your corn, (For which the people's prayers still fall upon you) Must in your child be thought on. If neglect Should therein make me vile, the common body, By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty; But if to that my nature need a spur, The gods revenge it upon me and mine, To the end of generation.

ACT IV.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre, Welcome'd and settled to his own desire: His woful queen we leave at Ephesus Unto Diana there a votress. Now to Marina bend your mind, Whom our fast-growing scene must find At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd In music, letters; who hath gain'd Of education all that can acquire Which makes her both the heart, and place Of general wonder. But alack! That monster envy, oft the wrack Of earnest praise, Marina's life Seeks to take off by treason's knife. And in this kind hath our Cleon One daughter, and a wench full grown, Even ripe for marriage rite; this maid Hight Philoctene; and it is said For certain in our story, she

Per. I believe you; Your honour and your goodness teach me to 't, Without your vows. Till she be married, madam, By bright Diana, whom we honour all, Unciss'd shall she the link of mine rejoin. Though I show will in 't. So I take my leave, Good madam, make me bless'd in your care In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself, Who shall not be more dear to my respect, Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.

Cle. We'll bring your grace even to the edge of the shore; Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune, And The gentlest winds of heaven:

Per. I will embrace Your offer. Come, dearest madame, O! no tears, Lychorida, no tears: Look to your little mistress, on whose grace You may depend hereafter.—Come, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's House.

Enter Cerimon and Thaisa.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels, Lay with you in your coffers, which are At your command. Know you the character? Thai. It is my lord's. That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember, Even on my yearning time; but whether there Delivered or no, by the holy gods, I cannot rightly say. But since king Pericles, My wedded lord, I never shall see again, A vestal livery will I take me to, And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as you speak, Diana's temple is not distant far, Where you may abide till your date expire. Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all; Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.] Exeunt.
The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead:
And cursed Dionyzah hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest! for this blow. The unevent
I do commend to your content:
Only I carried winged time
Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;
Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way.—
Dionyzah doth appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.

SCENE I.—Tharsus. An open Place near the Seas.

Enter Dionyza and Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do't:
'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing if the world so soon,
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,
Which is but cold, inflaming love in thy bosom,
Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, and be
A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I'll do't: but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here
She comes weeping for her old nurse's death.

Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter Marina, with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No, I will not rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy grave with flowers: the yellows, blues,
The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall, as a carpet, hang upon thy grave,
While summer days do last. Ah me, poor maid!
Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirring me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you weep alone?
How chance your daughter is not with you? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing: you have
A nurse of me. Lord! how your favour's chang'd
With this unprofitable woe. Come, come;
Give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it.
Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
And it pierces and sharpeneth the stomach. Come,
Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come; I love the king your father, and yourself;
With more than foreign heart. We every day
Expect him here: when he shall come, and find
Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken
No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you;
Walk, and be cheerful once again: reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.

Mar. But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.—
Walk half an hour. Leonine, at least.
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant, you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while.

Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood:

What! I must have care of you.

Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.—[Exit Dionyza.

Is the wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was 't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
But 'd cry "good seamen!" to the sailors, galling
His kingy hands hauling ropes;

And, elapsing to the mast, endur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born:

Never were waves nor wind more violent;

And from the ladder-tackle washes off

A canvass-climber. "Ha!!" says one, "wilt out?"

And with a dropping industry they skip

From stem to stern: the boatswain whistles, and

The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come; say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,

I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious,

For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn to do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?

Now as I can remember, by my troth,

I never did her hurt in all my life.

I never spoke bad word, nor did ill turn

To any living creature: believe me, la,

I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly:

I trod upon a worm against my will,

But I wept for it. How have I offended,

Wherein my death might yield her profit, or

My life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission

Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

You will not do't for all the world, I hope,

You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow

You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,

When you caught hurt in parting two that fought:

Good sooth, it show'd well in you: do so now:

Your lady seeks my life; come you between,

And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,

And will despatch.

Enter Pirates, whilst Marina is struggling.

1 Pirate. Held, villain! [Leonine runs away.

2 Pirate. A prize! a prize!

3 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come, let's have her aboard suddenly. [Exeunt Pirates with Marina.

SCENE II.—Near the Same.

Enter Leonine.

Leon. These rogueing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;

And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go:

There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead,

And thrown into the sea.—But I'll see farther;

Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,

Not carry her aboard. If she remain,

Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boul't.

Pand. Bawd.

Boul'. Sir.
Scene III.

Pericles, Prince of Tyre.

Paeul. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants: we lost too much money this mart, by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore, let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true: 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think, I have brought up some ele
t

Boul. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully

Pand. Thou say'st true: they're too unworthy of Boul. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market.

|Exit Boul.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequeuses were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why, to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O! our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 't were not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come; other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we? ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boul.

|Enter Boul, and the Pirates with Marina.

Boul. Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin?

1 Pirate. O, sir! we doubt it not.

Boul. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boul, has she any qualities?

Boul. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there's no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boul?

Boul. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in: instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

|Exit Pander and Pirates.

Bawd. Boul, take you the marks of her; the colour of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry, 'He that will give most, shall have her first.' Such a maidencap were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boul. Performance shall follow. |Exit Boul.

Mar. Alack, that Leonine was so slack, so slow! He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates, (Not enough barbarous) had not o'erboard thrown me For to seek my mother.

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault, To 'scape his hands where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well: you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowered as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men stir you up.—Boul't is returned.

Re-enter Boul't.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boul't. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs: I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I pray thee, tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boul't. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boul't. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers i' the hams?

Bawd. Who? monsieur Verople?

Boul't. Ay; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know, he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boul't. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do makes pity in your lovers; seldom, but that pity begins you a good opinion, and that opinion a more profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boul't. O! take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou say'st true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boul't. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— Bawd. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spine.

Boul't. I may so?

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your promises well.

Boul't. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boul't, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore, say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Bawd. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels, as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways, follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep, Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — Pharsalus. A Room in Cleon’s House.

Enter Cleon and Dionysa.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionysa! such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon.

Dion. I think,
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,
I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady! —
Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown of the earth,
Perchance to compare! O villain Leonine!
Whom thou hast poison’d too.

Dion. If thou hast drunk to him, it had been a kindness
Becoming well thy face; what canst thou say,
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates,
To foster it, nor ever to preserve.
She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it,
Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute, cry out,
"She died by foul play?"

Cle. O! go to. Well, well;
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods
Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those, that think
The pretty wrens of Pharsalus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his pre-consent, he did not flow
From honourable courses.

Dion. Be it so, then;
Yet none does know; but you, how she came dead,
Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.
She did disdain2 my child, and stood between
Her and her fortunes: none would look on her,
But cast their gazes on Marina’s face;
While ours was blurted at, and held a malkin,3
Not worth the time of day: It pierc’d me thorough;
And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find,
It grieves me as an enterprise of kindness,
Perform’d to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heaven’s forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,
And even yet we mourn: her monument
Is almost finish’d, and her epitaphs
In glittering gold; great characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense it is done.

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

SCENE VI.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter from the Brothel, two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2 Gent. No; nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

1 Gent. But to have divinity preach'd there, did you ever dream of such a thing?

2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall we go hear the vestals sing?

1 Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her, she had never come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation : we must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees, that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cherish a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfigure us of all our cavaliers, and makes all our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Bawd. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the lord Lycurgus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and town, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your ressorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity! have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she 'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldst say—

Bawd. Your honour knows what 't is to say, well enough.

Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be elate.

Enter MARINA.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk;—never pluck'd yet, I can assure you.—Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you; leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man. [To Marina.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to,

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not. Bawd. 'Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Have you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. —Come, we will leave his honour and her together. Go thy ways.

[Exeunt Bawd, Pander, and Boult.

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name but I shall offend. Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a gamester at five, or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort; and will come into it? I hear say, you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seed and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else, look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now; If put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this?—Some more,—be sage.

Mar. For me, That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came, Disguses have been sold dearer than physic,— That the gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place, Though they did change me to the meanest bird That flies i' the purer air!

Lys. I did not think Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee: Persevere in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee.

Mar. The gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten That I came with no ill intent; for to me The very doors and windows savour vilely. Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble. Hold, here's more gold for thee. A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost hear From me, it shall be for thy good.

Enter Boult.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.
LYS. Avaunt, thou damned door-keeper! Your house, but for this virgin that doth prop it, would sink, and overwhelm you. Away!

[Exit LYSIMACHUS.

BOULT. How’s this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

MAR. Whither would you have me?

BOULT. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your way. We’ll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter BAWD.

Bawl. How now! what’s the matter?

BOULT. Worse and worse, mistress: she has here spoken holy words to the lord Lysimachus.

Bawl. O, abominable!

BOULT. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawl. Marry, hang her up for ever!

BOULT. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snow-ball; saying his prayers, too.

Bawl. Follow, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

BOULT. An if she were a thorner piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

MAR. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawl. She conjures: away with her. Would she had never come within my doors.—Marry, hang you!—She’s born to undo us.—Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays!

[Exit Bawd.

BOULT. Come, mistress; come your way with me.

MAR. Whither wilt thou have me?

BOULT. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

MAR. Pr’ythee, tell me one thing first.

BOULT. Come now, your one thing.

MAR. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

BOULT. Why, I could wish him to be my master; or rather, my mistress.

MAR. Neither of these are so bad as thou art, since they do better thee in their command.

BOULT. Hold’st a place, for which the paid’st fiend of hell would not in reputation change.

MAR. ’tis the damned door-keeper to every coxstrel? That hither comes inquiring for his Tib; to the choleric fistng of each rogue thy ear is liable; thy food is such as hath been belch’d on by infected lungs.

BOULT. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

MAR. Do any thing but this thou dost. Empty Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth; serve by indenture to the common hangman: Any of these ways are yet better than this; for what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak, would own a name too dear. That the gods would safely deliver me from this place!

Here, here’s gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain by me, proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance, with other virtues, which I’ll keep from thee; and I will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous city will yield many scholars.

BOULT. But can you teach all this you speak of?

MAR. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, and prostitute me to the basest groom that doth frequent your house.

BOULT. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will.

MAR. But, amongst honest women?

BOULT. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there’s no going but by their consent; therefore, I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come; I’ll do for thee what I can: come your ways.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

Enter GOWER.

GOW. Marinas thus the brothel scapes, and chances Into an honest house, our story says. She sings like one immortal, and she dances, As goddess-like, to her admired lays. Deep clerks she dumbs, and with her needle composes Nature’s own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry, That even her art sisters the natural roses; Her inkle, 2 silk, twin with the rubied cherry: That pupils lacks she none of noble race, Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place, And to her father turn our thoughts again, Where we left him on the sea, tumbled and tossed; And, driven before the winds, he is arrived Here where his daughter dwells: and on this coast Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv’d God Neptune’s annual feast to keep: from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies, His banners sable, trim’d with rich expense;

1 Copse, or covering of the sky. 2 Low groom.—Dyer. 3 Thread.

And to him in his barge with fervour bies. In your supposing once more put your sight; Of heavy Pericles think this the bark: Where, what is done in action, more, if might, Shall be discovered; please you, sit, and hark.

[Exit.

SCENE I.—On board Pericles’ Ship, off Mitylene. A Pavilion on deck, with a Curtain before it; Pericles within it, reclining on a Couch. A Barge lying beside the Tyrian Vessel.

Enter Two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian Vessel, the other to the Barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. Where’s the lord Helicanus? he can resolve you. To the Sailor of Mitylene.

O here he is.—Sir, there’s a baze put off from Mitylene, And in it is Lysimachus, the governor, Who craves to come aboard. What is your will? Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen. Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.
Enter Two or Three Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call?
Hel. Gentlemen,
There is some of worth would come aboard: I pray
Greet them fairly.

[Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go on board the Barge.

Enter, from thence, Lyssimachus and Lords; the Tyrian
Gentlemen, and the Two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail, Sir,
This is the man that can in aught you would Receive.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you!
Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.

Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made it to know of whence you are.
Hel. First, what is your place?
Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.
Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man, who for this three months hath not spoken
To any maintenance,
But to prologue his grief.
Lys. Upon what ground is his disturbance?
Hel. It would be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief of all springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him, then?
Hel. You may;
But bootless is your sight; he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.
Hel. Behold him. [PERICLES discovered.] This was a goodly person,
Till the disaster that one mortal night
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir, kind, all hail! the gods preserve you!
Hail, royal sir!
Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

1 Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I distrust,
Wager,
Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'Tis well bethought.
She, questionless, with her sweet harmony,
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deaf'en'd parts,
Which now are midway stopp'd;
She is all happy as the fairest of all,
And with her fellow maids is now upon
The leafy shelter that absents against
The island's side.

[He whispers one of the attendant Lords.—Exit Lord.
Hel. Sure, all effectless; yet nothing we'll omit,
That bears recovery's name.
But, since your kindness we have stretch'd thus far,
Let us beseech you,
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the stalesness.

Lys. O, sir! a courtesy,
Which, if we should deny, the most just God
For every graff would send a enterpiller,
And take your province.—Yet once more
Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.
Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you—

But see, I am prevented.

Enter Lord, MARINA, and a young Lady.

Lys. O! here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is't not a goodly presence?
Hel. She's a gallant lady.
Lys. She's such a one, that were I well assured she came
Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish
No better choise, and think me rarely wed.—
For one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect of her, whose is a kindly patient:
If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous! [MARINA sings.
Lys. Mark'd he your music?
Mar. Not, no, nor look'd on us.
Lys. See, she will speak to him.
Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.—

Per. Hum! ha!
Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet: she speaks,
My lord, that may be, hath endur'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd,
Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath root'd out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude.—I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear, "Go not till he speak."

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?
Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,
You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so.
I pray you, turn your eyes again upon me.—
You are like something—that countrywoman?
Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores;
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one
My daughter might have been: my queen's square brow;
Her stature to an inch: as wand-like straight;
As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like,
And cas'd as richly: in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry.
The more she gives them speech.—Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the deck
You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achiev'd you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe.

Mar. Should I tell my history,
'T would seem like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Pr'ythee, speak;
Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

Modest as justice, and thou seest 'a palace
For the crown'd truth to dwell in. I 'll believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation.
To point that seems impossible; for thou look'st
Like one I lovd; indeed, What were thy friends?
Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back,
(Which was when I perceiv'd thee) that thou cam'rt
From good descending?

Mar. Some such thing
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou saidst
Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,
If both were open'd.

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Tell thy story; If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl; yet thou dost look
Like Patience, gazing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?
Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.
Per. O! I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or else I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name
Was given me; by one that had some power;
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina?
Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?
Mar. Well; speak on. Where were you born,
And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina,
For I was born at sea.
Per. At sea! what mother?

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;
Who died the minute I was born.
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft
Deliver'd weeping.

Per. O! stop there a little.
This is the rarest dream that e'er dull'd sleep
Did mock sad fools withal; this cannot be.
My daughter's buried.—Well;—where were you bred?
I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,
To point erupt you.

Mar. You scorn: believe me, 't were best I did give
Per. I will believe you by the syllable: [o'er.
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:
How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The king, my father, did in Tharsus leave me,
Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me; and having wound
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do't,
A crew of pirates came and rescued me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir,
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It

You think me an impositor: no, good faith;
I am the daughter to king Pericles,
If good king Pericles be.
Per. Ho, Helicanus! Calls my gracious lord!

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general; tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is; or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not; but here
Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene,
Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She would never tell
Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus! strike me, honour'd sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain,
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me,
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O ! I come hither.

Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tharsus,
And found at sea again.—O Helicanus!
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods so loud
As thunder threatens us: this is Marina!
What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray
What is thy title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me, now,
My drown'd queen's name: (as in the rest you said
Thou hast been godlike perfect) the heir of kingdoms,
And another like to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter, than to say, my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art my child.
Give me fresh garments! Mine own, Helicanus,
She is not dead at Tharsus: as she should have been,
By savage Cleon: she shall tell thee all. now
When thou art kneel and justify in knowledge,
She is thy very princess.—Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you,
Give me my robes! I am wild in my beholding,
O heavens, bless my girl! But hark! what music?
Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter.—But what music?

Hel. My lord I hear none.

Per. None.
The music of the spheres! list, my Marina.
Lys. It is not good to cross him: give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. Music? My lord, I hear—

Per. Most heavenly music:
It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber
Hangs upon mine eyes: let me rest. [He sleeps.

Lys. A pillow for his head.

The Curtains before the Pavillon of Pericles is closed.
So, leave him all.—Well, my companion-friends,
If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you.

[Exeunt Lycurgus, Helicanus, Marina, and Lady.]
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

SCENE II.—The Same.

PERICLES on the Deck asleep; DIANA appearing to him in a vision.

Diu. My temple stands in Ephesus: hie thee thither, And do upon mine altar sacrifice.

There, where my maiden priests are met together, Before the people, all,

Reveal how thou at sea distil lose thy wife: To morn thy crosses, with thy daughter’s call, And give them repetition to the life. Or perform my bidding, or then live in woe.

Diu. Do’t, and be happy by my silver bow. Awake, and tell thy dream. [Diana disappears.

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine, I will obey thee.—Helicanus!

Enter LYSIMACHES, HELICANUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir.

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike The inhospitable Cleon; but I am For other service first: toward Ephesus Turn our blown sails; eftsoons I’ll tell thee why. Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore, And give you gold for such provision As our intents will need?

Lys. Sir, with all my heart, and when you come ashore I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter; for, it seems, You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend your arm. [Exitunt.

Enter Gower, before the Temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run; More a little, and then dumb. This, as my last boon, give me, For such kindness must relieve me, That you aptly will suppose What pageantry, what feats, what shows, What minstrelsy, and pretty din, The regent made in Mitylen, To greet the king. So he thriv’d, That he is promis’d to be wiv’d To fair Marina; but in no wise Till he had done his sacrifice, As Dian bade: whereeto being bound, The interim, pray you, all confound. In feather’d briefness sails are fill’d, And wishes fall out as they’re will’d, At Ephesus, the temple see, Our king, and all his company. That he can lither come so soon, Is by your fanc’y thankful doom. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Temple of Diana at Ephesus; THAISA standing near the Altar, as high Priestess; a number of Virgins on each side: CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail Dian! to perform thy just command, I here confess myself the king of Tyre; Who, frighted from my country, did wed At Pentapolis, the fair Thaisa. At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth A maid-child call’d Marina; who, O goddess! Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tharsus Was nurs’d with Cleon, whom at fourteen years He sought to murder, but her better stars Brought her to Mitylene; against whose shore Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us, Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter.

Tha. Voice and favour! — You are, you were—O royal Pericles! [She faints. Per. What means the woman? she dies; help, gentlemen! Cer. Noble sir,
If you have told Diana’s altar true, This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no: I threw her overboard with these very arms

Cer. Upon this coast! I warrant you.

Per. ’T is most certain.

Cer. Look to the lady.—O! she’s but o’erjoy’d.

Early in blust’ring morn this lady was Thrown on this shore. I op’d the coffin, Found there rich jewels; recover’d her, and plac’d her Here, in Diana’s temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house, Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is recover’d.

Tha. O! let me look.
If he be none of mine, my sanctity Will to my sense bend no licentious ear, But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord! Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, Like him you are. Did you not name a tempest, A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Tha. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead, and drown’d.

Per. Immortal Dian! Now I know you better.— When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king, my father, gave you such a ring.

[Shews a Ring.

Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do well, That on the touching of her lips I may Melt, and no more be seen. O! come, be buried A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart Leaps to be gone into my mother’s bosom.

[Kneels to Thaisa.

Per. Look, who kneels here. Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa; Thy burden at the sea, and call’d Marina, For she was yield’d there.

Tha. Bless’d, and mine own! Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Tha. I know you not. Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre, I left behind an ancient substitute: Can you remember what I call’d the man? I have nam’d him off.

Tha. ’T was Helicanus, then. Per. Still confirmation! You are him, dear Thaisa; this is he. Now do I long to hear how you were found, How possibly preserved, and whom to thank, Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Tha. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man Through whom the gods have shown their power, that can From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir,
ACT V.

The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord:
Beseech you, first go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with her;
How she came placed here in the temple.

No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian! bless thee for thy vision,
I will offer night oblations to thee.

Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

POEMS

VENUS AND ADONIS.

INTRODUCTION

We are told by Shakespeare, in his dedication of this poem to the Earl of Southampton, in 1593, that it was "the first heir of his invention;" and as it was the earliest printed, so probably, it was the earliest written of his known productions. At what time it is likely that he commenced the composition of it, is a question which we have considered in the biography of the poet.

The popularity of it is indubitable: having been originally printed by Richard Field, in 1593, 4to, the Editions have been very numerous, and such was the correctness of the text and the excellence of the execution, that it was reprinted by the same printer in 1594, 4to., before 25th June, because on that day, according to the Stationers' Registers, he assigned over his interest in it to John Harrison, for whom Field printed an octavo impression in 1596. Field's second edition of 1594 was unknown to Malone and his contemporaries; and as it was not a re-issue of some remaining copies of 1593 with a new title-page, but a distinct re-impression, it affords some various readings, and not a few important confirmations of the correctness of the older text, corrupted more or less in all subsequent editions. Harrison published his second edition in 1596, which was the fourth time "Venus and Adonis" had been printed in seven years. It had been entered at Stationers' Hall by W. Leake, in 1596. After this date it went through the press many times, and copies in 1602, 1616, 1620, 4to., are known: in 1627 it was printed by John Weetoun, at Edinburgh.

The popularity of "Venus and Adonis" is established also by the frequent mention of it in early writers. It is probable that Peele died in 1597, and very soon afterwards his "Merry Conceived Jests" must have been published, although no edition of them is known older than that of 1607. In one of these, a tapster, "much given to poetry," is represented as having in his possession "the Knight of the Sun, Venus and Adonis, and other pamphlets." Thomas Heywood's "Fair Maid of the Exchange," was printed in 1607, but written some few years before, and there a young lover is recommended to court his mistress by the aid of "Venus and Adonis." How long this reputation, and for the same purpose, was maintained, may be seen from a passage in Lewis Sharp's "Noble Stranger," 1648, where Puppilus exclaims, "Oh, for the book of Venus and Adonis, to court my mistress by!" Thomas Cranly, in his "Amanda," 1635, makes "Venus and Adonis" part of the library of a courtier:

"amorous pamphlets, that best like thine eyes,
And songs of love, and sonnets exquisite;
Among these Venus and Adonis lies,
With Salmacis and her Hermaphroditos;
Pygmalion's thief, with his transform'd delight.
"Salmacis and her Hermaphroditos" refers to the poem imputed (perhaps falsely) to Beaumont, printed in 1604; and the third poem is "Pygmalion's Image," by Marston, published in 1609.

Even as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-check'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn:
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him.

S. Nicholson, in his "Acadathus his Afterwit," 1600, committed the most impudent plagiarisms from "Venus and Adonis;" and R. S., the author of "Philis and Flora," 1598, did not scruple to copy, almost with verbal exactness, part of the description Shakespeare gives of the horse of Adonis. It is perhaps needless to add that in both of these works we extract the following lines, that the reader may be able to make a comparison (See p. 366):

"His mayne thin hair'd, his neck high crested Small ear, short head, and burly breasted
Strait legg'd, large thigh'd, and hollow lovd,
All nature's skill in him was prov'd."

Our text of "Venus and Adonis," is that of the earliest quarto, 1593, which, for the time, is very correctly printed, and we will illustrate by a single quotation the importance of resorting to it: the line which there stands,

"He cheers the morn, and all the earth relieveth," is misprinted in all modern editions,

"He cheers the morn, and all the world relieveth."

The corruption was introduced in the quarto, 1594, and it has ever since been repeated. The same remark will apply to other changes: such as "all swoln with chafing" instead of "chasing," "to love's alarm, instead of "alarms," "from born to night," inverted, till night," etc., all which show strange carelessness of collation, but it is not necessary here to dwell upon them, as they are pointed out in the notes.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
HENRY WRIOTHESLY,
EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

RIGHT HONORABLE,

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpollished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a god-father, and never after car so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish, and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

Thrice fairer than myself, (thus she began)
The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith, that the world hath ending with thy life.
Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy need
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses:

And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty:
Making them red and pale with fresh variety;
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve, to do a goddess good:
Being so enraged, desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens; (O, how quick is love !)
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To lie the rider she begins to prove:
"Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she alone, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And 'gin's to chide, but soon she stops his lips;
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.

He burns with basish shame, she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs, and golden hairs,
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks:
"He saith she is immost, he blazes her 'mists,'
What follows more, she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd, or prey go on;
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Fors'd to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling showers.

Look how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fast'n'd in her arms Adonis lies;
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes;
Rain added to a river that is rank,
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he lowers and frets,
' Twixt crimson shame, and anger ashy-pale;
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal heart she sweares
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who being look'd on ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave,
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer's heat,
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn.
O, pity, 'gan she cry, flint-hearted boy!
'Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

I have been wond as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes; in every jar;
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begged for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His bater'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, daily, smile, and jest;
Scorning his churlish drum, and ensign red,
Making his arms his field, his tent my bed.

Thus be he that over-rul'd, I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red rose chain:
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength obey'd,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O! be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mastering her that so'd the god of light.

Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:
Look in mine eye-balls, there thy beauty lies;
Then, why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

Art thou ashamed to kiss? then, wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play; our sport is not in sight:
These birds on'th'd violets wheresoe'er we lean,
Never can blash, nor know not what we mean.

The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe, yet may'st thou well be tasted.
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime,
Rot and consume themselves in little time.

1 amiss, fault. 2 mothmen: in ed., 1600, 1630. 3 Press. 4 To be contented. 5 Full. 6 di-dapper: old cop. 7 coy: old ed.
Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled old,
Ill-nurt'rd, crooked; churlish, harsh in voice,
O'er-worn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice,
Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey, bright, and quick in turning:
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my narrow burning:
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
Or like a nymph with long dishevelled hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit, all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

Torchers are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use;
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse;
Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breeth beauty;
Thou wast begot, to get it is thy duty.

Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,
Unless the earth in thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live, when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.

By this, the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsok them,
And Titan, 'tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy sprite,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His lowering brows o'er-whelmng his fair sight,
Like misty vapours, when they blot the sky,
Souring his cheeks, cries, Fie! no more of love:
The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.

Ah me! (quoth Venus,) young, and so unkind?
What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone?
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending sun:
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,
And lo! I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;
And were I not immortal, life were done,
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

Art thou obdurate, dainty, hard as steel?
Nay more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth;
Art thou a woman's son, and cannot feel,
What 'tis to love? how want of love tormenteth?
O! had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unknd.

What am I, that thou shouldst contemn me this?
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
Speak fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute;
Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

Fie! lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue, contenting but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred:
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
For men will kiss even by their own direction.

This said, impatience chokes her pleading tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause;
And now she weeps, and now she fain would speak,
And now her sobs do her intentions break.

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then his hand,
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground;
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band;
She would, he will not in her arms be bound;
And when from thence he struggles to be gone,
She locks her lily fingers one in one.

Fondling, she saith, since I have hemm'd thee here,
Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale;
Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass, and high delightful plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough,
To shelter thee from tempest, and from rain:
Then, be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.

At this Adonis smiles, as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made these hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple:
Pure-knowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love liv'd, and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, the round enchanting pits,
Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking,
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

1 Blue eyes were sometimes called grey.
Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.
   Pity! she cries, some favour, some remorse!
   Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse!

But lo! from forth a cope that neighbours by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud,
Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rusheth, snorts, and neighs aloud:
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his waken girths he breaks asunder;
The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder:
The iron bit he crusheth 'twixt his teeth,
Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up pricked, his braided hanging mane
Upon his compass'd crest now stands on end;
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:
   His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
   Shows his hot courage, and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps
With gentle majesty, and modest pride;
Anon he rears upright, curves and leaps,
As who should say, lo! thus my strength is tried;
   And this I do, to captivate the eye
   Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

What reeketh he his rider's angry stir,
His flattering holla, or his 'Stand, I say?'
What cares he now for curbs, or pricking spur,
For rich caparisons, or trapping gay?
   He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
   For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed;
   So did his horse excel a common one,
   In shape, in courage, colour, pace, and bone.

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, the fetlocks shag and long,
Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs, and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
   Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
   Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

Sometime he sends far off, and there he stares;
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather:
To bid the wind a base! he now prepares,
And whe'er he run, or fly, they know not whether;
   For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,
   Fanning the hair, who wave like feather'd wings.

He looks upon his love, and neighs unto her;
She answers him, as if she knew his mind:
Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind;
Spurns at his love, and scornt the heat he feels,
Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
He vaits his tail, that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume.
   His love, perceiving how he is curseg'd,
   Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.

His testy master goeth about to take him,
When lo! the unback'd breeder, full of fear,
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
With her the horse, and left Adonis there.
   As they were mad, unto the wood they his them,
   Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them.

All swown with chafing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick love by pleading may be blust;
   For lovers say, the heart hath trouble wrong,
   When it is barr'd the audience of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage:
So of concealed sorrow may be said,
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
   But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
   The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
   Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
   For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O! what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy;
To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy:
   But now her check was pale, and by and by
   It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
   His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print,
   As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O, what a war of looks was then between them!
   Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes sung;
   His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them;
   Her eyes would still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing:
   And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
   With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a jail of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band;
So while a friend engirts so white a foe:
   This beautious combat, wilful and unwilling,
   Show'd like two silver doves that sit a billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
   O fairest mover on this mortal round,
   Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
   My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
   For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,
   Though nothing but my body's bone would cure thee.

1 A race, or game of prison-base, or prison-bars.  2 chasing: in ed. 1600.
Give me my hand, saith he, why dost thou feel it?
Give me my heart, saith she, and thou shalt have it;
O! give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it:
Then, love's deep groans I never can regard,
Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.

For shame! he cries, let go, and let me go;
My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so:
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone;
For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
is how to get my palfrey from the mare.

Thus she replies: thy palfrey, as he should,
Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire:
Affection is a coal that must be cool'd;
Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire.
The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none:
Therefore, no marvel though thy horse be gone.

How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
Servilely master'd with a leathern rein;
But when he saw his love, his youth's fair foe,
He held such petty bondage in disdain;
Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,
Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
His other agents aim at like delight?
Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy,
And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
To take advantage on presented joy;
Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee:
O! learn to love; the lesson is but plain,
And once made perfect, never lost again.

I know not love, quoth he, nor will not know it:
Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it;
'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it;
My love is love that love beareth:
For I have heard it is a life in death,
That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinished?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth;
The colt that 's back'd and burden'd being young,
Loeeth his pride, and never waxeth strong.

You hurt my hand with wrenching; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat:
Remove your siege from my unyielding heart;
To love is love but love that love requites;
Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery,
For where a heart is hard, they make no battery.

What! canst thou talk? (quoth she,) hast thou a tongue?
O! would thou hast not, or I had no hearing!
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong!
I had my load before, now press'd with bearing:
Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding;
Ear's deep sweet music, and heart's deep sore wounding.

Had I no eyes, but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible
Or, were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible:
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the stillitory of thy face excelling
Comes breath perfum'd, that breathest love by smell.

But O! what banquet wert thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four:
Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
And bid suspicion double lock the door,
Lest jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should by his stealing in disturb the feast?

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal opened,
Which to his speech did honey-assage yield;
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the sea-man, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh:
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth;
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it raineth;
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words began.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth:
A smile recures the wounding of a frown;
But blessed bankrupt that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red;

And all amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wittily prevent;
Fair fall the wit that can well defend her!
For on the grass she lies, as she were slain,
Till his breath the breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends his fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd:
He blows her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn, and all the earth's reliefeth:
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye.

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine;
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brow's repine;
But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.
O! where am I? quoth she, in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench’d, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv’d, and life was death’s annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

O! thou didst kill me; kill me once again:
Thy eye’s shrew’d tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scomrful tricks, and such disdain,
That they have murder’d this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy pit-sions lips no more had seen.

Long may they kiss each other for this eur!
O! never let their crimson livery wear,
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year!
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish’d by thy breath.

Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be scaling?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy, and pay, and use good dealing;
Which purchase if you make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

A thousand kisses buys my heart from me,
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told, and quickly gone?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?

Fair queen, quoth he, if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with your unripe years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungron fry forbears;
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck’d, is sour to taste.

Look, the world’s comforter, with weary gait,
His day’s hot task hath ended in the west:
The owl, night’s herald, shrieks, ’t is very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven’s light,
Do summon us to part, and bid good night.

Now let me say good night; and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.
Good night, quoth she; and, ere he says adieu,
The honey-fee of parting tender’d is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face.

Till breathless he disjoint’d, and backward drew
The heavily moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well know,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drought:
He with her plenty press’d, she faint with dearth,
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutinous-like she feeds, yet never filthè;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insolter willèth;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips’ rich treasure dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reck and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lusts stir up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame’s pure blush, and honour’s wreck.

Hot, faint, and weary; with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tam’d with too much handling,
Or as the fleet-foot roe that’s tir’d with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still’d with duelling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass’d off with venturing,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-fac’d coward,
But then woos best, when most his choice is froward.

When he did frown, O! had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck’d.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickers, yet ’t is pluck’d:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through, and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolv’d no longer to restrain him,
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid’s bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.

Sweet boy, she says, this night I’ll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, love’s master; shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the bear with certain of his friends.

The bear! (quoth she) werest a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheek: she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws;
She sinks down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly fails, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginry she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus’ is her annoy,
To clip Elysium, and to lack her joy.

Even as poor birds, deceiv’d with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye, and pine the maw,
Even so she languishèd in her mishaps.
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw,
The warm effects which she in him finds missing,
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing:

But all in vain: good queen, it will not be:
She hath assy’d as much as may be prov’d;
Her pleading hath deserv’d a greater fee;
She’s love, she loves, and yet she is not lov’d.
Fie, fie! be you, crush me; let me go:
You have no reason to withhold me so.

1 Fragrant herbs were supposed to possess this power.  2 Embraces.
Thou hast been gone, quoth she, sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou told'st me, thou wouldst hunt the boar.
O! be advis'd; thou know'st not what it is
With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore,
Whose tushes never-sheath'd he whetteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bribst pikes, that ever threat his foes;
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret;
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his cruel tushes stays.

His brawny sides, with hairy bristles armed,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harmed;
Being i' th' lion he will venture:
The thorny b Brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him, part; through whom he rushes.

Alas! he nought esteems that face of thine,
To which love's eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft haunds, sweet lips, and crystal eye,
When thou dost consult all the world at once,
But having thee at vantage, (wondrous dread !)
Would root these beauties, as he roots the mead.

O! let him keep his loathsome cabin still;
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends;
Come not within his danger! by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Crew I not faint? and fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereso thou dost lie,
My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But like an earthquake shakes thee on my breast.

For where love reigns, disturbing jealousy
Doth call himself affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry, "kill, kill!"
Distempering gentle love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

This sour informer, this bates-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, disseitious jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear,
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear:

And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed,
Doth make them droop with grief, and hang the head.

What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at th' imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox, which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe, which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshit his troubles,
How he out-runs the wind, and with what care
He cranks 4 and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musets through which he goes,
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

Sometimes he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell;
And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell;
And sometime sorteth 4 with a herd of deer.
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear.

For there his smell, with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffling hounds are driven to doubt;
Cessing their clamorous cry, till they have singled
With much ado the cold faultless friend:
Then do they spend their mouths: echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies.

By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his binder legs with listening ear,
To harken if his foes pursue him still:
Anon their loud alarms he doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick, that hears the passing bell.

Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return: indenting with the way;
Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmure stay:
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low, never reliev'd by any.

Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so:
For love can comment upon every woe.

Where did I leave?—No matter where, quoth he;
Leave me, and then the story softly ends;
The night is spent. Why, what of that? quoth she;
I am, quoth he, expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.
In night, quoth she, desire sees best of all.

But if thou fall, O! then imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true-men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn,
Lest she should steal a kiss, and die forsworn.

Now, of this dark night I perceive the reason:
Cynthia for shame, she obscures her silver shine,
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason,
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine,
Wherein she fram'd thee, in high heaven's despite,
To shame the sun by day, and her by night.

1 In his power. 2 Contention. 3 Steevens reads: overshoot. 4 Winds. 4 The aperture in a hedge made by the hare in its frequent passage through it. 5 Consolation.
Call it not love, for love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating lust on earth usurp’d his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains, and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But lust’s effect is tempest after sun;
Love’s gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust’s winter comes ere summer half be done:
Love surfeits not, lust like a glutton dies;
Love is all truth, lust full of forged lies.

More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.

Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen.²
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast,
And homeward through the dark lawn runs space;
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress’d.

Look, how a bright star shoteth from the sky;
So glides he in the night from Venus’ eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amaz’d, as one that unaware
Hath dropp’d a precious jewel in the flood,
Or ’stoinish’d as night wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour-caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans:
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled.

Ah me! she cries, and twenty times, woe, woe!
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She marking them, begins a wailing note,
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty;
How love makes young men thrill, and old men dote;
How love is wise in folly, foolish witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers’ hours are long, though seeming short:
If pleas’d themselves, others, they think, delight
In such like circumstance, with such like sport:
Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites?
Like shrill-toung’d tapsters answering every call,
Sothing the humour of fantastic wits?
She says, ’t is so: they answer all, ’t is so;
And would say after her, if she said no.

And therefore hath she b rib’d the Destinies,
To cross the curious workmanship of nature;
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature;
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mishances, and much misery;

As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence, and frenzies wood;¹
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attendant
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood:
Surfeits, impostures, grief, and damn’d despair,
Sware nature’s death for framing thee so fair.

And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute’s fight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat th’ impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw’d, and done,
As mountain snow melts with the midday sun.

Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity,
And barren death of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night,
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Sooning to bury that posterity?
Which by the rights of time thou must needs have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

So in thyself thyself art made away,
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul canker rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that’s put to use more gold begots.

Nay then, quoth Adonis, you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme:
The kiss I gave you is bestow’d in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For by this black-fac’d night, desire’s foul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid’s songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there;

Lost the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast,
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr’d of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

What have you urg’d that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger.
You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust’s abuse.

Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty:
Who doth the world so graciously behold,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow.
O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son that seeketh an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'er-worn;
And yet she hears no tidings of her love:
She hearkens, for his hounds, and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck; some kiss her face,
Some tinc'd about her thigh to make her stay.
She would yield to sweet embraces,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dogs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this she hears the hounds are at a buy,
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Wraith'd up in fatal folds, just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder:
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud;
Finding their enemy to be so curt,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart;
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part:
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly, and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling extasy,
Till cheering up her senses all'd dismay'd,
She tells them, 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more;
And with that word she spied the hunting boar;

Whose frothy mouth bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:
This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murther.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;
She tends the path that she treaded again:
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain;
Full of respect, yet nought at all respecting,
In hast with all things, nought at all affecting.

Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master;
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom do'se the soles the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath cease'd his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin Vollies out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleading as they go.

Look, how the world's poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath,
And, sighing it again, exclaims on death.

Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love, (thus chides she death)
Grim grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean,
To stifle beauty?
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

If he be dead,—O no! it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it.
O yes! it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit.
Thy mark is feeble age; but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim, and cleaves an infant's heart.

Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And hearing him thy power had lost his power.
The destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower.
Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee?
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail'd her eye-lids, who, like butterflies,
Stopped the crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropped;
But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,
Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Signs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All current to the deep and passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief
But none is best; then, join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.
By this far off she hears some huntsman hollow:
A nurse's song ne'er please'd her babe so well:
The dire imagination she did follow.
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass;
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as seeming it should pass.

To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
Who is but drunken, when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems.
Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;
Despair and hope make thee ridiculous:
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unwraps the web that she hath wrought;
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame:
It was not she that call'd him all to nought;
Now she adds honours to his hateful name;
She claps him king of graves, and grave for kings,
Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

No, no, quoth she, sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear,
When as I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe;
Then, gentle shadow, (truth I must confess)
I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

'Tis not my fault; the boar provok'd my tongue;
Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
I did but act, he's author of thy slander.
Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet
Could rule them both, without ten women's wit.

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With death she humbly doth insinuate:
Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories,
His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

O Love! quoth she, how much a fool was I,
To be of such a weak and silly mind,
To wall his death, who lives, and must not die,
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind;
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

Fie, fie, fond love! thou art so full of fear,
As once with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves;
Trilles, unwitnessed with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves,
Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcons1 to the lure, away she flies:
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight:
Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
Like stars asham'd of day, themselvcs withdrew.

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there all smoker'd up in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again:
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are flied
Into the deep-dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their offices and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain;
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan;

Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,
Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.

This mutiny each part doth so surprise,
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes;

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd
In his soft flank: whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
But stole his blood, and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth;
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head,
Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead:
Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow,
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so stedfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
And then she comprehends her mangleing eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled;
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet, quoth she, behold two Adons dead!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost!
What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou boast
Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim:
But true sweet beauty-liv'd and died with him.

Ronnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear;
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear:
The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth kiss you:
But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:

And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep,
The wind would blow it off, and being gone,
Play with his locks: then, would Adonis weep,
And straight in pity of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

---

1 falcon: in ed. 1000.
To see his face, the lion walk'd along
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him;
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame, and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey,
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills:
When he was by: the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries, and ripe red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted' boar,
 Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
 Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then, I know,
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

'Tis true, 'tis true: thus was Adonis slain.
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And muzzling in his flask, the loving swine
Sheath'd, unaware, the tusk in his soft groin.

Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first:
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his, the more am I accurst.
With this she falleth in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ear a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woful words she told:
She lifts the conquer'd lids that close his eyes,
Where lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies:

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
Wonder of time, quoth she, this is my spite,
That, thou' being dead, the day should yet be light.

Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy;
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be wait'd on with jealously,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end;
Ne'er settled equality, but high or low,
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.

It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud;
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'er-straw'd

With sweets, that shall the trustest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

It shall be sparing, and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The starving ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures:
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

It shall suspect, where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear, where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful, and too severe,
And most deceiving, when it seems most just:
Perverse it shall be, where it shows most toward;
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

It shall be cause of war, and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
Subject and servile to all discontenters,
As dry combustious matter is to fire:
Sith in his prime death doth my love destroy,
They that love best, their loves shall not enjoy.

By this the boy, that by her side lay kill'd,
Was melted like a vapour from her sight;
And in his blood, that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white;
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath;
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is reft from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears;

Poor flower, quoth she, this was thy father's guise,
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 't is thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast, as in his blood.

Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 't is thy right:
Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night
There shall not be one minute in an hour,
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress mounted through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd:
Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen
Means to immure herself and not be seen.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

INTRODUCTION.

["Lucrece. London. Printed by Richard Field, for J. Harrison, and are to be sold at the signe of the white Greyyonnd in Paines Church-yard. 1594." 4to. 47 leaves.
"Lucrece. At London, Printed be N. O. for John Harrison. 1607." 4to. 32 leaves.]

"Lucrece," as it is merely called in the earlier impressions, came out in the year following allusion to "Venus and Adonis," and it was printed for John Harrison, the publisher of the edition of "Venus and Adonis," in 1598. It had been previously entered, under a more explanatory title, in the Stationers' Register, 4 May 1594.

["Mr. Harrison, sen.] A book intituled the Navyshem of Lucrece.

Like, "Venus and Adonis," it was dedicated to the Earl of Southampton, but in a more confident and assured spirit.

This second production was, probably, not quite so popular as the first, and it was again printed until 1598, for the same bookbinder, who had published the third edition of it in 1598; the fourth edition was issued in 1607: these are not so marked, and Malone tells us that he had heard of impressions in 1595 and 1602, but they have not since come to light; and in his belief, this edition was the first printing between 1594 and 1607. An edition in 1616 purports to have been "newly revised and corrected" but, as Malone truly states, "it is the most inaccurate and corrupt of the ancient copies," and he adds that "most of the alterations seem to have been made, because the reviser did not understand the poet's meaning." That Shakespeare had nothing to do with the revision and correction of this edition requires no proof; and so little was it esteemed, that it was not followed in its changes in the edition of 1624, which also professes to have been "newly revised." This last is accompanied by marginal notes, prosaically explanatory of the incidents poetically narrated.

The earliest mention of "Lucrece" occurs in the year in which it made its first appearance. Michael Drayton published his "Matilda," (a poem in seven-stanza lines, like "Lucrece") in 1594, and there we meet with the following passage:

"Lucrece, of whom proud Rome hath boasted long,
Lately reviv'd to live another age,
And here arriv'd to tell of Tarquin's wrong;
Her chasté denial, and the tyrant's rage,
Acting her passion on our stately stage:
She is remember'd, all forgetting me,
Yet I as fair and chaste as e'er was she,"

A difficulty here may arise out of the fifth line, as if Drayton were referring to a play upon the story of Lucrece, and it is very possible that one was then in existence. Thomas Heywood's tragedy, "The Rage of Lucrece," did not appear in print until 1608, and he could hardly have been old enough to have been the author of such a drama in 1594; he may, nevertheless, have availed himself of an elder play, and, according to the practice of the time, he may have felt warranted in publishing it as his own. It is likely, however, that Drayton's expressions are not to be taken literally, and that his meaning merely was, that the story of Lucrece had lately been revived, and brought upon the stage of the world: if this opinion be correct, the stanza we have before quoted contains a clear allusion to Shakespeare's "Lucrece," and a question then presents itself, why Drayton entirely omitted it in the after impressions of his "Matilda." He was a poet who, as we have shown in the introduction to "Julius Cesar," was in the habit of making extensive alterations in his productions, as they were severally reprinted, and the suppression of this stanza may have proceeded from many other causes than repentance of the praise he had bestowed upon a rival.

The edition of "Lucrece" we have taken as our text is the first, which, like "Venus and Adonis," was printed by Richard Field, though not on his own account. It may be stated on the whole to be an extremely creditable specimen of his typography: as the sheets were going through the press, some material errors were, however, observed in them, and they are therefore in several places corrected. This fact has hitherto escaped remark, but the variations are explained in our notes.

Modern editors have performed their task without due care, but of their want of attention we shall only here adduce two specimens. In one of the speeches in which Lucrece endeavours to dissuade Tarquin from his purpose, she tells him,

"Thou back'st reproach against long-living land,"

Which every modern editor misprints,

"Thou back'st reproach against long-lived land."

Our second proof is from a later portion of the poem, just after Collatine has returned home, and meets his dishonoured wife: the true text, speaking of Collatine and Lucrece, is,

"Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance."

Malone, and all editors after him, make nonsense of the couplet, by printing,

"But stood like old acquaintance in a trance," &c.;

deprieving the verb of its nominative, and destroying the whole force of the figure. It would be easy to add other instances of the same kind, but we refer for them to our notes.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

HENRY Wriothesly,

EARL OF SOUTHWINCPT, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereas this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous society. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. We're my worth greater, my duty would show greater; mean time, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

Lucius Tarquinius (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus) after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea: during which siege, the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife; among whom, Collatinus extolled the incomparable chaste of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they allapsed to Rome; and intending by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife (though it were late in the afternoon) witnesses amongst her maids...of dancing and revelling; or in several distants; whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time, when Secundus was (by the request of Lucrece's beauty, yet soothing his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privately withdrew himself, and was according to his estate royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatium. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Varus; and finding Lucrece satired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her reverence, revealed the actor, and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself: which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the does, and manner of the wise deed; with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king; whereas the people were so moved, that, with one consent and a general acclamation, the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

From the besieged Ardea all in post, Borne by the trustless wings of false desire, Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host, And to Collatium bears the lightest fire Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire, And girdle with embracing flames the waist Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set This bateless edge on his keen appetite; When Collatine unwisely did not let To praise the clear unmatched red and white, Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight; Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties, With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent, Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state; What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent In the possession of his bounteous mate; Reckoning his fortune at such high proud rate, That kings might be espoused to more fame, But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness! enjoy'd but of a few; And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done, As is the morning's silver-melting dew Against the golden splendour of the sun: An expir'd date, canell'd ere well begun: Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms, Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade The eyes of men without an orator; What needeth, then, apologies be made To set forth that which so singular is? Or why is Collatine the publisher Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece's sovereignty Suggested this proud issue of a king, For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be: Perchance that envy of so rich a thing, Braving compare, disdainfully did sting: His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should That golden hap which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate His all too timeless speed, if none of those: His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state, Neglected all, with swift intent he goes To quench the coal which in his liver grows. O rash, false heat! wrap't in repentant cold, Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old.

When at Collatium this false lord arrived, Well was he welcome'd by the Roman dame, Within whose face beauty and virtue strived Which of them both should underprop her fame? When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for shame: When beauty boasted blushes, in despite Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intuited, From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field; Then, virtue claims from beauty beauty's red, Which virtue gave the golden age to gild Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield; Teaching them thus to use it in the fight, When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen Argued by beauty's red, and virtue's white: Of either's colour was the other queen, Proving from world's minority their right, Yet their ambition makes them still to fight, The sovereignty of either being so great, That oft they interchange each other's seat.

This silent war of lilies and of roses, Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field, In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses; Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd, The coward captive vanquished doth yield To those two armies, that would let him go, Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he, that her husband's shallow tongue, The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so, In that high task hath done her beauty wrong, Which far exceeds his barren skill to show: Therefore, that praise which Collatine doth owe, Enchanted Tarquin answers with surprise, In silent wonder of still gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil, Little suspecteth the false worshipper, For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil; Birds never limit'd no secret bushes fear: So guileless she securely gives good cheer, And reverence welcome to her princely guest, Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd: For that he colour'd with his high estate, Hiding base sin in plait's of majesty; That nothing in him seem'd inordinate, Save sometime too much wonder of his eye, Which, having all, all could not satisfy; But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store, That cloy'd with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes, Could pick no meaning from their parting looks, Nor read the subtle shinning secracies Writ in the glassy margents of such books: She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks;
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open’d to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband’s fame,
Wen in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And deck with praises Collatine’s high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry,
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory:
Her joy with heavy’d-up hand she doth express,
And wordless so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blistering weather
Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear;
Till sable night, mother of dread and fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending’ weariness with heavy sprite;
For after supper long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
Now laden slumber with life’s strength doth fight,
And every one to rest themselves betake, [wake.
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that

As one of which doth Tarquin he revolving
The sundry dangers of his will’s obtaining;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining:
Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;
And when great treasure is the need proposed,
Though death be adjunct, there’s no death supposed.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
That what they have not, that which they possess,
They scatter and unlose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor rich gain.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
That one for all, or all for one we gage;
As life for honour in fell battles’ rage:
Honour for wealth, and oft that wealth doth cost
The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in venturing ill, we leave to be
The things we are for that which we expect;
And this ambitious soul infamy,
In having much, torments us with defect
Of that we have: so then do we neglect
The thing we have; and, all for want of wit,
Make something nothing by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust,
And for himself himself he must forsake;
Then, where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues, and wretched hateful days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had clos’d up mortal eyes;

No comfortable star did lend his light,
No noise but owls’ and wolves’ death-boding cries:
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs. Pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wake, to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap’d from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o’er his arm,
Is madly toss’d between desire and dread;
Th’ one sweetly flattens, th’ other feareth harm;
But honest fear, bewitch’d with lust’s foul charm,
Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falshion on a fint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly,
Whereas a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:
As from this cold fint I enforce’d this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire.

Here, pale with fear, he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then, looking sorrowfully, he doth despise
His naked armour of still slaughtered lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust.

Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
And die, unhallow’d thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine:
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed,
That spots and stains love’s modest snow-white weed.

O shame to knighthood, and to shining arms!
O foul dishonour to my household’s grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy’s slave!
True valour still a true respect should have;
Then, my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;
Some leathsome dash, the herald will contrive,
To ciphers me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, sham’d with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I my father had not been.

What win I, if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy;
Who buys a minute’s nite to wail a week,
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be stricken down?

If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame.

Pretending.
O! what excuse can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake,
Mine eyes forego their light, my false heart bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quital of such strife;
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

Shameful it is;—ay, if the fact be known:
Hateful it is;—there is no hate in loving:
I'll beg her love;—but she is not her own:
The worst is but denial, and reproving.
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing:
Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw,
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
'Tween frozen conscience and hot burning will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worse sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, she took me kindly by the hand,
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
Fearing some hard news from the warlike band,
Where her beloved Collatinus lies.
O, how her fear did make her colour rise!
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then, white as lawn, the roses took away.

And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
Force'd it to tremble with her loyal fear!
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd,
Until her husband's welfare she did hear;
Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer,
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

Why hunt I, then, for colour or excuse?
All creators are dumb when beauty pleads;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth;
Affection is my captain, and he leadeth;
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward fights, and will not be dismay'd.

Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die!
Respect and reason, wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye:
Sad pause and deep regard beseech the sage;
My part is youth, and beats those from the stage.
Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then, who fears sinking where such treasure lies?

As corn o'er-grown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of soul hope, and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,

1 Nipped by the frost.

So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.
Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the selfsame seat sits Collatinus:
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits;
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline;
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which, once corrupted, takes the worse part;
And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours;
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece's bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each one by him enforce'd retires his ward;
But as they open they all rate his ill,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard:
The threshold grates the door to have him heard;
Night-wandering woesels shriek, to see him there;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face,
Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
But his hot heart, with fond desire doth scorch,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch:

And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks:
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And gripping it, the needle his finger pricks;
As who should say, this glove to wanton tricks
Is not inur'd; return again in haste;
Thou seest our mistress' ornaments are chaste.

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him;
He in the worst sense construes their denial:
The doors, the wind, the glove, that did delay him,
He takes for accidental things of trial,
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial;
Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

So, so, quoth he; these lets attend the time,
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the prime,
And give the snaped1 birds more cause to sing.
Pain pays the income of each precious thing; [sands,
Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.

Now is he come unto the chamber-door,
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.
So from himself, in pity hath wrought
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited th' eternal power

1 Nipped by the frost.
That his foul thoughts might compass his fair,
And they would stand auspicious to the hour,
Even there he starts:—quoth he, I must deflower:
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
How can they, then, assist me in the act?

Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!
My will is back'd with resolution:
Thoughts are but dreams, till their effects be tried;
The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution;
Against love's fire fear's from bath dissolution.

The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide.
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch:
Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet-unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks.
Rolling his greedy eye-balls in his head:
By their high treason is his heart misled;
Which gives the watch-word to his hand full soon,
To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery pointed sun,
Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is, that she reflects so bright,
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed;
But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O! had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill:
Then Collatine again, by Lucrece's side,
In his clear bed might have reposèd still;
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight.
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss,
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss,
Between whose hills her head intombèd is;
Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
To be admir'd of lewd unhallowed eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like margiolds, had sheath'd their light,
And canopled in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath;
O modest wax! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the lap of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality;
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no strife,
But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered;
Save of their lord, no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured.
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred;
Who, like a foul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see, but mightily he noted?
What did he note, but strongly he desired?
What he beheld, on that he firmly fixed,
And in his will his wilful eye he tired.
With more than admiration he admired
Her azure veins, her albaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified;
Slak'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her side,
His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:

And they, like strangling slaves for pallage fighting,
Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
Nor children's tears, nor mothers' groans respecting,
Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting:
Anon his beating heart,alarum striking,
Gives the hot charge, and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commends the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand
On her bare breast, the heart of all her land.
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,
Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies;
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries:
She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and control'd.

Imagine her as one in dead night.
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a shaking;
What terror is! but she, in worser taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes:
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries;
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
(Rude ram to batter such an ivory wall)
May feel her heart (poor citizen! ) distress'd,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal.
This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity,
To make the breach, and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe;
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still,
Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: The colour in thy face
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,
Shall plead for me, and tell my loving tale;
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never conquer'd fort: the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide:
Thy beauty hath ensn'rd thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will, that marks thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

I see what crosses my attempt will bring,
I know what thorns the growing rose defends,
I think the honey guarded with a sting;
All this beforehand counsel comprehends,
But will is deaf, and hears no heedful friends:
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity,
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy.

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which, like a falcon towering in the skies,
Concheth the fowl below with his wings' shade,
Whose crooked beak threats, if he mount he dies:
So under his insulting falchion lies
Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells,
With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells.

Lucretia, quoth he, this night I must enjoy thee:
If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee.
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay,
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay;
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye;
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy;
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend:
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;

A little harm, done to a great good end,
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe, or birth-hour's blot;
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.

Here, with a cockatrice's dead-killing eye,
He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the grie's sharp claws,
Pleads in a wilderness, where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-fae'd cloud the world doth threat,
In his dim mist th' aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark tomb some gentle gust doth get,
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding,
Hindering their present fall by this dividing:
So his unhallowed haste her words delays,
And moody Pluto winks, while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but daily,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth;
Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth.
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteeth
No penetrable entrance to her plausible:
Tears harden lust, though marble wears with raining.

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fixed
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mixed,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place:
And 'midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin, ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, reward not hospitality;
With such black payment as thou hast pretended;
And not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thy shoot be ended:
He is no wood-man, that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave me;
Myself a weakling, do not then ensnare me;
Thou look'st not like deceit, do not deceive me:
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee.
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans.
All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolve to water do convert.
O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

In Tarquin's likeness I did entreat thee;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrongs't his honour, wound'st his princely name:
Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the same,
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.

How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring?
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not, when once thou art a king?
O, be remember'd! no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away;
Then, kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear;
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love:
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove:
If but for fear of this, thy will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

And wilt thou be the school where lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
With thou be glass, wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame,
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-living laud,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will;
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the way?

Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smoother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother:
O, how are they wrappt in with infamies,
That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes!

To thee, to thee, my heav'd -up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash relief;
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal;
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will prison false desire,
And wipe the dim mist from thy doting eye,
That thou shalt see thy state, and pity mine.

Have done, quoth he: my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this let;
Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret:
The petty streams, that pay a daily debt
To their salt sovereign with their fresh falls' haste,
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.

Thou art, quoth she, a sea, a sovereign king;
And lo! there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
Thy sea within a paddle's womb is hoarded,
And not the paddle in thy sea dispersed.

So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave:
Thou loath'd in their shame, they in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state—
No more, quoth he; by heaven, I will not hear thee:
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear thee;
That done, despitefully I mean to bear the
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
Shame, folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries;
Till with her own white fleece her voice controll'd
Entombs her outery in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears,
He pens her piteous clamours in her head,
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O, that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again;
This forced league doth force a further strife;
This momentary joy breeds months of pain:
This hot desire converts to cold disdain.
Pure chastity is rifed of her store,
And lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look, as the full-fed hound, or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell, or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight:
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring.

O deeper sin, than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
Till, like a jade, self-will himself doth tire.

And then, with lac'd and lean discouler'd cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace,
Feble desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar, waifs his case:
The flesh being proud, desire doth fight with grace;
For there it revols; and when that deys,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faithful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chased;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands disgraced:
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defaced;
To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall
To living death, and pain perpetual:
Which in her presence she controlled still,
But her foresight could not prevent their will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain;
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will despite of cure remain;
Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burden of a guilty mind.

He, like a thievish dog, creeps sadly thence,
She like a weared lamb lies panting there;
He scowls, and hates himself for his offence,
She desperate with her nails his flesh doth tear;
He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear;
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loath'd delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite,
She there remains a hopeless cast-away;
He in his speed looks for the morning light,
She prays she never may behold the day;
For day, quoth she, night's scapes doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practis'd how
To cloke offences with a cunning brow.

They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves beheld,
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold;
For they're guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spice
Against the unseen secrecy of night.

O, comfort-killing night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!
Grim cave of death, whispering conspirator
With close-tong'd treason and the ravisher!

O, hateful, vaporous, and foggy night!
Since thou art guilty of my eyeless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time:
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

With rotten damps ravish the morning air;
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair,
Ere he arrive his weary noon-tide pricks;
And let thy musty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his another'd light
May set at noon, and make perpetual night.

Were Tarquin night, as he is but night's child,
If silver-shining queen he would distain;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,
Through night's black boom should not peep again:
So should I have copartners in my pain;
And fellowship in woes doth woos assuage,
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

Where, now, I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms, and hang their heads with mine,
To mask their brows, and hide their insamy;
But I alone, alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine;
Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

O night! thou furnace of foul reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace:
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made,
May likewise be sepulchred in thy shade.

Make me not object to the tell-tale day
The light which will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote1 my bastardy trespass in my looks.

The nurse to still her child will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name;
The orator to deck his oratory
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love he kept unscepted:
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotten,
And sundry'd reproach to him allotted,
That is as clear from this attain't of mine:
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatine's face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot² afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.

1 Note, observe. 2 Word, mote.
Alas! how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them, knows.

If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept.

Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wreck;
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back;
For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue. — O, unlook'd for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil!

Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud,
Or hateful cuckoo hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

The aged man that cofers up his gold,
Is plag'd with cramps, and gouts, and painful fits,
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits;
Having no other pleasure of his gain,
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

So, then he hath it, when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours,
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring,
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers,
Theadder hisses where the sweet birds sing,
What virtue breeds, iniquity devours;
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill annexed opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

O, Opportunity! thy guilt is great:
'T is thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season:
'T is thou that spur'n at right, at law, at reason:
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
Sits sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire, when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murder'st troth:
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal, and displaceth laid:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast;

Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strides to end,
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chained?
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd.
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds.
Wraith, envy, treason, rape, and murders rage;
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages.

When truth and virtue have to do with thee,
a thousand crosses keep them from thy aid:
They buy thy help; but sin ne'er gives a fee:
He gratis comes, and thou art well appay'd;
As well to hear, as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me,
When Tarquin did; but he was stay'd by thee.

Guilty thou art of murder and of theft;
Guilty of perjury and subordination;
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift;
Guilty of incest, that abomination:
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

Mis-shapen Time, cospmate of ugly night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care;
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's snare;
Thou nurset all, and murderest all that are,
O hear me, then, injurious, shifting Time!
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancel'd my fortunes, and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes;
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn, and sendinel the night,
To wrong the wrangler till he render right;
To ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers.

To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books, and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap, and cherish springs;
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel:

1 Broken, tarnished. 2 Seated. 3 Satisfied. 4 End.
To show the beldame daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild;
To mock the subtle, in themselves beguild;
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops;

Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor retiring 1 minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends:
O! this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,
I could prevent this storm, and shun thy wrath.

Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity
To make him curse this cursed criminal night:
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright,
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

Disturb his hours of rest with restless trance,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance his pitiful mischances,
To make him moan, but pity not his means:
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness.

Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave;
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by alms doth live,
Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how short time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly, and his time of sport:
And ever let his unreckilling crime
Have time to wail th' abusing of his time.

O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill!
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill!
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
For who so base should such an office have
As slanderous death's-man to so base a slave?

The base is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away;
But if the like the snow-white swain desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay;
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day:

And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away;
But if the like the snow-white swain desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay;
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day:
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

My sable ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses:
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sluices,
As from a mountain spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow, sad gait descended.
To ugly hell; when lo! the blushing morrow
Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow:
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping;
To whom she sobbing speaks; O eye of eyes,
Why pry'st thou through my window? leave thy peeping;
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping;
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light;
For day hath nought to do what's done by night.

Thus cavils she with every thing she sees.
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees:
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one; the other wild,
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputation with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare:
No object but her passion's strength renewes,
And as one shifts, another straight ensues:
Sometime her grief is dumb, and hath no words;
Sometime 'tis mad, and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy,
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody;
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy:
Sad souls are slain in merry company;
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly suffi'd,
When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'T is double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines, that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more;
Great grief grieves most at that would do it good;
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows;
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

You mocking birds, quoth she, your tunes entomb
Within your hollow swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb;
My restless discord loves no stops nor rest;
A most hollow hollowness did I amuse,
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps, when time is kept with tears.

Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grave in my dishevel'd hair.
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear:
For burden-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tereus descanst, better skill.

And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part,
To keep thy sharp woen waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart.
Will fix a sharp knife, to affright mine eye,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.

And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seat'd from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold.
To creatures stern sad tunes to change their kinds:
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is sham'd, and death reproach's debtor.

To kill myself, quoth she, alack! what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half, with greater patience bear it,
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion,
Who having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other, and be nurse to none.

My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Whose love of either to myself, was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Al me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His love will wither, and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring infamy:
Then, let it be call'd impartial,
If in this blennish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

Yet die I will not, till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death,
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonour'd,
'T is honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I murder shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd may'st be.
How Tarquin must be read, read it in me:

Terms in music. 2 Melancholy music. 3 i.e. with better skill; "descent" seems to have meant what we now call variation.
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

This brief abridgment of my will I make:—
My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take;
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound;
My shame be his that did my fame confound;
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will:—
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
Whose swift obedience to her mistress'iss;
For fleet'rd duty with thought's feathers flies.
Poor Lucrece' checks unto her maid seem so.
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sort's a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why, her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye,
Even so the maid with swelling drops 'gan wet
Her circled cyme, counc'rd by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky;
Who in a salt'rd-ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling:
One justly weeps, the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling:
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing,
Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts.

For men have marble, women waxen, minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
The weak oppress'd, th' impression strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Things form'd not the authors of their ill
No more than wax shall be accounted evil,
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champagne plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep:
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep,
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the withered flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd.

Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O! let it not be hid!
Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfilled
With men's abuses: those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night, with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong:
Such danger to resistance did belong.

That dying fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining
My girl, quoth she, on what occasion break
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining?
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood
If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

But tell me, girl, when went—(and there she stay'd Till after a deep groan) Tarquin from hence?
Madam, ere I was up, replied the maid;
The more to blame my sluggard negligence:
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense
Myself was stirring ere the break of day;
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness,
O peace! quoth Lucrece; if it should be told,
The repetition cannot make it less;
For more it is than I can well express;
And that deep grief may be call'd a hell,
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen,—
Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
What should I say?—One of my husband's men
Bid thou be ready; by and by, to hear
A letter to my lord, my lover he:
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill;
Conceit and grief an eager combat light;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with will:
This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill;
Much like a press of people at a door
Throng her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins: "Thou worthv lord
Of that unworthy wife that mockest thee,
Health to thy person: next, vowed be't afforded
(If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see)
Some present speed to come and visit me.
So I commend me from our house in grief:
My woes are tedious, though my words are brief."

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality:
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excurse.
Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her;
When sighs and groans and tears may grace the fashion
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her
From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
To shun this blot she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them better,

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told,
For there the eye intercepts to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part a woe doth bear:
'T is but a part of sorrow that we hear;
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ,
"At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste,"
The post attends, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-faced groom to hie as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast:
Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems;
Extremity still urges such extremes.

The homely villain court'sies to her low,
And, blushing on her, with a stedfast eye
Receives the scroll, without or yea or no,
And forth with bashful innocence doth hie;
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie,
Imagine every eye beholds their blame,
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame;

When, sily groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds; while others sanctify
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of a worn-out age
Pawn'd honest looks, but lay'd no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blazed;
She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's lust,
And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed;
Her earnest eye did make him more amazed:
The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish.
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the ducious vassal scarce is gone.
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
So woe hath wearied woe, man tired man,
That she her plaints a little while doth stay,
Praising for means to morn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy,
Threatening cloud-kissing Lion with annoy;
Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
As heaven it seem'd to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life.
Many a dry stop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:
The red blood reek'd to show the painter's strie;

And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,
Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer
Begrim'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
And from the towers of Troy there would appear
The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth quick bearing and dexterity;
And here and there the painter interlaces
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces:
Which heartless peasants did so well resemble, [ble.
That one would swear he saw them quake and trem-

In Ajax and Ulysses, O, what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either 'cipher'd either's heart;
Their face their manners most expressly told:
In Ajax's eyes a blunt rage and rigorous roll'd;
But the mild glance that Ulysses lent.
Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand,
As 't were encouraging the Greeks to fight;
Making such sober action with his hand,
That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the sight.
In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,
Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly
Thick winding breath, which pur'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gazing faces,
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice
All jointly listening, but with several graces,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice:
Some high, some low: the painter was so nice,
The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's ear;
Here one, being thron'd, bears back, all boll'n* and red;
Another, smoother'd, seems to pelt and scurw;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,*
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Grip'd in an armed hand: himself behind
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind.
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong besieged Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector, March'd to field,
Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;
And to their hope they such odd action yield,
That through their light joy seem'd to appear
(Like bright things staid') a kind of heavy fear.

And from the strond of Dardan, where they fought,
To Simois' reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges; and their ranks began
To break upon the galled shore, and than1
Retire again, till meeting greater ranks,
They join, and shoot their foam at Simos’ banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is staid.2
Many she sees, where cares have carved some,
But none where all distress and dolor dwell’d,
Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,
Staring on Priam’s wounds with her old eyes,
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus’ proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz’d
Time’s ruin, beauty’s wreck; and grim care’s reign:
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguiz’d,
Of what she was no semblance did remain;
Here blue blood chang’d to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,
Show’d life imprison’d in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the belam’d woes,
Who nothing wants to answer but her cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes:
The painter was no God to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece sweares he did her wrong,
To give her so much grief, and not a tongue.

Poor instrument, quoth she, without a sound,
I’ll tune thy woe with my lamenting tongue,
And drop sweet balm in Priam’s painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy, that burns so long;
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

Show me the trumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear:
Thine eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here, in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many mo?2
Let sin, alone committed, light alone
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe.
For one’s offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?

Lo! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus swoonds;
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man’s lust these many lives confounds.
Had tuning Priam checked his son’s desire,
Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire.

Here feelingly she weeps Troy’s painted woes;
For sorrow, like a heavy hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell:
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell.
To pencil’d pensiveness and colour’d sorrow; [row.
She lends them words, and she their looks doth bor-

She throws her eyes about the painting, round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament:
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent;
His face, though full of cares, yet show’d content.
Onward Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
So mild, that patience seem’d to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour’d with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show;
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,
A brow unbeat that seem’d to welcome woe;
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He enter’d a show so seeming just;
And therein so ensonce’d his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust,
False-ereaping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fac’d storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skil’d workman this mild image drew
For perjur’d Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew;
Whose words like wild-fire burn’d the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view’d their faces.

This picture she advisely perus’d,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Sinon’s was abused;
So fair a form lodg’d not a mind so ill:
And still on him she gaz’d; and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

It cannot be, quoth she, that so much guile—
(She would have said) can lurk in such a look;
But Tarquin’s shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue, "can lurk" from "cannot" took;
"It cannot be" she in that sense foreseok,
And turn’d it thus; "it cannot be, I find,
But such a face she bore a wicked mind:

For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
(As if with grief or travail he had faint’d)
To me came Tarquin armed; too’ beguil’d?4
With outward honesty, but yet de’il’d
With inward vice; as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

Look, look! how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those sorrow’d tears that Sinon sheds.
Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds:
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity,
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

Such devils steal effects from lightless hell,
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold, heat-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools, and make them bold:

1 Often used, as here, for "then." 2 No other instance is known of the use of this word. In Sonnet XXIV. we have steel’d used in a similar sense. 3 More. 4 so: in med. eda. 5 Masked, or in the guise of.
So Priam's trust false Simon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.

Here, all outrag'd, such passion her assail's,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Simon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest.
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
Fool! fool! quoth she, his wounds will not be sore.

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining.
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining:
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslip'd her thought,
That she with painted images hath spent,
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought.
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woe's in shows of discontent.
It easeth some, though none it ever cured.
To think their doleur others have endured.

But now the mindful messenger, come-back;
Brings home his lord and other company
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black;
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-galls in her dim element.
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

When which her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amaz'dly in her sad face he stares:
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw;
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares;
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befal'n, that thou dost trembling stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?
Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief that we may give redress.

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length, address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is in en prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.
Few words, quoth she, shall fit the trespass best,
Where no excuse can give the fault amending:
In me more woes than words are now depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

Then, be this all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed

A stranger came, and on that pillow lay
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falshion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried, Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

For some hard-favour'd groom of thine, quoth he,
Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee,
And swear I found you where you did fulfill
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be
My fame, and thy perpetual infamy.

With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear:
My bloody judge forbid my tongue to speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes,
And when the judge is rob'd, the prisoner dies.

O! teach me how to make mine own excuse.
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find:
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse,
Immaculate and sacred is my mind;
That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessory yeldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.

Lo! here the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice damn'd up with woe,
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away, that stops his answer so;
But wretched as he is, he strives in vain,
What he breathes out, his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Out-runs the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strain that forc'd him on so fast,
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past;
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendant,
And his untimely frenzy thus awakened;
Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe, too sensible, thy passion maketh
More feeling painful; let it, then, suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.
And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me:
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past, the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

But ere I name him, you fair lords, quoth she,
(Speaking to those that came with Collatine)
Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design,
To chase injustice with revengeful arms: [harms.
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knightly blood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd;
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protection stops, "O! speak, quoth she,
How may this forced stain beavi'd from me?

What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declin'd honour to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again,
And why not I from this compell'd stain?

With this, they all at once began to say,
Her body's stain her mind untaint'd clears;
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears.
No, no, quoth she; no dame, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.

Here, with a sigh as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name: "he, he,? she says.
But more than "he? her poor tongue could not speak;
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
She utters this: he, he, fair lords, 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to me.

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unseathed:
That blow did bail it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breathed:
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeathed
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
Life's last ing date from cancel'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew;
Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw:
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;
And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who like a late-sack'd island vastly stood,
Bar and unpeopled, in this fearful flood.

Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery rigol? goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place:
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes,
Corrupted blood some watery token shows;
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so putrify'd.

Daughter, dear daughter! old Lucretius cries,
That life was mine, which thou hast here deprived.
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live, now Lucrece is unlived?
Thou wast not to this end from me derived.
If children pre-decease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my child-mewborn;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a bare-born'd death by time out-worn.
O! from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was.

O time! cease thou thy course, and last, no longer,
If they suecease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger,
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
Then, live sweet Lucrece; live again, and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee!

By this starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath,
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk; but through his lips doth throve
Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime Tarquin was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:
Then, son and father weep with equal strife,
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says, She's mine. O! mine she is,
Replies her husband: Do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wall'd by Collatine.

O! quoth Lucretius. I did give that life,
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.
Woe, woe! quoth Collatine, she was my wife,
I ow'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd,
"My daughter" and "my wife" with clamours fill'd
The dispers'd air, who holding Lucrece's life,
Answer'd their cries, "my daughter and my wife."

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece's side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece's wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words, and uttering foolish things:

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise,
And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
Thou wronged lord of Rome, quoth he, arise:
Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
Now set thy long-experience'd wit to school.

Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief aid grievous deeds?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow,
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds;
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself that should have slain her foe.

With applause.

Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations,
But kneel with me, and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
That they will suffer these abominations,
Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgraced,
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chased.

Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stained,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,
By all our country rights in Rome maintained,
And by chaste Lucrece's soul, that late complained
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife.

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow;
And to his protestation urg'd the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words allow;
Then, jointly to the ground their knees they bow,
And that deep vow which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence;
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.
SONNETS.

INTRODUCTION.

"Shakespeare's Sonnets. Neuer before Imprinted. At Lon- don By G. Eld for T. T. and are to be solde by William As- ple. 1609." 4to. 40 leaves.

A Lovers complaint. By William Shake-speare," occupies eleven octaves of the volume. The late Mr. Caldecott presented a copy of "Shakespeare's Sonnets" to the Bodleian Library, with the following imprint: "At London By G. Eld for T. T. and are to be solde by John Wright, grelling at Christ Church Gate." It is not doubt the same edition as that "to be solde by William Aspley," for in other respects they agree exactly, excepting that the copy bearing the name of John Wright has no date at the bottom of the title-page: it was very possibly cut off by the binder.

"Shakespeare's Sonnets" were printed under that title, and with the name of the poet in unusually large capital letters, in 1609, and it was not found until we arrive at "A Lover's Complaint," but "Shakespeare's Sonnets" is repeated at the head of the first of the series. Hence we may possibly be warranted in assuming that they were productions well known to have been for some time floating among the lovers and admirers of poetry, and then collected into a volume. The celebrity of the author seems proved, if any proof of the kind were wanting, by the manner in which his Sonnets are prefaced to the third volume of his works.

There is one fact connected with the original publication of "Shakespeare's Sonnets" which has hitherto escaped remark, none of the commentators, apparently, being aware of it; viz. that although there were not two editions of them in 1609, there is an important difference in the title-pages of some copies of the impression of that year, which shows that a bookseller, not hitherto connected with the publication of any of our poet's works, was in some way concerned in the first edition of his "Sonnets," The copy laid before us in 1609, shows that they were printed by G. Eld, for T. T. and were to be sold by William Aspley (without any address); but the late Mr. Caldecott had a copy which stated that they were to be sold by William Aspley, "to whom had been one of the partners in "Much ado about Nothing," 1600, 4to., and "Henry IV.," part ii. 1600, 4to.) but by "John Wright, dwelling at Christ Church Gate." No other copy with which we are acquainted bears the name of Aspley. It is unusual that T. T. had some reason for having it cancelled, and for substituting the name of Aspley for that of Wright: the former might be better known to the ordinary buyers of such books; and to the two quartos plays in which he was interested, he, perhaps, did not think it necessary to append the place where his business was carried on.

The application of the initials T. T., on the title-page, is ascertained from a Register of the Stationers' Company, where the subsequent entry is found:—

"20 May 1609.

There was a bookseller of considerable eminence, who usually put his name at full length upon his title-pages, and why he did not do so in this instance, and also subscribed only T. T. to the dedication of the Sonettes, is a matter we should consider of little or no consequence, if it related to the productions of perhaps any other author but Shakespeare. It sometimes happened of old, that if it were suspected that a work might contain anything publicly or personally objectionable, the printer or the stationer only allowed their initials to appear in connection with it. That such was the case here, there is no sufficient ground for believing; and Eld avowed himself the printer, and Aspley the seller of "Shakespeare's Sonnets." "A Lover's Complaint" has been the subject of much dispute of late years, who was the individual to whom Thorpe dedicated these sonnets, and whom, in a very unpremeditated and peculiar form, he addresses as "Mr. W. H." That form is precisely as follows, on a separate leaf immediately succeeding the title-page:—

TO THE ONLIE BEGETTER, OF THESE INAYING SONNETS.
MR. W. H. ALL HAPINESS.
AND THAT ETERNITIE PROMISED.
BY,
OUR Euer-LIVING, POET,
WISHETH.
The WELL-WISHING.
ADVENTUER IN.
SETTING.
FORTH.
T. T.

We are not aware that there is another instance in our language, at that period, of a dedication of a similar kind, and in a similar style. It was not at all uncommon for booksellers to subscribe dedications; but it more frequently happened after the death of an author than during his life, and never, that we recollect, in a manner so remarkable. The discussion has been carried on with some pertinacity on the question, what person was addressed, as "Mr. W. H.," and various replies have been made to it. Farmer conjectured wildly that he might be William Harl, the poet's nephew, who was only born in 1600. Tyrwhitt guessed from a line in one of the sonnets (Son. xx.) that the name was W. Hughes, or Hows:

"A man in hue, all hues in his controlling" which is thus printed in the 4to, 1609:

"A man in hue all Hue in his controlling."

Although the word "hue" is repeatedly spelled "lue" in the old edition, this is the only instance in which it is printed in Italian type, and with a capital letter, exactly as Wide, in Sonnets CXXV., CXXVI., and CXXXI., where the author plays upon his own name as Mr. Drake imagined that W. H. were the initials of Henry Wriothesly, Earl of Southampton, inverted ("Shakespeare and his Times," vol. ii. p. 62); and of late years Boaden, with great ingenuity, has contended that W. H. means William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke. This last notion seems too much taken for granted by Mr. C. Armitage Brown, in his very clever and, in many respects, original work, Shakespeare's Autobiographical Poems," 8vo. 1881; but we own that we cannot accord in that, or in any other theory that has yet been advanced upon the point. We have no suggestion of our own to offer, and acquiescence in one opinion or in another in no way affects any position regarding them which we might be disposed to take up; but it seems to us the very height of improbability that a bookseller in the year 1609, when peculiar respect was paid to nobility and station, would venture to address an Earl and a Knight of the Garter simply as "Mr. W. H." Hows of British Poets," (Essay, p. 1xxi.) but we can by no means follow him in thinking that Shakespeare's Sonnets have been "over-rated," nor that the Earl of Pembroke could not have been addressed in them, because he was only nine years old in 1600. Shakespeare had written Sonnets at that date, as may be inferred from the unexpressed testimony of Meres, but those in which the Earl has been supposed to be addressed may have been produced at a considerably later period. Still, at the early age of eighteen or nineteen the Earl reached in 1600, it does not seem likely that Shakespeare would have thought it necessary, with so much vehemence, to urge him to marry.
SONNETS.

1st Poem. Sonnets 1 to 126. To his mistress, on her inconstancy.

Mr. Brown asserts, and goes far to prove, that the sonnets were written in 1593–1609, and printed in 1609, and that they were not, as usually supposed, the fruits of his last, or any of the three last, years of his life. I shall show, however, that his arguments are not convincing, and that the sonnets were written and printed in 1594, as they are commonly supposed to have been written.

Mr. Brown's principal argument in support of his theory is, that the sonnets are addressed to a lady for whom he had a very strong affection, and that they correspond in time with the period of his married life. He contends, therefore, that the sonnets were written during that period, and that they were printed in 1609, as the production of a man who was about to marry, and who had a strong affection for a lady who was about to be his wife.

The sonnets were addressed to a lady who was about to be married, and who was about to be the wife of a man who was about to marry her. The sonnets were not written in 1593–1609, but in 1594, as they were printed in 1609.

II.
When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then, being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame, and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer—"This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse,"
Proving his beauty by succession there.
This were to be new made, when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm, when thou feel'st it cold.

III.
Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest,
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unblest some mother.
For where is she so fair, whose un-end'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond,^ who will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.
Unthriftiness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend;
And being frank, she lends to those are free.
Then, beautiful niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For, having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how, when nature calleth thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
Thev unus'd beauty must be tom'd with thee,
Which, used, lives th? executor to thee.

V.
Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same,
And that unfair, which fairly doth excel:
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'er-snow'd and barrenness every where:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was:
But flowers distil'd, though they with winter meet,
Lose but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

VI.
Then, let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distil'd:
Make sweet some phial; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury,
Which Hippocrates those that pay the willing loan;
That 's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one:
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times reign'd thee.
Then what could death do if thou shouldst depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity?
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
-To be death's conquest, and make worms thine heir.

VII.
Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty.
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adores his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage:
But when from high-most pitch with weary ear.
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way.
So thou, (thyselt out-going in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diet, unless thou get a son.

VIII.
Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.
Mark, how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who all in one in one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
Sings this to thee,—thou single wilt prove none.

IX.
Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye,
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee like a makeless^ wife;
The world will be thy widow, and still weep,
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep,
By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mind.
Look, what an unthrift in the world doth spend,
Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And, kept unus'd, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits,
That on himself such murderous shame commits.

X.
For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so un provident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate,
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate.
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind!
Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or, to thyself, at least, kind-hearted prove;
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest
In one of thine, from that which thou departest:
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestowest,
Thou mayst call thine, when thou from youth convertest.
Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase;
Without this, folly, age, and cold decay:
If all were minded so, the times should cease,
And threescore year would make the world away.
Let those whom nature hath not made for store,
Harsh, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish:
Look, whom she best endow'd, she gave the more;
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in beauty cherish.
She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby,
Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hidous night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard;
Then, of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake,
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst time's stealthy work can make defence,
Save breed, to brave him, when he takes thee hence.

O, that you were yourself! but, love, you are
No longer yours, than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give:
So should that beauty which you hold in lease,
Find no determination: then, you were
Yourself again, after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold,
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day,
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O! none but unthrifts. Dear my love, you know,
You had a father: let your son say so.

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck,
And yet, methinks, I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good, or evil luck,
Of plagues, or dearths, or seasons' quality;
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind;
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art,
As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert;
Or else of thee this I prognosticate,
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment;
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows,
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the selfsame sky,
Vain in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then, the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful time debateth with decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And, all in war with time, for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engrave you new.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, time,
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers,
Much like than your painting counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair.
Which this, time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself, keeps yourself still,
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb.
Which hides your life, and shows not half your parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, "this poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ever touch'd earthly faces."n
So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue,
And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,
And stretched metre of an antique song;
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice—in it, and in my rhyme.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date.
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd,
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd;
But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou growest.
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.
SONNETS.

XIX.
Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phoenix in her blood:
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou pleasest,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world, and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O! carve not with thy thorny love's fair brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
Him in thy course untainted do allow,
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet, do thy worst, old Time; despite thy wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XX.
A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted,
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
With shifting change, as is false women's fashion:
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amazeth;
And for a woman worth thou first created;
Till nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defaced,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prickt thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

XXI.
So is it not with me, as with that muse
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use,
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse;
Making a complement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.
O! let me, true in love, but truly write,
And then, believe me, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:
Let them say more that like of hear-say well;
I will not praise, that purpose not to sell.

XXII.
My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou are of one date;
But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate;
For all that beauty that doth cover thee,
Is but the semblance of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me.
How can I, then, be elder than thou art?
O! therefore, love, be of thyself so wary,
As I, not for myself, but for thee will,
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from falling ill.
Presume not on thy heart, when mine is slain;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.
As an unperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
1 worth : in old eds. Theobald made the change.

Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart;
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'er-charg'd with burden of mine own love's might.
O! let my books be, then, the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.
O! learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV.
Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath steel'd
Thy beauty's frame in table of my heart:
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art;
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictur'd lies;
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now, see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art,
They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

XXV.
Let those who are in favour with their stars
Of public honour and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread,
But as the marigold at the sun's eye;
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior, famoused for fight;
After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
Then, happy I, that love and am beloved,
Where I may not remove, nor be removed.

XXVI.
Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit;
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving,
Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
And puts apparel on my tattered loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee; [me.
Till then, not show my head where thou may'st prove

XXVII.
Weary with toil I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work's expired:
For then my thoughts (from far where I abide)
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide.
SONNETS.

Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
Prefers thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beauteous, and her old face new.
Lo! thus by day my limbs, by night my mind,
For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

How can I, then, return in happy plight,
That am debard'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by night, and night by day, oppress'd?
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent alike to tear me;
The one by toil, the other to complain.
How far I toil, still farther off from thee.
I tell the day, to please him thou art bright,
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:
So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night,
When sparkling stars twire not, thou gild'st the even:
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
And night doth nightly make grief's length seem stronger.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Favour'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least:
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Haply I think on thee, and then my state
(Like to the lark at break of day arising
From sullen earth) sings hymns at heaven's gate:
For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings,
That then I seem to change my state with kings.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste:
Then, can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep a fresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight,
Then, can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
Which I now pay, as if not paid before:
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restor'd, and sorrows end.

Thy bosom is endear'd with all hearts,
Which I by lacking have supposed dead,
And there reigns love, and all love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.
How many a holy and obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things remov'd, that hidden in thee lie!
Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my loves gone,

Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
That due of many now is thine alone:
Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
And thou (all they) hast all the all of me.

If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that churl death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time;
And though they be out-stripp'd by every pen,
Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,
Exceeded by the height of happier men.
O! then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
"Had my friend's muse grown with this growing age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love."
XXXVI.
Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blots that do with me remain,
Without thy help by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite.
Which though it alien not love's sole effect,
Yet doth if steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bowailed guilt should do thee shame;
Nor thou with publickind honour me,
Unless thou take that honour from thy name:
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XXXVII.
As a deerepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these, all or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engraven into this stone;
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give,
That in thy abundance am suffic'd,
And by a part of all thy glory live.
Look what is best, that best I wish in thee:
This wish I have; then, ten times happy me!

XXXVIII.
How can my muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O! give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rymers invoicate:
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to out-live long date.
If my sight muse do please these curious days,
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.
O! how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
And what is't but mine own, when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee which thou deserv'st alone.
O absence! what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly dost receive,
And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here, who doth hence remain.

XL.
Take all my loves, my love; yea, take them all;
What hast thou then more than thou hadst before?
No love, my love, that thou may'st true love call:

All mine was thine before thou hadst this more.
Then, if for my love thou my love received,
I cannot blame thee, for my love thou usest;
But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest.
By willful taste of what thyself refusest.
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all thy proper;
And yet love knows it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong, than hate's known injury.
Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows.
Kill me with spites, yet we must not be foes.

XLI.
Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits.
When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well bels,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assaulted;
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will surely leave her till she have prevailed.
Ah me! but yet thou might'st my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there
Where thou art fore'd to break a two-fold truth:
Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII.
That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said, I lov'd her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her;
And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one.
Sweet flattery!—then, she loves but me alone.

XLIII.
When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright are bright in dark directed.
Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
How would thy shadow's form, form happy show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so?
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay?
All days are nights to see, till I see thee,
And nights bright days, when dreams do show thee.

XLIV.
If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
For, then, despite of space, I would be brought
From limits far remote where thou dost stay.
No matter then, although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
As soon as think the place where he would be,
But ah! thought kills me, that I am not thought.
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV.
The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire.
These present absent with swift motion slide:
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy,
Until life's composition be recur'd
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who e'en but now come back again, assured
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then, no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVI.
Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead, that thou in him dost lie,
(A closet never pier'd with crystal eyes)
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'e'ide' this title is impennelled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety, and the dear heart's part:
As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

XLVII.
Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other.
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart:
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them, and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLVIII.
How careful was I, when I took my way,
Each trifle under trusty bars to thrust;
That to my use it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest, and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,

From whence at pleasure thou may'st come and part;
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thiefish for a prize so dear.

XLIX.
Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects;
Against that time, when thou shalt strangely pass,
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye;
When love, convert'd from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity;
Against that time do I encompass me,
Within the knowledge of mine own desert;
And this my hand against myself appeas,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part;
To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
Since why to love I can allege no cause.

L.
How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek (my weary travel's end)
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
"Thus far the miles are measure'd from thy friend!"
The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know,
His rider lov'd not speed made from thee.
The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide;
Which heavily he answers with a groan,
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my mind,
My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

LI.
Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed;
From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
Till I return of posting is no need.
O, what base cause will my car broach then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind;
In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, (of perfect love being made)
Shall neigh (no dull flesh) in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade;
Since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

LII.
So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-looked treasure;
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of solemn pleasure,
Therefore, are feasts so solemn and so rare,
Since seldom coming, in the long year set.
Like stones of worth; they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carenet.
So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special-bles;
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.
LIII.
What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen’s cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
Speak of the spring, and poisont of the year,
The one doth shadow of your beauty show;
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LIV.
O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem,
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
The canker’s blooms have full as deep a dye,
As the perfumed tincture of the roses;
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer’s breath their masked buds discloses;
But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwood’d, and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made:
And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, my verse distils your truth.

LV.
Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone, besmeared’d with sluttish time.
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword, nor war’s quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
’Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
Shall you pace forth: your praise shall still find room
Even in the eyes of all posterity,
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers’ eyes.

LVI.
Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said,
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay’d,
To-morrow sharpen’d in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness,
To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that when they see
Return of love more blest may be the view;
Or call it winter, which being full of care,
Makes summer’s welcome threes more wish’d, more rare.

LIX.
Being your slave, what should I do but tend
Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour,
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour,
When you have bid your servant once adieu:
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought,
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose:
But, like a sad slave, and think of nought,
Save where you are, how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love, that in your will (Though you do any thing) he thinks no ill.

LVIII.
That God forbid, that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your startimes’ pleasure,
Or at your hand th’ account of hours to crave.
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O! let me suffer (being at your beck)
Th’ imprison’d absence of your liberty;
And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,
Without accusing you of injury.
Be where you list; your charter is so strong,
That you yourself may privilege your time:
Do what you will, to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LXI.
If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguiled,
Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burden of a former child?
O! that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done;
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame;
Whether we are mended, or where better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O! sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LX.
Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown’d,
Crooked eclipses ’gainst his glory fight,
And time that gave doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty’s brow;
Feels on the rarities of nature’s truth,
And nothing stands but for his seythe to mow:
And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXI.
Is it thy will, thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send’st from thee
So far from home, into my deeds to pry;
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
1 Pliny. 2 Dog-rose. 3 by: in old eds. Malones made the change.
The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
O no! thy love, though much, is not so great:
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake:
For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

LXII.
Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye,
And all my soul, and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account;
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all parts surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
Beated and chopp'd with tarn'd antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
Self so self-loving were iniquity,
'Tis thee (myself) that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIII.
Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn;
When hours have drain'd his blood, and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travel'd on to age's steepy night;
And all those beauties, whereof now he's king,
Are vanishing, or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now forfear
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life;
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

LXIV.
When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced
The rich proud cost of out-worn buried age;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-raised,
And brass eternal, slave to mortal rage:
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss, and loss with store:
When I have seen such interchange of state;
Or state itself confounded to decay,
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate—
That time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

LXV.
Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'er-sways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O! how shall summer's honey-breath hold out
Against the wretchfull siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but time decays?
O fearfull meditation! where, alack!
Shall the best and beauty from time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O none! unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI.
Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry;—
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needly nothing-trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplaced,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly (doctor-like) controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
Tir'd with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that to die I leave my love alone.

LXVII.
Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impetue,
That sin by him advantage should achieve,
And lace' itself with his society?
Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
And steal dead seeing of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek
Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
Why should he live, now nature bankrupt is,
Beggard of blood to blush through lively veins?
For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
O! him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

LXVIII.
Thus is his check the map of days out-worn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do now;
Before these bastard signs of fair were borne,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead niece made another gay.
In him a holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself, and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth nature store,
To show false art what beauty was of yore.

LXIX.
Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view,
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
All tongues (the voice of souls) give thee that due,
Utering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thine outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
But those same tongues that give thee so thine own,
In other accents do this praise confound,
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds: [kind,
Then (churlish) their thoughts, although their eyes were
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The soluble is this:—that thou dost common grow.

1 Trim, ador. 2 end: in old eds. Tyrwhitt made the change. 3 Solution.
LXX.
That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crown that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater, being wo'd of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
Thou hast past by the ambush of young days,
Either not assail'd, or victor being charged;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy, evermore enlarged:
If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
Then, thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXI.
No longer mourn for me when I am dead,
Than shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it: for love I love you,
That in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
If thinking on me then should make you woe.
O! if (I say) you look upon this verse,
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
But let your love even with my life decay;
Lest the wise world should look into your mon,
And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII.
O! lest the world should task you to recite
What merit liv'd in me, that you should love
After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased,
Theniggard truth would willingly impart.
O! lest your true love may seem false in this,
That for you love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor her you.
For I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXIII.
That time of year thou may'st in me behold,
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
 Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou seest the twilight of such day
As after sun-set fadeth in the west,
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death's second self, that seals up all in rest:
In me thou seest the glowing of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by, [strong.
This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more
To love that well which thou must leave ere long:

LXXIV.
But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay:
When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee.
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
The spirit is thine, the better part of me:
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
The prey of worms, my body being dead;
The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
Too base of thee to be remembered.
The worth of that is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

LXXV.
So are you to my thoughts, as food to life,
Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;
And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found:
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
Doubting the flaxing age will steal his treasure;
Now counting best to be with you alone,
Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure:
Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,
And by and by clean starved for a look;
Possessing or pursuing no delight;
Save what is had or must from you be took.
Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day;
Or glutting on all, or all away.

LXXVI.
Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
So far from variation or quick change?
Why, with the time, do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange?
Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name?
Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?
O! know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument;
So, all my best is dressing old words new;
Spending again what is already spent:
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love, still telling what is told.

LXXVII.
Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste:
The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
And of this book this learning may'st thou taste:
The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show,
Of mouthed graves will give thee memory;
Thou by thy dial's shady stealth may'st know
Time's thievish progress to eternity.
Look, what thy memory cannot contain,
Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
These children muse'd, deliver'd from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII.
So oft have I invok'd thee for my muse,
And found such fair assistance in my verse,
As every alien pen hath got my use,
And under thee their poesy disperse.
Thine eyes that taught the dumb on high to sing,
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing,
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine, and born of thee:
In others' works thou dost but meddle the style,
And arts with thy sweet grace grace be;
But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

WHILST I ALONE DID CALL UPON THY AID,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd, and
My sick muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent,
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
From thy behaviour; beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then, thank him not for that which he doth afford,
Since what he owes thee, thou thyself dost pay

O! how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame:
But since your worth (wide as the ocean is)
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth willfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building, and of goodly pride.
Then, if he thrive, and I be cast away,
The worst was this—my love was my decay

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten:
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.
Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though I, once gone, to all the world must die;
The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;
And tongues to be your being shall rehearse,
When all the breathers of this world are dead;
You still shall live (such virtue hath my pen),
Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

I grant thou wert not married to my muse,
And, therefore, may'st without attain't o'er-look
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise;
And, therefore, art enforc'd to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
And do so, love; yet when they have devis'd
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou, truly fair, wert truly sympathiz'd

In true plain words, by thy true-telling friend;
And their gross painting might be better used
Where cheeks need blood: in thee it is abused.

I never saw that you did painting need,
And, therefore, to your fair no painting set;
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
The barren tender of a poet's debt:
And, therefore, have I slept in your report,
That you yourself, being extant, well might show
How far a modern quill doth come too short,
Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.
This silence for my sin you did impute,
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
For I impair not beauty being mute,
When others would give life, and bring a tomb.
There lives more life in one of your fair eyes,
Than both your poets can in praise devise.

Who is it that says most? which can say more,
Than this rich praise, that you alone are you?
In whose confines immered is the store,
Which should example where your equal grew.
Lean penury with him that you doth dwell,
That to his subject lends not some small glory;
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterfeit shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired every where.
You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

My tongue-tied muse in manners holds her still,
While comments of your praise, richly compiz'd,
Reserve their character with golden quill,
And precious phrase by all the musest fill'd.
I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,
And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry "Amen";
To every hymn that able spirit affords,
In poiz'd form of well-refined pen.
Hearing you praise'd, I say, "It is so, 'tis true,"
And to the most of praise add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before;
Then, others for the breath of words respect,
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhere,
Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
Was it the spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
Giving him aid, my verse astonished:
He, nor that affable familiar ghost,
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast.
I was not sick of any fear from fleuece;
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.
LXXXVII.
Farewell: thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
Or me, to whom gav'st it, else mistaking;
So thy great gift, upon miscroption growing,
Comes home again, on better judgment making.
Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flutter,
In sleep a king, but waking, no such matter.

LXXXVIII.
When thou shalt be disposed to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight;
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn:
With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted,
That thou, in losing me, shalt win much glory:
And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double vantage me.
Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

LXXXIX.
Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence:
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt;
Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not love, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace: knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strange, and look strange;
Be absent from thy walks; and in my tongue
Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
Lest I (too much profane) should do it wrong,
And haply of our old acquaintance tell.
For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

XC.
Then, hate me when thou wilt; if ever: now:
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in form an after loss.
Ah! do not, when my heart hath seap'd this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpose overthrow.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their splice,
But in the onset come: so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
Compar'd with loss of thee, will not seem so.

XCI.
Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their body's force;
Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill;
Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;
And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherin it finds a joy above the rest;
But these particulars are not my measure:
All these I better in one general best.
Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast:
Wretched in this alone, that thou may'st take
All this away, and me most wretched make.

XCII.
But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine:
Then, need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end:
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend,
Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
Since that my life on thy revoit doth lie.
O! what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die:
But what's so blessed fair that fears no blot?
Thou may'st be false, and yet I know it not.

XCIII.
So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new;
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place:
For there can live no hatred in thine eye;
Therefore, in that I cannot know thy change.
In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods, and frowns, and wrinkles strange;
But heaven in thy creation did decree,
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
What'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

XCIV.
They that have power to hurt, and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die;
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity;
For sweetest things turn sourer by their deeds:
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

XCV.
How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame,
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name?
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose?
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
(Making lascivious comments on thy sport)
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;

Some say, thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say, thy grace is youth, and gentile sport;
Both grace and faults are lov’d of more and less:
Thou mak’st faults graces, which to thee resort.
As on the finger of a crowned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem’d,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated, and for true things deem’d.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldest use the strength of all thy state!
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XCVII
How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen,
What old December’s barreness every where!
And yet this time remov’d was summer’s time;
The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
Like widow’d wombs after their lords’ decease:
Yet this abundant issue seem’d to me
But hope of orphans, and unfather’d fruit;
For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
Or, if they sing, ‘tis with so dull a cheer.
That leaves look pale, dreading the winter’s near.

XCVIII
From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied April, dress’d in all his trim,
Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
That heavy Saturn laugh’d and leap’d with him:
Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell
Of different flowers in colour and in hue,
Could make me any summer’s story tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew:
Nor did I wonder at the lily’s white,
Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose;
They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
Drawn after you; you pattern of all those.
Yet seem’d it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow I with these did play:

XCIX
The forward violet thus did I chide:—
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that
If not from my love’s breath? the purple pride [smells,
Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwellst,
In my love’s veins thou hast too grossly dyed.
The lily I condemned for thy hand,
And buds of marjoram had stoln thy hair:
The roses fearfully thy hands did stand,
One blushing shame, another white despair;
A third, nor red nor white, had stolen of both,
And to this robbery had annex’d thy breath;

But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
A vengeful canker cat him up to death.
More flowers I noted, yet I none could see,
But sweet or colour it had stoln from thee.

C
Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget’st so long
To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?
Spend’st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Darkening thy power to lend base subjects light?
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so idly spent:
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem;
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, Resty Muse, my love’s sweet face survey,
If Time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time’s spoils despised everywhere.
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;
So thou prevent’st his seythe, and crooked knife.

CI
O truant Muse! what shall be thy amends,
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say,
“Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix’d;
Beauty no penell, beauty’s truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix’d.”
Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
Excuse not silence so; for ‘tis lies in thee
To make him much out-live a gilded tomb,
And to be prais’d of ages yet to be.
Then, do thy office, Muse: I teach thee how
To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

CII
My love is strengthen’d, though more weak in seeming
I love not less, though less the show appear:
That love is merchandiz’d, whose rich esteeming
The owner’s tongue doth publish every where.
Our love was new, and then but in the spring;
When I was wont to greet it with my lays;
As Philomel in summer’s front doth sing,
And stops his pipe in growth of riper days.
Not that the summer is less pleasant now,
Than when her mournful hymns did bush the night,
But that wild music burdens every bough,
And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue,
Because I would not dull you with my song.

CIII
Alack! what poverty my muse brings forth,
That having such a scope to show her pride,
The argument, all bare, is of more worth,
Than when it hath my added praise beside.
O! blame me not, if I no more can write:
Look in your glass, and there appears a face,
That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
Dulling my lines, and doing me disgrace.
Were it not sinful, then, striving to mend,
To mar the subject that before was well?
For to no other pass my verses tend,
Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;
And more, much more, than in my verse can sit,
Your own glass shows you, when you look in it.
CIV.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
For as you were, when first your eye I ey'd,
Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
Have from the forests shook three summers' pride;
Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd,
In process of the seasons have I seen;
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.
Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial hand,
Steal from his figure, and no pace perceived;
So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceived:
For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred.—
Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

CV.

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all amike my songs and praises be,
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore, my verse to constancy confin'd,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
Fair, kind, and true, is all my argument,
Fair, kind, and true, varying to other words;
And in this change is my invention spent.
Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.
Fair, kind, and true, have Often liv'd alone.
Which three, till now, never kept seat in one.

CVI.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme,
In praise of ladies dead, and lovely knights;
Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing;
For we, which now behold these present days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVII.

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world, dreaming on things to come,
Can yet the lease of my true love control,
Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
Now, with the drops of this most balmy time,
My love looks fresh, and death to me subscribes,
Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes;
And then in this shall find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests, and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII.

What's in the brain that ink may characterize,
Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what now to register,
That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same,
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
So that eternal love, in love's fresh case,
Weighs not the dust and injury of age;
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page;
Finding the first cement of love there bred,
Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.

O! never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
As easy might I from myself depart,
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie.
That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again,
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd;
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my Rose; in it thou art my all.

CX.

Alas! 'tis true, I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view;
God'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear
Made old offences of affections new:
Most true it is, that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely; but, by all above,
These blemishes gave my heart another youth,
And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love.
Now all is done, save what shall have no end:
Mine appetites I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.
Then, give me welcome, next my heaven the best,
Even to thy pure, and most most loving breast.

CXI.

O! for my sake do you with fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide
Than public means, which public manners breeds:
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand;
And almost thence my nature is subdu'd
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.
Pity me, then, and wish I were renew'd,
Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Poisons of eyelet against my strong infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me, then, dear friend, and I assure ye;
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

CXII.

Your love and pity doth th' impression fill
Which vulgar scandal staun'd thou did upon my brow;
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?
You are my all-the-world, and I must strive
To know my shames and praises from your tongue;
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
SONNETS.

That my steel'd sense or changes, right or wrong.
In so profound abyss I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:
You are so strongly in my world's bred,
That all the world besides methinks they are dead.1

C.XIII.

Since I left you mine eye is in my mind,
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function, and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch?2
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rudest or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour, or deformed'st creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crown or dove, it shapes them to your feature:
Ineasible of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrues.2

C.XIV.

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?
Or whether shall I say, my eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,
To make, of monsters and things indigest,
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O! 't is the first: 't is flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kindly drinks it up:
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup:
If it be poison'd, 't is the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

C.XV.

Those lines that I before have writ do lie,
Even those that said I could not love you dearer;
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reckoning time, whose million'd accidents
Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharpest intents,
Divert strong minds 't the course of altering things;
Alas! why, fearing of time's tyranny,
Might I not then say, "now I love you best,"
When I was certain 'o uncertainty;
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a babe; then, might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

C.XVI.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments: love is love, Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove: O no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
That looks on tempests, and is never shaken:
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come; Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error, and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

C.XVII.

Accuse me thus: that I have santeed all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay;
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereeto all bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown minds,
And given to time your own dear-purchase'd right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
Which should transport me farthest from your sight:
Book both my watchfulness and yours down,
And on just proof surmise accumulat;
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate,
Since my appeal says, I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

C.XVIII.

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge;
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-enjoying sweetness,
To bitter savours did I frame my feeding;
And, sick of will, found a kind of meekness
To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.
Thus policy in love, 't anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assured,
And brought to medicine a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd;
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

C.XIX.

What potions have I drunk of syren tears,
Distill'd from limbeckes foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
In the distraction of this madding fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true,
That better is by evil still made better;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuk'd to my content,
And gain by ill three times more than I have spent.

C.XX.

That you were once unknow'd friends me now,
And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,
Needs must I under my transgression bow,
Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
As I by yours, you have pass'd a hell of time;
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O! that our night of woe might have remember'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits;
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits!
But that your trespass now becomes a fee;
Mincs ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

1 methinks y' are dead: in old cop. Dyce omits "they," 2 lack: in old eds. Malone made the change. 3 used as a substantive.
SONNETS.

CXVI.

'Tis better to be vile, than vile esteemed,
When not to be receives reproach of being;
And the just pleasure lost, which is so deemed,
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing:
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give salutation to my sportive blood?
Or on my frailties why are trailer spies.
Which in their wills count bad what I think good?
No, I am that I am; and they that level
At my abuses, reckon up their own:
I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel.
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown;
Unless this general evil they maintain,
All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

CXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successor heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame;
For since each hand hath put on nature's power,
Fairing the soul with art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore, my mistress' eyes are raven black,
Her eyes so suited; and they mourners seem
At such, who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Slandering creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says, beauty should look so.

CXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music playest,
Upon that blessed wood, whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently swayest
The wavy concord that mine ear confound'st,
Do I envy those jacks,1 that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,
Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand.
To be so tickled, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more bless'd than living lips.
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXIX.

Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust
Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to-trust;
Enjoy'd no sooner but despis'd straight;
Past reason hunted, and no sooner had,
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait;
On purpose laid to make the taker mad:
Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme:

 Which prove more short than waste or ruiniug?
Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour
Lost, and all, and more, by paying too much rent;
For compound sweet foregoing simple savour,
Pitiful thrifters, in their gazing spent?
No; let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul,
When most impeach'd, stands least in thy control.

CXV.

O thou, my lovely boy! who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle, hour;
Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st
Thy lovers withering, as thy sweet self grow'st;
If nature, sovereign mistress over wreck,
As thou goest onwards will still pluck thee back,
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace, and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
She may detain, but not still keep her treasure:
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

CXVI.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for fortune's bastard be unfathered,
As subject to time's love, or to time's hate,
Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gathered.
No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thrall'd discontent,
Whereeto th' inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short number'd hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with showers.
To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

CXV.

Were 't taught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great bases for eternity,
1 The keys of the virginal.
A bliss in proof,—and prov'd, a very woe!
Before, a joy propos'd, a dream.
All this the world well knows, yet none knows well
To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

CXXX.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
I love to hear her speak; yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound:
I grant I never saw a goddess go;
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground.
And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;
For well thou know'st, to my dear doting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
Thy face hath not the power to make love groan:
To say they err not dare not be so bold,
Although I swear to myself alone.
And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear,
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
In nothing art thou black, save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black, and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And, truly, not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even
Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face.
O! let it, then, as well beseech thy heart.
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part;
Then will I swear, beauty herself is black,
And all they soul that thy complexion lack.

CXXXIII.

Beshrew that heart, that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be?
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engrossed:
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
A torment thrice threefold thus to be crossed.
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But, then, my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;
Who'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my jail:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will;
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous, and he is kind;
He learn'd but, surety-like, to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend, came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me:
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

CXXXV.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,
And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus;
More than enough am I, that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracius,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store:
So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will
One will of mine, to make thy large Will more.
Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

CXXXVI.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fullfil.
Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.
In things of great receipt with ease we prove,
Among a number one is reckond none:
Then, in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is Will.

CXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is, take the worst to be.
If eyes. corrupt by over-partial looks,
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Where to the judgment of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot,
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
Or mine eyes seeing this, say, this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In things right true my heart and eyes have erred,
And to this false plague are they now transfigured.
CXXXVIII.
When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtilties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue:
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
But wherefore says she not, she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I, that I am old?
O! love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her, and she with me.
And in our faults by lies we slatter'd be.

CXXXIX.
O! call not me to justify the wrong,
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue,
Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lovest else where; but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside: [might
What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy
Is more than my o'er-press'd defence can hide?
Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been mine enemies,
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries.
Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
Kill me out-right with looks, and rid my pain.

CXLI.
Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians know:
For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee;
Now this ill-wrestling world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.
That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go

CXLI.
In faith I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 't is my heart that loves what they despise,
Who in despite of view is pleas'd to dote.
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted;
Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits, nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leave unseaw'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be:
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

CXLII.
Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving.
O! but with mine compare thou thine own state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan'd their sacred ornaments,
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine,
Robb'd others' beds revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee;
Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example may'st thou be denied!
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more.

So shalt thou feed on death, that feeds on men.
And, death once dead, there's no more dying then.

CXLVII.

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease;
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
Th' uncertain sickly appetite to please.

My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve,
Desire is death, which physic did except.

Past cure am, now reason is past care,
And frantic mad with ever-more unrest:
My thoughts and discourse as mad men's are,
At random from the truth vainly express'd;

For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII.

O me! what eyes have love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight!
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
That censures falsely what they see aright?

If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What meaneth the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's eye is not so true as all men's: no,
How can it be, I? O! how can love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?

No marvel, then, though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not, till heaven clears.

O cunning love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX.

Canst thou, O Cruel! say, I love thee not,
When I, against myself, with thee partake? 2
Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hatest thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
Nay, if thou love'st me, do I not spend
Revenge upon myself with present moan?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?

But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind:
Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

CL.

O! from what power hast thou this powerful might,
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight.
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?

Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
That in my mind thy worst all best exceeds?

Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?

O! though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou shouldst not abhor my state:
If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

CLI.

Love is too young to know what conscience is;
Yet who knows not, conscience is born of love?
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
Least guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove:

For, thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may
Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason,
But rising at thy name, doth point out thee
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.

No want of conscience hold it, that I call
Her love, for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII.

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
In vowing new hate after new love bearing.

But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
And all my honest faith in thee is lost:

For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
And to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
Or made them swear against the thing they see;
For I have sworn thee fair: more perjur'd I,
To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

CLIII.

Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep;
A maid of Diana's this advantage found,
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
Which boy, with this hot brand my love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove,
Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.

But at my mistress' eye love's brand new-fired,
The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
I sick withal, the help of bath desired,
And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,

But found no cure: the bath for my help lies
Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes.

CLIV.

The little Love-god lying once asleep,
Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
Whilst many nymphs, that vow'd chaste life to keep,
Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
The fairest votary took up that fire
Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd:
And so the general of hot desire
Was, sleeping, by a virgin hand disarm'd.
This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
Which from love's fire took heat perpetual,
Growing a bath, and healthful remedy
For men diseas'd; but I, my mistress' thrill,
Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

From off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A plaintful story from a sistering vale,
My spirits t' attend this double voice accorded,
And down I laid to list the sord-tum'd tale;
Ere long easy'd a fickle maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcase of a beauty spent and done;
Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quift; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of earl'd age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
Which on it had concised characters,
Laudering the silk'd figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As some shrieking undistinguish'd woe
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her level'd eyes their carriage ride,
As she did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometimes, diverted, their poor balls are tied
To the orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend Their view right on; anon their gazes tend
To every place at once, and no where fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose, nor tied in formal plight,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride;
For some, untack'd, descended her sheav'd hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside;
Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And, true to bondage, would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maud' she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of bedded jet,
Which one by one she in a river throw,
Upon whose weeping margin she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet,
Or monarchs' hands, that not bounty fall
Where want cries "some," but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she purus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood
Crack'd many a ring of posed gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet more letters sadly pen'd in blood,
With sleided silk feat and affectedly
Enemy'd and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan' to tear;
Cry'd, O false blood! thou register of lies,
What unapproved witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here.
This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh,
Sometimes a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew,
Towards this afflicted fancy hastily drew;
And, privileg'd by age, desires to know,
In brief, the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied,
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'T is promis'd in the charity of age.

Father, she says, though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself, and to no love beside.

But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit, it was to gain my grace;
O! one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodg'd, and newly defied.

His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silk'd parcels hurls:
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find;
Each eye that saw him did enchain the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn,
What largeness thinks in paradise was sawn.

Small show of man was yet upon his chin:
His phoenix down began but to appear,
Like unshorn velvet, on that term'nless skin.
Whose bare out-brag'd the web it seem'd to wear;
Yet show'd his visage by that cost most dear,
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

Malone made the change.  2 The northern provincialism for sour.
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maicien-tong'd he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.
His rudeness so, with his authoriz'd youth,
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

Well could he ride, and often men would say,
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection. noble by the sway,
[makes]!
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing siezed.

But quickly on this side the verdict went.
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came for additions, yet their purport'd trim
Piece'd not his grace, but were all grace'd by him.

So on the tip of his subduing tongue,
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laugher weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will:

That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchant'd,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunt'd:
Consents, bewitch'd, ere he desire have granted;
And dialogued for him what he would say.
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in th' imagination set
The godly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, their in thought assign'd;
And labouring in more pleasures to bestow them,
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them.

So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppose'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, (not in part)
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserv'd the stalk, and gave him all my flower.

Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor, being desir'd, yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid,
With safest distance I mine honour shielded.
Experience for me many bulwarks build'd
Of proofs new-bleding, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

But ah! who ever Shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself essay?
Or fore'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-passe'd peri's in her way?
Counsel may stop a while what will not stay;

For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof,
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
O appetite, from judgment stand aloof!
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though reason weep, and cry, "it is thy last."

For farther I could say, "this man's untrue,"
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew,
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling;
Thought characters, and words, merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he 'gan besiege me: "Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to you sworn, to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unio,
Till now did never invite, nor never vow.

All my offences that abroad you see,
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind:
Love made them not: with nature they may be,
Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame did find,
And so much less of shame in me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.

Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warmed,
Or my affection put to the smallest teen, 4
Or any of my leisures ever charmed:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harmed;
Kepth hearts in liveries, but mine own was free,
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchical.

Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
Of paled pearls, and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood
In bloodless white and the enermiz'd mode;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
E necamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

And lo! behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleach'd,
I have receiv'd from many a several fair
(Their kind acceptance weeping beseech'd)With the annexations of fair gems enrich'd,
And deep-brain'd sons, that did amplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

The diamond; why, 't was beautiful and hard,
Where to his invis'd properties did tend,
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire, and the opal blend
With objects manifold: each several stone,
With wit well blazon'd, smil'd, or made some moan.

Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and subdued desires the tender,
Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render;
That is, to you, my origin and ender:
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you expatiate me.

O! then, advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white weights down the airy scale of praise;
Take all these similes to your own command,
Hallow'd with sights that burning lungs did raise;
What me, your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distant parcels in combined sums.

Lo! this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms' dote:
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

But O, my sweet! what labour is 't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives?
Paling the place which did no form receive;
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyres?
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The seas of battle scath'd by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

O, pardon me, in that my boast is true!
The accident which brought me to her eye,
Upon the moment did her force subdued,
And now she would the caged cloister fly;
Religious love put out religion's eye:
Not to be tam'd, would she be immur'd;
And now, to tempt all, liberty procured.

How mighty then you are, O hear me tell!
The broken bosoms that to me belong,
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congeat,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

My parts had power to charm a sacred sun,
Who, disciplin'd, I dieted in grace,
Believ'd her eyes, when they t' assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine;
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

When thou impressest, what are precepts worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame?
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense,'gainst
shame;
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aches of all-forces, shocks, and fears.

Now, all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make 'gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath,
That shall prefer and undertake my troth.

This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were level'd on my face;
Methi cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward tow'd apace.
O, how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who, glad'd with crystal, gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue incloses.

O father! what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear;
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O elef't effect! cold modesty, hot wraiths,
Both fire from hence and chill extinguish hath!

For lo! his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv'd my reason into tears;
My white stole of chastity I daff'd;
Shook off my sober guards, and civil fears;
Appeared to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore,
His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

In him a plenteous of subtle matter,
Applied to cauter's, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either's apiness, as it best deencies
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white, and swoon at tragic shows:

That not a heart which in his level came,
Could seape the hail of his all-hurting aim,
Shewing fair nature is both kind and tame,
And veild in them, did win whom he would main:
Against the thing he sought he would exclain;
When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury,
He preach'd pure maid, and prais'd cold chastity.

Thus, merely with the garment of a grace
The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd;
That th' unexperienc'd gave the tempter place,
Which, like a cherubin, above them hover'd.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd?
Ah me! I fell; and yet do question make,
What I should do again for such a sake.

O, that infected moisture of his eye!
O, that false fire, which in his cheek so glowed!
O, that fore'd thunder from his heart did fly!
O, that sad breath his spungy lungs bestowed!
O, all that borrow'd motion, seeming owed,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled maid!
THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM.

INTRODUCTION.

[The Passionate Pilgrimage By W. Shakespeare. At London Printed for W. Jaggard, and are to be sold by W. Leake, at the Greyhound in Paukes Churhychard. 1599. 15mo. 90 leaves. The title-page first given to the edition of 1612 ran thus: "The Passionate Pilgrimage. Or Certain Amorous Sonnets, belonging to the Passionate Pilgrimage, 1599; the same, augmented. By W. Shakespeare. The Third Edition. Whereunto is newly added two Looe-Epoisses, the first from Paris to Helen, and Helen's answers backe againe to Paris. Printed by W. Jaggard." The title-page substituted for the above differs in no other respect but in the omission of "By W. Shakespeare."]

In the following pages we have reprinted "The Passionate Pilgrimage," 1599, as it came from the press of W. Jaggard, with the exception only of the orthography. Many omitted several portions of it; some because they were substantially repetitions of poems contained elsewhere, and others because they appeared to have been improperly assigned to Shakespeare: one piece, the last in the tract, is two-fold—of that Barnfield formally, and in his own name, printed them as his in 1598; and next, that he reprinted them under the same circumstances in 1605, notwithstanding that he had seen the earlier edition. The truth seems to be that W. Jaggard took them in 1599 from Barnfield's publication, printed by John Jaggard in 1598. In 1599 W. Jaggard went even more boldly to work; for in the impression of "The Passionate Pilgrimage," 1599, he only reprinted Barnfield's poems of 1598, but included two of Ovid's Epistles, which had been translated by Thomas Heywood, and printed by him with his name in "The Troia Britannica," 1599. The Epistles were added, with some little ambiguity, to appear in "The Passionate Pilgrimage" of 1612, to have been also the work of Shakespeare. When, therefore, Heywood published his next work in 1612, he exposed the wrong that had been thus done to him, and claimed the performances as his own. (See the Reprint of "The Apology for Actors," by the Shakespeare Society, pp. 62 and 66.) He seems also to have explained to W. Jaggard; for the latter cancelled the title-page of "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1612, which contained the name of Shakespeare, and substituted another without any name, so far discrediting Shakespeare's right to the work contained, although some were his beyond all dispute. Malone's copy in the Bodleian Library has both title-pages.

To what extent, therefore, we may accept W. Jaggard's assertion of the authorship of Shakespeare of the poems in "The Passionate Pilgrimage," 1599, is a question of some difficulty. Two Sonnets, with which the little volume opens, are contained (with variations, on which account we print them here) in Thorpe's edition of "Shakespeare's Sonnets," 1609: three other Sonnets are added to "Love's Labour's Lost," which had been printed the year before "The Passionate Pilgrim" originally came out:—and, it is said, "their author, notoriously belonging to Marlowe and Raleigh; a sonnet, with some slight differences, had been printed as his in 1596, by a person of the name of Griffin; while one production appeared in "England's Helicon" in 1600, under the signature of Lyndo. The various circumstances attending these, wherever any remark seemed required, are stated in our notes, and it is not necessary therefore to enter further into the question here. It ought to be mentioned, that although the signatures at the bottom of the page are common, to the copy containing this poem beginning, "Lord, how mine eyes throw gaves to the east!" we meet with a new and dateless title-page, which runs thus:—"Sonnets to sundry Notes of Musick. At London Printed for W. Jaggard, and are to be sold by W. Leake, at the Greyhound in Paukes Churhychard." Hence we may infer that all the productions inserted after this division had been set by popular composers: that some of them had received a fresh title, and that the double title-page was used, as a band-aid, in their place. We refer particularly to the lyrical poem, "My floosk ied not," (p. 982) and to the well-known lines, "Live with me and be my love," (p. 989) the air to which seems to have been so well received by the public; and, in connection with this, we refer to the "Strange Histories," 1607, p. 83 of the reprint by the Percy Society.

One object with W. Jaggard in 1612, when he republished "The Passionate Pilgrimage," for the second time, was probably to swell the bulk of it; and so much had he felt this want in 1599, that, excepting the three last leaves, all the rest of the volume is printed on one side of the paper only, a peculiarity we do not recall to belong to any other work of the time: by the insertion of Heywood's translations from Ovid, this course was rendered unnecessary in 1612, and although the volume is still of small bulk, it was not so insignificant in its appearance as it had been in 1599. Only a single copy of the edition is known, although it is very probable that it had been republished in the interval between 1609 and 1612.

Nicholas Breton seems to have written his "Passionate Shepherd," 1604, in imitation of the title and of the style of some of the poems in the "Passionate Pilgrimage." To the two first books of the production "Love's Labour's Lost," which Breton was led to imitate the title, and of verse form of some of the pieces in it. As "The Passionate Shepherd" is a great curiosity, not being even mentioned by bibliographers, and it is thus connected with the name and works of Shakespeare, an exact copy of the title-page may be acceptable.

The Passionate Shepherds, or The Shepherds Lame: set down in Passions to his Shepherdesses Aglais. With many excellent conceited Poems and pleasant Sonnets, fit for young heads to pass away the time with ease. Also, by W. Shakespeare, and are to be sold at his Shop, at the Tower-Hill, near the Bulwarks Gate. 1604. 4to.

It is as small a poetical volume as we remember to have seen, excepting a copy of George Peele's "Tale of Troy," which was reprinted in 1604, of the size of an inch and a half high by an inch the edition of 1609, we believe, has been preserved, and that is among Capell's books in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge. No other copy of "The Passionate Pilgrim" of 1612 has the two title-pages, with and without the name of Shakespeare, but that formerly belonging to Malone, and belonged to him, with so many other valuable rarities, to the Bodleian Library.

"The Passionate Pilgrim," 1699, concludes with a piece of moral satire, "Whilst asickle fortune strives," &c., and we have followed it by a poem found only in a publication by Broad. It contains some curious variations from the text of the first edition in 1609. 46.

1 It is called "Love's Martyr, or Rosalin's Complaint." Of the author or editor nothing is known; but he is not to be confounded with Charles Chester, called Carlo Bufons in Ben Jonson's "Every Man out of his Humour," and respecting whom see Nash's "Pierce
Robert Chester, dated 1601. Malone preceded "The Phoenix and the Turtle," by the song "Take, O! take these lips away:" this we have not thought it necessary to repeat, because we have given the whole of it, exactly in the same words, in "Measure for Measure," Act IV., Sc. I. The first edition in which it is found is in Beaumont and Fletcher's "Bloody Brother.
It may be doubted, therefore, whether Shakespeare wrote it, or,
like Beaumont and Fletcher, only introduced part of it into his play as a popular song of the time.

Penniman," 1692. (Shakespeare Society's reprint, pp. 38, 59)
and Thomas's "Anecdotes and Traditions," (printed for the Camden Society) p. 55. Charles Chester is several times mentioned by name in "Skeat's "Anecdotes and Traditions," by E. Gillpix, printed in 1695, as well as in "Ulysses upon Ajax," 1606.

I.

When my love swears that she is made of truth
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth
Unskilful in the world's false perjuries;
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although I know my years be past the best,
I smiling credit her false speaking tongue,
Out-facing faults in love with love's ill rest.
But wherefore says my love that she is young?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told.
Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me,
Since that our faults in love thus smoother'd be.

II.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The wiser spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt a saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her fair pride:
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend.
Suspect I may, but not directly tell;
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell.
The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

III.

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthy, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me.
My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is:
Then thou fair sun, that on this earth dost shine,
Exhale this vapour now; in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broke, what fault is so not wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

I. This sonnet is substantially the same as Sonnet cxxxviii. in the quarto published by Thorp, in 1609. 2 This sonnet is also included in the collection of 1609. (Sonnet cxxxv.) but with some verbal variations. 3 This sonnet is found in "Love's Labour's Lost," but with some slight variations. Published in 1609. 4 We may suspect, notwithstanding the concurrence of the two ancient editions in our text, that the true reading was sugar'd, the long s having been, as in other places, mistaken for the letter f. 5 This poem, with variations, is read by Sir Nathaniel, in "Love's Labour's Lost."
VII.

Fair is my love, but not so fair as sickle,
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle,
Softer than wax, and yet as iron rusty:
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
None fairer, nor none falser to deface her.

Her lips to mine how often hath she joined,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
How many tales to please me hath she coined,
Dreading my love, the loss whereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out burneth;
She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
She bade love last, and yet she fell a turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII.

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then, must the love be great twixt thee and me.
Because thou lovest the one, and I the other.
Doulant to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense:
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such,
As passing all conceit needs no defence.
Thou lovest to hear the sweet melodions sound
That Phæbus' lute (the queen of music) makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feign,
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX.

Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of love,2
Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adonis sake, a youngster proud and wild;
Her stand she takes upon a steep up hill:
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds;
She silly queen, with more than love's good will,
Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds.
Once, (quoth she) did I see a fair sweet youth
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See, in my thigh, (quoth she,) here was the sore.
She showed hers; she saw more wounds than one,
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

X.

Sweet rose, fair flower, unhurly pluck'd, soon faded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and faded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack! too timely shaded,
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, (through wind) before the fall should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why? thou leav'st me nothing in thy will.
And yet thou leav'st me more than I did crave;
For why? I craved nothing of thee still:
O yes, (dear friend,) I pardon crave of thee:
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

XI.4

Venus with Adonis sitting by her,
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, she fell to him.
Even thus, (quoth she) the warlike god embrac'd me;
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms;
Even thus, (quoth she) the warlike god unlace'd me,
As if the boy should use like loving charms:
Even thus, (quoth she) he seiz'd on my lips,
And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning, nor her pleasure.
Ah! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I ran away!

XII.

Crabbed age and youth
Cannot live together;
Youth is full of pleasure,
Age is full of care:
Youth like summer morn,
Age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave,
Age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport,
Age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame;
Youth is hot and bold,
Age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame;
Age, I do abhor thee,
Youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee;
O, sweet shepherd! his thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long.

XIII.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good,
A shining glass that fadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies, when first it 'gin's to bud;
A brittle glass, that's broken presently.
A doubtful good, a glass, a glass, a flower,
Lost, faded, broken, dead within an hour.
And as goods lost are sold or never found,
As faded glass no rubbing will refresh:
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress.
So beauty blemish'd one, for ever lost,
In spite of paint, painting, pain, and cost.

XIV.

Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share.
She bade good night, that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descent on the dancing of a nevy.
Farewell, quoth she, and come again to-morrow:
Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.
Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
In scorn or friendship, nill I construe whether:—
't May be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
't May be, again to make me wander thiser;
"Wander," a word for shadows like thyself,
As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

XV.
Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!
My heart doth charge the watch, the morning rise
Both cite each moving sense from idle rest.
Not staring trust the office of mine eyes,
While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;
For she doth welcome day-light with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night:
The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight;
Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow;
For why? she sigh'd, and bade me come to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;
Yet not for me, sheio sun to succour flowers!
Pack night, peep day, good day, of night now borrow:
Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow.

XVI.
It was a lordling's daughter,
The fairest one of three,
That liked of her master
As well as well might be,
Till looking on an Englishman,
The fairest that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a turning.
Long was the combat doubtful,
That love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless,
Or kill the gallant knight:
To put in practice either,
Alas! it was a spite
Unto the silly damsel.
But one must be refused,
More mickle was the pain,
That nothing could be used,
To turn them both to gain;
For of the two the trusty knight
Was wounded with disdain:
Alas! she could not help it.
Thus art with arms contending
Was victor of the day,
Which by a gift of learning
Did bear the maid away;
Then hullaby, the learned man
Hath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

On a day (alack the day!)
Love, whose month was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover (sick to death)
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath,
Air (quoth he) thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas! my hand hath sworn
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
Thou for whom Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.

XVII.
My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss:
Love is dying,
Faith's defying,
Heart's denying,
Causer of this,
All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost (God wot):
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
There a nay is plac'd without remove,
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss:
O frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame!
For now I see
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
All fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorne me,
Living in thrall:
Heart is bleeding,
All help neading,
O cruel speceting!
Fraughted with gall!
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal,
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtail dog that wout to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
My sighs so deep,
Progress to weep,
In howling-wise, to see my doleful plight
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground,
Like a thousand vanquisht men in bloody fight!

1 an hour: in old eds. Steevens made the change; moon having the sense of month. 2 This is the first piece in the division of "The Passionate Pilgrim." 3 This poem, in a more complete state, and with the addition of two lines only found there, may be seen in "Love's Labour's Lost." This poem also printed in "England's Helicon," (sign. H) a miscellany of poetry, first published in 1600, (reprinted in 1612,) where "W. Shakespeare" is appended to it. 4 In "England's Helicon," 1600, this poem immediately follows "On a day (alack the day!)" but it is there entitled, "The unknown Shepherd's Complaint," and it is subscribed Ignote. Hence, we may suppose that the compiler of that collection knew that it was not by Shakespeare, although it had been attributed to him in "The Passionate Pilgrim," of the year preceding. It had appeared anonymously, with the music, in 1597, in a collection of Madrigals, by Thomas Weelkes. 5 "Love's denrying" in "England's Helicon." 6 "Heart's renying" in "England's Helicon." 7 Part. 8 Both editions of "The Passionate Pilgrim," have Wist for My, which last not only is necessary for the sense, but is confirmed as the true reading by Weelkes' Madrigals, 1597.
Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not
Forth their dye;¹
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully:
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled;
All our love is lost, for love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass,²
Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan³
Poor Coridon
Must live alone,
Other help for him I see that there is none.

XIX.*

When as thine eye hath chosen the dame,
And staid the deer that thou shouldst strike,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as partial fancy like:
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young, nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell;
A cripple soon can find a halt;
But plainly say thou lovest her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.²

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will clear ere night;
And then too late she will repent
That thus dispersed her delight;
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay,
Her feele force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,—
"Had women been so strong as men,
In faith you had not had it then."²

And to her will frame all thy ways:
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ring in thy lady's ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

¹ So both editions of "The Passionate Pilgrim," and "England's Helicon.
² "Loud belle ring not, Cheerfully.
³ "The Passionate Pilgrim," and "England's Helicon," both have love for lass, which the rhyme shows to be the true reading, as it stands in Wellesley's Madrigals, 1667. So "England's Helicon" and Wellesley's Madrigals: "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, has love for woman. In some modern editions, the stanza of this poem has been given in an order different to that in which they stand in "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599; to that order we restore them, and that text we follow, excepting where it is evidently corrupt. The line, "As well as partial fancy like," we have corrected by a manuscript of the time. The edition of 1599 reads: "As well as fancy party all might," which is decidedly wrong. Malone substituted "As well as fancy, partial taste." The manuscript by which we have corrected the fourth line of the stanza also gives the two last lines of it thus—
"Ask counsel of some other head.
Neither unwise nor yet unwed.
But no change from the old printed copy is here necessary. In the manuscript the whole has Shakespeare's initials at the end. So the manuscript in our possession: "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, has it, "She will not stick to round me on the ear." This poem, here incomplete, and what is called "Love's Answer," still more imperfect, may be seen at length in "Percy's Reliques," Vol. I. They belong to Christopher Nowes and Sir Walter Raleigh; the first is assigned by same to Marlowe, in "England's Helicon," 1669, sign A 2) and the last appears in the same collection, under the name of Ignoto, which was a signature sometimes adopted by Sir Walter Raleigh. They are, besides, assigned to both these authors in Watton's "Angles," (p. 146, edit. 1592) under the titles of "The milkmaid's song," and "The Milkmaid's Mother's Answer."
As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade,
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap and birds did sing,
Trees did grow and plants did spring;
Every thing did banish man,
Save the nightingale alone :
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefulls'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity.
Fie, fie, fie! now would she cry;
Tereu, Tereu! by and by;
That to hear her so complain
Scarce I could from tears refrain,
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Made me think upon mine own.
Ah! thought I, thou mourn'st in vain,
None takes pity on thy pain:
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee,
Ruthless bears they will not cheer thee.
King Pandion he is dead,
All thy friends are lapp'd in lead,
All thy fellow birds do sing,
Careless of thy sorrowing.

Whilst as fickle fortune smil'd,
Thou and I were both beguil'd:
Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find:
Every man will be thy friend,
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call,
And with such like flattering,
Pity in his ear:
If he be addict to vice,
Quickly him they will entice:
If to women he be bent,
They have him at commandement;
But if fortune once do frown,
Then, farewell his great renown:
They that fawn'd on him before
Use his company no more.
He that is thy friend indeed
Will help thee in thy need:
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
If thou wake, he cannot sleep:
Thus of every grief in heart,
He with thee does bear a part.
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering foe.

Let the bird of loudest lay,
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou shrieking harbinger,
Foul pre-currer of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,
To this troop come thou not near.

From this session interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feather'd king:
Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surprize white,
That defunctive music can,
Be the death-divining swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou, treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender mak'st
With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st;
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead;
Phœnix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd, as love in twain
Had the essence but in one;
Two distinct, division none:
Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt the turtle and his queen:
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine,
That the turtle saw his right
Flaming in the Phœnix' sight:
Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appall'd,
That the self was not the same;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was call'd.

Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together;
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded;

That it cry'd, how true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain.

1 This poem is contained in R. Barnfield's "Encomion of Lady Pecunia," 1598. It is also inserted in "England's Helicon," 1600, (H. 2) under the signature of Ignatius; but as Barnfield reprinted it as his, in 1605, there can be little doubt that he was the author of it.
2 "England's Helicon" here adds this couplet:—
   "Even so, poor bird, like thee,
   None alive will pity me."
3 This is the last poem in "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599. It is a separate production, both in subject and place, with a division between it and Barnfield's poem, which precedes it; nevertheless they have been incasently coupled in some modern editions.
4 This poem is printed, as we have given it, with the name of Shakespeare, in Robert Cheaster's "Love's Martyr, or Rosaline's Complaint," 1601. It occurs near the end, among what are called on the title-page, "new Compositions of several modern Writers, whose names are subscribed to their several Works."
Whereupon it made this threne,
To the Phœnix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOΣ.
Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here inclos'd in cinders lie.

Death is now the Phœnix' nest;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest.

Leaving no posterity:
'T was not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be;
Beauty brag, but 't is not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.

Wm. Shake-speare.

THE END.
